

ENOCH'S SCHEME FOR UNION STATION TOO LATE

Causes Discussion at the District Building.

SCHEME WELL UNDER WAY

Plan Spoken Of as an Ingenious One, But Mr. Macfarland Says Site Has Already Been Fixed.

James D. Enoch's views upon the new union station plans, published in Friday's Times, was the subject of much comment yesterday at the District Building.

Some said it was a pity that the suggestion had not been made as tersely and pointedly before the legislation in Congress had progressed to a point where it was next to impossible to change it.

Objections urged by Mr. Enoch with so much energy against the "Chinese wall" across the eastern portion of the city, of course, have been presented to the Commissioners and to Congress by several persons, and the engineers of the District have fought always against the closing of more streets that was necessary for the improvement.

They have hung with tenacity to the proposition of preserving H Street as an unobstructed highway through the station. They have declared they would give their sanction to no plan which would slice this street.

Commissioner Macfarland briefly gave his views on the subject. Mr. Enoch was an ingenious one, but that the proposition to build the station at Massachusetts Avenue had now gone so far it could not be changed.

Col. John Biddle, the Engineer Commissioner, said he believed that after the station and viaduct was completed and in operation the principal objection urged by property owners in that portion of the District would be seen to have been unwarranted.

PATENT OFFICE PLANS ELABORATE EXHIBIT

Leading Inventions of Age to Be Displayed.

PROFITING BY EXPERIENCE

At Former Expositions the Diminutive Models Shown Failed to Interest.

An elaborate exhibit, surpassing any hitherto undertaken, is being prepared at the Patent Office for the Louisiana Purchase Exhibition at St. Louis, in 1904.

From now until the opening of the fair, the officials of the bureau will be busily engaged in making plans for the extensive display. Commissioner Allen has directed the chiefs of the thirty-nine divisions, which have supervision over the 12,000 subclasses and embrace all known arts, to select and report to Assistant Commissioner Moore the leading inventions of the past century, which are likely to prove of interest to the visiting throngs.

A radical departure from the customary method of arranging exhibits will be made in the preparation of this. Instead of displaying the usual thousands of small models of the various important patents, the full-sized working devices will be shown, so that every intricate detail may be plainly set forth to the public.

That the exhibit will be of general interest is shown by the fact that it will include the display and demonstration of many inventions which have astounded the world. Chief among these will be an illustration of wireless telegraphy, explaining thoroughly this wonderful discovery. There will also be an illustration of photographing in colors, and an extensive exhibit of typesetting machines, the Gray teleautograph, the Royal telegraph, liquid air, mercerized cotton, and artificial silk.

The preparation of the exhibit will be in charge of Principal Examiner T. A. Witherspoon, and under the direction of the Commissioner and Assistant Commissioner. Mr. Witherspoon has had much experience in work of this nature, having been in charge of the exhibits at Omaha, Buffalo and Charleston. The office will be represented on the Government Board at the fair by Maj. E. M. Dawson, chief clerk of the Department of the Interior.

Hundreds of former sufferers in Washington and vicinity have been cured of consumption and asthma. Some of them were so badly off that their family physicians had given them up to die and had advised them to seek another climate, with the hope of extending their lives for a short while.

Physicians have long recognized that the old system of swallowing medicines into the stomach did not cure the disease. In fact, lung medicines are always so hard on the stomach that they discourage the digestive and nervous systems just at the time when the sufferer most needs all his bodily functions in their best working order.

CHILDREN DISCOVERED IN DRUNKEN STUPORS

Find Whisky in Car With Disastrous Results.

Thomas Jacobs, nineteen years old, son of Thomas J. Jacobs, a carpenter living at 437 Six-and-a-half Street, was arraigned in the Police Court yesterday morning on the charge of vagrancy.

When Judge Scott began taking the testimony, however, it developed that young Jacobs had procured some whisky Friday night and had proceeded to get all the boys of his neighborhood between the ages of eight and twelve years drunk. Six or eight of the boys and their mothers were in court to testify against Jacobs, and Policeman W. J. Kenny, who made the arrest, testified that two of the boys had been at the police station in a drunken stupor for three or four hours.

Five little fellows in knee trousers were put on the witness stand. They were Harry Clagetti, Harry Danforth, Gus Robinson, Willie Martinek, and Hamilton Schwing. Their testimony was that the whisky was found in a box car. It was turned over to Jacobs, who distributed the liquor with impartiality. The result was that soon the whole crowd was drunk.

Mr. Jacobs took the stand and testified that his son was a cripple, unable to work, but that he was able to take care of him. He also said that he had never known him to be under the influence of liquor. Judge Scott held that there had been no evidence to sustain the charge of vagrancy and discharged Jacobs.

"ALL SHE HAD IN WORLD"

JAILED DESPITE PLEA

"Please, judge, let him go. He is all I have in the world." This was the pathetic plea entered by Mrs. Mary Cleary in behalf of her son, Robert Cleary, who was arraigned in the Police Court yesterday on the charge of drunkenness and vagrancy. The evidence showed, however, that Cleary was not much of a comfort to the old mother, who was dependent on him for support, and Judge Scott thought she would be better off without him, and so sent Cleary to jail for thirty days in default of $10 fine.

ANNUAL MEETING OF THE AUDUBON SOCIETY

Preparations in Progress for Convention to Be Held on January 28 Next.

At an important meeting of the executive committee of the local Audubon Society last Thursday at the home of Mrs. Wallace Radcliffe, arrangements were completed for the annual meeting of the society. This will be held on January 28 in the lecture hall of the Columbian University, Fifteenth and H Streets, at 8:15 p. m. Wilmor Stone, of the Philadelphia Academy of Sciences, will be the principal speaker of the evening, and will give an illustrated lecture on the "Varied Plumage of Our Birds From Nesting to Adult."

Arrangements were also made for organizing classes in bird study. There will be a course of six lessons by a trained ornithologist on consecutive Saturdays beginning in April, four indoors at Miss Somers' school, and two in the field. A fee of $5 will be charged for the course. The matter is in charge of Mrs. Wallace Radcliffe, Jean E. Eddy, Anna S. King, and Mrs. Vernon Bailey.

It was decided to have three more members' meetings in the course of the season, one each in February, March, and April, and to provide for the usual weekly field meetings in May.

A committee was appointed to prepare a report giving a full history of the society from the date of its organization in 1887.

The local society has contributed $50 to the subscription fund for the employment of a clerk for the chairman of the national committee of Audubon societies.

At a convention held at Dallas, Tex., on December 17, 1902, to discuss means of fighting the Mexican boll-weevil, which is ruining the Texas cotton fields, Prof. H. P. Atwater, of Houston, delivered an address on bird protection. His remarks were received with frequent applause and resulted in the adoption of a resolution recommending the passage of a law by the Legislature of Texas "prohibiting the wanton destruction of insectivorous birds."

In the past legislative year two States—Kentucky and Ohio—adopted the model bird protection law of the American Ornithologists' Union; Congress adopted it for Alaska, and Canada put it in effect in the Northwest Territories. The last two laws, with a similar one already in force in Manitoba, give practically complete and uniform protection to non-game birds throughout the region north of the United States, and west of Hudson Bay, with the exception of British Columbia.

A most comprehensive game law, which includes the model bird-protection law, has been drafted for Missouri by the Missouri Audubon Society, and will be introduced at the present session of the Legislature of that State. August Reaser, secretary of the Missouri Audubon Society, addressed the State Horticultural Society of Springfield, Mo., concerning the need for game and bird protection legislation, with the result that a committee was appointed by the society to consider the "Audubon bird, game, and fish bill." This committee reported that the bill is most sensible, practical, and effective. The society voted unanimously to become a life member of the Audubon Society, and passed a resolution urging its members throughout the State to use their influence to secure the adoption of the proposed law.

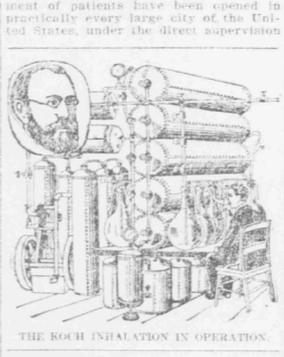

The Audubon Society organized in North Carolina March 11, 1902, now numbers 788 members, and has formed six branch societies in graded schools. It is making a strong effort to secure the passage of a suitable bird protection law by the Legislature, which is in session this month, to replace the incomplete laws now in force in North Carolina.

A book on the birds of Oregon and Washington, written by the Rev. William R. Lord, the Oregon society's delegate to the recent meeting in this city of the national committee, has been placed on the list for supplementary reading in the public schools of Oregon by the State text book commission. The Oregon society was organized July 1, 1902, chiefly through the efforts of Mr. Lord.

The membership of the Wisconsin Audubon Society has now reached a total of 18,000. HENRY OLDY.
