

EPISCOPALIANS SLOW IN MISSIONARY WORK

wilderness of Canada, which seemed almost hopeless at first, but where results now show nine dioceses, where there at first was but one, and 300 clergy, where there were only twenty. Alongside of the problem of teaching the Indians, now looms the even greater problem of converting the thousands of immigrants who are now entering the great North-west.

Thanks for Local Bishop.

Bishop Tuttle here took occasion to thank the Bishop of Washington for his great services to the conference and his hospitality to the bishops. He included the people of Washington, the clergy, the children, and the Marine Band in his thanks. He then introduced the last speaker, Archbishop Nuttal, of the West Indies, who spoke on the "Missionary Promise."

"It is the promise of the Divine Saviour," he said, "Think for a moment, how great is the power of God. His was the creating work, it is His hand that moves the machinery of the universe. To convert the world would seem an impossible enterprise. It was not for the Lord's backing, St. Paul was one of the greatest of missionaries. His realization of his weakness made his work more effective. Don't hesitate to take up God's work because you are weak. Physical conditions must, of course, be reckoned with. God needs not the strong, not the weakest. If, however, the Lord calls you to work, he will give you the time to do it well."

From Two Extremes.

"I come from the Arctic North; my brother, who has just addressed you, is from the torrid South. But there is one bond that united us all—the love of Jesus Christ."

"What means the drawing together of the Anglo-Saxon races? Does it merely mean that the King of one country and the President of another are good and far-seeing men? It means that the teachings of Jesus Christ are going to reign upon this earth."

The final prayer and benediction were pronounced by Bishop Tuttle.

Resolutions Adopted.

At the final business session of the Pan-American conference yesterday the following resolutions were adopted:

"The bishops of the Anglican communion in America, who are assembled in the All-American conference of bishops at Washington, have considered among many important matters the subject of its relation and attitude toward the churches of the Roman obedience."

"Assured of our rights and responsibilities as a true and a living part of the Holy Catholic Church, with unbroken succession and authority from our head through His first apostles, we feel that our attitude should be that of clear and outspoken consciousness of our catholicity alone in the maintenance of the ancient creeds and in our possession of apostolic order."

"That, while no witness can be borne for truth without antagonizing error, whether of excess or defect, this earnest contention for the faith once delivered to the saints should be with unlimited charity to the Roman Catholic clergy and people, rather in the spirit of maintenance, defense and proof than of controversy and attack."

Our New Possessions.

"That the right of this church to enter countries where there are churches subject to the Roman obedience, such as the Philippines, Porto Rico, Honolulu, Cuba, Mexico, and Brazil, rests partly on the necessity of ministering to its own people in these countries, and partly on the duty to give the privileges of the church to Christian people deprived of them unless they submit to unlawful terms of communion."

"That we should be more ready and outspoken than we have been in teaching our young people in our congregations as to the important matters on which there is difference between the Roman church and ourselves, and in guarding them against being misled."

"That we most earnestly urge that in the case of marriages between members of our own church and those of the Roman Church, our own members should be warned by no means to promise, as they will be asked to do, that their children shall be brought up in the faith and worship of the Roman Church."

Attitude to Protestants.

The attitude of the Episcopal Church toward the Protestant communions around her, was set forth in the following resolution adopted by the conference:

"Resolved, The bishops present in the all-American conference held in the city of Washington, having had under discussion the attitude of the church to which they belong toward the Protestant communions around them, have been aroused anew to the manifold evils of that unhappy condition of disunion within the church of Christ, with which we are everywhere confronted today."

Points of Difference.

"While ardently desiring the co-operation of all Protestant communions, yet having regard to the paper read before us by the bishop-coadjutor of Montreal, as to the points of agreement and disagreement (and especially the former) between our Presbyterian and Methodist brethren and ourselves, we would respectfully suggest to the general convention of the United States, the general synod of Canada, and the synod of the West Indies, the advisability of constituting committees to lay before the general assembly and the general conference the contents of that paper, and to invite them to take such other steps as to them may be deemed best to draw the attention of the several congregations to them."

"We would also affectionately commend this whole matter to the earnest consideration of the Protestant communions, and ask them to consider it seriously, with a view to its settlement."

THE STRANGE CASE OF A FOOLISH PARTRIDGE SAT IN JUDGMENT ON THE "SMOKE" CAT

IVY MOORE, ACTRESS Expected Protection of the Present Closed Season.

Papers Say Washington Girl Has Eloped.

FAMILY HERE ARE RETICENT Young Woman's Mother Is Satisfied, Saying Merely Her Daughter Has Left Stage.

The New York and Boston papers are full of the mysterious disappearance of Miss Ivy Lee Moore, an actress, from the Fay Templeton company while the latter was playing in Boston Friday night.

In the dispatches and local reports Miss Moore was credited with being the daughter of Prof. Willis L. Moore, Chief of the Weather Bureau. While this is not true, Miss Moore is a Washington girl, the daughter of Lester D. Moore, a clerk in the office of the Auditor for the Postoffice Department. The Moore home is at 507 Second Street northwest.

There is a brother, Lester D. Moore, jr., a salesman in a leading department store, and a sister, Berenice, of the Bureau of Engraving and Printing, and the father and mother.

Miss Moore early manifested a desire for the stage, and, despite parental objections, some years ago made her debut as a member of the chorus of a leading company. She is a young woman of marked personal beauty, charm, and good voice, and speedily bettered her position.

Was in "The Runaways." With the opening of the present season Miss Moore accepted an engagement with the Fay Templeton company, assisting in the production of "The Runaways." She made a permanent hit in her rendition of Arthur Dunn's catchy song, "A Kiss for Each Day in the Week."

All was going serenely until Friday night, when it was time for her to appear in the performance. Her cue was given, but no Miss Moore responded. Then it developed that she was neither at the theater nor at the hotel. The company was playing to crowded houses in Boston. It was at first surmised that she had been suddenly called to New York, but inquiry at her home at 121 West Forty-first Street developed no trace of her. Then it was that the door gossips began to connect Miss Moore's name with that of a wealthy New Yorker, grandson of a famous inventor, who, it was said, had long been infatuated with the capricious beauty. He, too, had disappeared, and it was whispered that the two had left for Europe and were married, or were shortly to be. A Miss Eulah Lee, formerly a member of the "Chinese Honeymoon" company, was named as the chaperon.

The manager of the Fay Templeton Company admitted to the press that Miss Moore's departure was "unaccounted for," and that by leaving she did she had broken her contracts, and that her trunks would be held by the company as a part of the forfeit for the broken contracts. As to why or where she had gone, he professed complete ignorance.

Family Well Informed. Yesterday a reporter for The Times called at the Moore home. He was received by Mrs. Moore, who expressed no surprise at the call.

"Yes, we know all about Ivy Lee's disappearance," she said, with a smile which dispelled any thought that the knowledge was accompanied by regret or worry. In fact, the mother frankly admitted that the "disappearance" met with her hearty approval.

"I was always opposed to her going on the stage, and I am more than delighted that she has left it. Yes, she has left it for good; she will never return."

"Do you know her present whereabouts?" she was asked. "Certainly," was the reply. "Is she at home?" "No," smiling; "she is not at home."

"Is she in Washington?" "No; she is not in Washington."

"Have you read the press dispatches about her disappearance?" "No; what have they been saying?"

Has Only Left the Stage. When the gist of these was made known to her Mrs. Moore laughed heartily and said:

"I'm not going to tell you anything more about it yet; but I will say that my daughter has not been persecuted by the too ardent suit of any millionaire admirer; that she has not run away from anybody, and that she has had no trouble with her company. She did not run away at all; she merely informed her managers that she was going to quit the stage, and she promptly did so. It will all be given to the public at the proper time."

When pressed as to whether or not her daughter had left the stage to marry, Mrs. Moore would neither deny nor affirm, but only laughed and reiterated her statement that the public would be informed at the proper time. The thing mainly evident was that the mother was not displeased at the course her daughter had taken, and had had no worry about her.

MISTAKEN IN THE HUNTER HIS REPORT WITHHELD

Wagaretti Blazed Away, and Must Answer for Mistake of Keeping Game Bird.

Joseph Wagaretti was the man behind the gun in the Giesboro woods yesterday afternoon, and an unwise partridge was in front of it. Joseph is twenty-one years old, and lives on Canal Street southwest. The partridge was about five months old, a strapping young fellow, and lived in the underbrush of the woods.

There is no question as to the accidental nature of the meeting between the two, which resulted fatally to the partridge. Joseph was looking for reed-birds and orioles, knowing that the close season for partridge does not expire until November 1. The fault was all with the bird.

Flew to Meet Bullet. Just as Joseph approached a clump where it was hiding, the foolish bird, with a great whirr of wings, sprang up in front of the hunter. The natural consequence, when one has a loaded gun, is "all birds look alike." Joseph was a good shot, and the partridge died a natural death from a gunshot wound.

The bird being dead, Joseph did not like to leave him for the muskrats to devour, but thought a decent burial, nicely broiled, on a toast coffin, was the least he could do to retrieve his error. He therefore put him in his game bag.

Policeman Heard the Shot. All would have been well, had it not been for the obtrusive curiosity of Policeman McCormick, of the Anacostia substation, who had heard the shot from near the St. Elizabeth Insane Asylum. He walked down to meet the hunter.

"What luck?" he asked. "Poor," was the reply. "Only a reed-bird or two."

"Let's see," and the inquisitive policeman pulled open the bag. There, at last, at rest, cut off in the flower of his youth, lay the partridge.

Must Answer Now. Explanations were of no avail, and Joseph was promptly marched off to the police station.

There a charge of violating the game laws of the District was preferred against him, and he will have an opportunity to tell the judge all about tomorrow. It is said the partridge will be the principal witness.

SOCIETY BELLE WEARS UNIFORM OF COWBOY

CHICAGO, Oct. 24.—After working as a cowboy and earning $2.50 a day for her labors, during which time she wore trousers, Mrs. Pearl Trude, daughter-in-law of Attorney A. S. Trude, a woman whose beauty and wit have made her one of the reigning favorites of Chicago society, and a horsewoman without a peer in the West, has returned to her home at 490 Drexel Boulevard.

Mr. McLean has taken the auto away from the custom house, but the cat is still held there. It is receiving the best of treatment, and Miss Burritt visits the custom house twice a day to see that it is not abused or badly fed.

A large number of Miss Burritt's friends have become interested in the case and they declare she is being persecuted. They allege that another cat fancier, because of professional jealousy, urged the customs official to cause the feline's arrest and arraignment.

FOR CUSTOMS SURVEYOR

ASSISTANT SECRETARY ARMSTRONG OF THE TREASURY DEPARTMENT, YESTERDAY RECEIVED A DISPATCH, SAYING ISAAC K. ROSS, DEPUTY SURVEYOR OF CUSTOMS AT PITTSBURGH, HAD BEEN SENTENCED TO ONE YEAR IN PRISON FOR EMBEZZLEMENT OF CUSTOMS FUNDS.

The disclosures concerning Ross were made about three weeks ago. It was found he had been appropriating funds which came into the office late in the day, when there was no one else about. He is alleged to have taken about $5,000. Of this, $2,200 was recovered, through information given the officials by Mrs. Ross. When arraigned, Ross pleaded guilty, and his case was disposed of speedily.

SUED BY PUBLISHERS.

Saks & Company

The Readiness of Our Clothing Stock.

The minute preparation and manifest excellence of the Saks-Clothing makes it a service to be depended upon for every Clothes want. The best source of supply and not a "port in an emergency." The Business Suit and the Dresser Suit; the Prince Albert and the Full Dress; the Top Coat, the Rain Coat, the Trousers, and the Waistcoats—all are in full and complete variety.

We go farther than to clothe—we dress—a distinction and a difference; a contrast from the service that's rendered anywhere else as marked as the merits of the Clothing itself. Styles are presented simultaneously here and at the highest-grade tailors. The John Drew Cutaway is a notable recent illustration. This Coat is a year old this fall. A year ago it was on the latest fashion plate and in our stock. It's getting its first presentation by the trade generally now as "something new."

It cannot be otherwise. Conditions position us for our more prompt and superior service. We make up as our long experience dictates. Others must wait until the cumbersome wheels of trade are turned by demand. We present styles. OUR SERVICE IS INITIATIVE; NOT IMITATIVE. Making only for your supply we can take the pains, give the attention to detail, study the individual and personal requirements that mean satisfaction. Nothing is lacking; NOTHING IS SHORT OF PERFECTION.

Our prices represent value; they have no control over the character of our making. The cheapest Suit and Top Coat we sell is rightly made, is correct fitting, is properly fashioned.

We hold the $15 grade of both Suits and Top Coats up to frequent close inspection, for it's a popular price, and we've made it such a strong grade because it is. The enormous variety at $15 alone almost equals an ordinary stock in numbers. Materially it is on a par with any $18 and $20 values about us; artistically it is matchless anywhere else at any price. If $15 is about what you had in mind to pay for a Fall Suit or a Top Coat, ours will exceed your expectations. If you have thought of paying more, as necessary to satisfaction, our $15 grade can save you the difference.
