

master General, was recalled to testify to free delivery expenditures. The statement filled ten typewritten pages, and Mr. Wynne was examined until it could be examined by counsel for the defense.

Bondsman on Stand.
Emmanuel Splich, bookkeeper in the rural free delivery division, and on March 16, 1902, identified a draft dated April 16, 1902. On that date he was given a check on Mrs. Lorenz for $250 and $120 in cash, to purchase a New York draft for $370. He indorsed the draft merely as an accounting, and on March 16, 1902, there was nothing secret or suspicious about the transaction.

Daniel P. Cahill, of the auditor's office of the Chicago postoffice, identified a letter from Machen to the Chicago postmaster, eight days old, ordering the installation of Groff fasteners in the city. Mr. Taggart said it was to show the personal interest of Machen in the sale of the fasteners. The defense objected on the ground the matter was irrelevant.

Justice Fritchard admitted the letter, it was dated in 1896 and called for $4,200 worth of the fasteners at $1.50 each. It bore Machen's initials.

Fasteners in Storage.
R. P. Dietrich, clerk in the Chicago postoffice, who had charge of putting up the Groff fasteners, was the next witness. He testified to the arrival of the $4,200 worth of fasteners in his office. About 500 were used when putting up new and exchanging old boxes. The others remained in the cellar of the postoffice until 1901. What became of them he did not know.

On cross-examination witness said 2,800 fasteners were received and there were about 2,900 boxes in the city. He received no order to put the fasteners on boxes already up. Thought the fasteners were not put on because of a lack of the necessary mechanical force. The 2,800 remaining were sent to other points. There are about 1,700 Groff fasteners in use in Chicago now.

Boxes already equipped with the Groff device began to reach Chicago in 1901. Machen did not interfere with the gradual installation. The Groff fastener was satisfactory in every case except on poles that taper. There was no expense in maintaining the Groff fastener.

Knew of No Request.
On redirect examination, witness said he knew of no request upon Washington for the fasteners.

J. B. White, clerk in the office of the Auditor for the Postoffice Department, produced papers authorizing the Chicago postmaster to expend not more than $4,200 for 2,800 Groff fasteners.

Charles W. McWhorter, a clerk in the Washington postoffice, identified an order of July 5, 1895, for 1,000 Groff fasteners, at $1.50 each, for the city postoffice. Machen's initials on the order were admitted.

Dodged the Bible.
A. T. Smith, superintendent of city delivery in the Brooklyn, N. Y., postoffice, dodged the Bible in taking the oath. It was drawn to Justice Fritchard's attention, and he ordered the oath to be administered again, witness holding the Bible in his hand.

SUTTON IS CONTENT WITH RIVER CONDITIONS
Harbormaster Believes There Is No Danger of a Flood While Fog Lasts.

There is little danger of a flood in the Potomac at this point, despite reports of a heavy rise in the river from points farther up stream.

Cumberland dispatches indicate an ice gorge at that point, and rapidly rising water in consequence. As a result the city and county authorities have cooperated to blow up the gorge with dynamite, to relieve the pressure.

When Harbormaster Sutton was made acquainted with the conditions on the upper river, he explained the situation by saying that this did not mean an extra flow of water, but the obstruction of the regular flow by the formation of the ice gorge, and insisted that these circumstances would have no effect here, whether they succeeded in backing up the gorge or not.

Commodore Sutton is confident there is no immediate danger of a flood here. The presence of a fog, he declares, is directly opposed to such danger, in that it disintegrates the ice gradually. Inasmuch as he will be mainly responsible for conditions when a flood does come, his judgment in this case is accepted as sound.

The Etelle Randall this morning resumed her daily trips to Glymont, Md., after staying off for several days. The tug Gibson will also resume her trips to Fort Washington this afternoon. The Norfolk steamer came in on time this morning. Altogether, in the opinion of men on duty at the wharves, river conditions are favorable.

MRS. DEWEY HELD FOR HEARING HERE

Detective Patrick O'Brien returned this morning from Springfield, Mass., where he went to appear against Mrs. George G. Dewey, wanted in Washington on the charge of passing worthless checks for $150 on Lansburgh & Bro., and another for $28.00 on the Metropolitan Hotel. Mrs. Dewey had a hearing before United States Commissioner Price, who ordered her turned over to the local authorities.

SEEKS TO AMEND THE CORPORATION LAW

Wadsworth offered an amendment to require company bonds, but this was voted down by the committee. Colonel Biddle explained that at a later date he would ask for a consideration of a measure providing the responsibility of bondsmen in case of the death of a contractor. He cited a specific instance over which a controversy had arisen in this matter. Insanitary Buildings. The subcommittee having under consideration the bill providing for the removal of insanitary buildings reported, and there was a further discussion of its provisions. Mr. Morrell thought the owner of property demolished by order

SCORE METHODS IN POLICE COURT

Conference of Charities Takes Up Subject.

MAKING ARRESTS REWARDED

Preponderance of Negro Offenders Said to Be Due to Environment in Which They Live.

"Colored offenders and the Police Court" was the subject of the discussion yesterday at the bi-weekly meeting of the conference class of the Associated Charities, at the headquarters, 811 G Street northwest. The speakers were to have been Judge Charles F. Scott, of the Police Court; Justice of the Peace Emmanuel M. Hewlett, and Attorney James P. Cobb, but, owing to his rheumatism, Judge Scott was unable to attend, sending his regrets.

The first address was by Mr. Cobb, who frankly admitted that he had no Police Court practice, but said he was in the habit of going there to investigate conditions.

Criticizes the System.
Mr. Cobb attacked the system and practice of making the Police Court self-supporting, and thought the same motives which had caused the abolition of the fee system in justice of the peace courts should operate to do away with the present system. It was his opinion that this plan had a tendency, especially with reference to the negroes, to cause unnecessary arrests and convictions. As an evidence of this, he cited the boast that this was the only branch of the Government which was self-sustaining. He also thought there should be organized in Washington a prison for society similar to those in New York and Chicago, the object of which is to furnish legal counsel for poor prisoners. As negroes are seldom in a financial position to employ counsel, Mr. Cobb thought they would be the main beneficiaries.

Mr. Cobb expressed a desire to know if there did not exist a tendency to ward police courts the number of arrests made in the course of a year. There was no one present who could answer, but the chairman, Secretary Weller, called attention to the scheduled visit to Police Headquarters on Saturday, January 20, at which time this and other questions could be propounded to Major Sylvester, Mr. Cobb, continuing, frankly stated that he thought many arrests were made among negroes where the offender should be reprimanded and sent home.

Conditions in Alleys.
Judge Hewlett took the stand that the frequent appearance of negroes in the Police Court was due almost entirely to the lack of proper environment in their alley homes, and that it was up to the reformer to change these conditions as the only solution. He quoted Lombroso, the originator of the science of criminology, to the effect that all children are naturally criminals, and took the position that negroes largely remain children all their lives, and thus the criminal tendency is not eradicated. He dwelt upon the slum conditions, and advocated the same policy now being pressed before the District Committee and in Congress, for the condemnation and abolition of our most disreputable sections.

Judge Hewlett also called attention to the fact that our slums are almost entirely populated by negroes, and that in all comparisons between this and other cities, the negroes should be set against the slum population, of whatever nationality, of the other communities.

Chairman Weller made a brief talk, confining himself to the point that before offering any criticism on methods in vogue, it was the duty of those interested in the betterment of the race to see that environment and existing conditions be alleviated in every possible way.

Short talks were made by Mrs. Mary Church Terrell and Mrs. Sara Collins Fernandez, themselves negroes, and interested in the betterment of their race.

BOTH MINISTERS MAY RETIRE FROM OFFICE

Rumors to That Effect Circulated Today Concerning Buchanan and Bunau-Varilla.

It is rumored at the State Department that Mr. Buchanan, United States minister to Panama, will give up that post as soon as the canal treaty is ratified. It is admitted at the department that Mr. Buchanan has asked for leave as soon as treaty negotiations are completed, and it is believed that both he and Senator Bunau-Varilla will make way for other ministers as soon as their important task is accomplished.

Minister Bunau-Varilla called at the State Department this morning and had a short conference with Assistant Secretary Loomis.

WOMAN'S DEATH WAS ACCIDENTAL

Coroner So Decides in Case of Mary Waller.

Lying on a couch on her side with a magazine firm clamped in her hand, the body of Miss Mary Waller was found in her room in a boarding house on New York avenue yesterday. From a jet on the wall gas poured freely into the room. The woman had been dead some time.

Miss Waller was employed in the Bureau of Engraving and Printing. She was about thirty-five years of age, and had been employed there for seven years, coming to Washington from Baltimore. She had boarded with Mrs. Mary Cavanaugh, at 1224 New York avenue, for only about three weeks. Since drawing her pay on January 15, she had not returned to work, pleading neuralgia. She was last seen on Wednesday, and Thursday she was heard stirring in her room.

Gas Turned On.
In going through the upper hallway yesterday, Mrs. Cavanaugh noticed the odor of gas. Discovering a jet in the hall partly turned on, she supposed this the source of the odor, and after turning it off thought no more about it. It was still more overpowering. This time she had no difficulty in tracing it to the room of Miss Waller. Calls and knockings failing to bring a response, she looked over the transom and saw the body on the bed. Policeman Charlton broke down the door. As the woman was dead, there was nothing to do but call the Coroner.

In investigating the death Coroner Nevitt found that the room contained a gas pipe with two jets, and from the position of the body on the bed, and other circumstances, he came to the conclusion that she had turned one on while turning the other off. He gave a certificate of accidental death.

Only One Relative.
As Miss Waller had been at her last boarding house but three weeks, her family connections were not known. It was only by the publication in a morning paper that her aunt, and only living relative, so far as known, Mrs. Kate H. Page, of 809 Ninth Street northwest, learned of the death. This morning Mrs. Page called at the morgue, and assumed charge of the remains, which she will have buried here.

FORAKER TAKS PRESIDENT

But Denies Discussing Ohio Wrangle.

WHO WILL WIN RECOGNITION

Problem Furnishes Topic of Consideration at White House—What the Outcome Means.

Whether the President has determined to give recognition to the friends of Senator Foraker as the Administration supporters in Ohio was the main topic of discussion about the White House this morning.

Senator Foraker, who is just back from Ohio, was one of the first callers at the White House. He did not remain with the President long, but hurried away in his carriage after chat of a few minutes. He was evidently in high spirits.

"Subject Not Discussed."
"Has the President determined to sanction your movement to obtain an Ohio delegation instructed for him?" he was asked.

"That subject was not discussed this morning," was the reply. "I saw the President for but a few minutes, and only to take up some minor matters. I am aware that subject is being much discussed in the newspapers just now."

Test of Recognition.
It is believed that a more extended conference between the President and Senator Foraker will be held. It is said the test of the President's recognition of Foraker will come on the appointment by the President of certain of the Senator's friends to Federal positions.

If the President sanctions the Foraker movement it will mean the bitterest sort of a factional fight in Ohio for an anti-Hannan delegation instructed for Roosevelt.

PITTSBURG ENDANGERED BY RISING WATERS

Rivers Threaten to Cause the Greatest Flood in Years—Heavy Ice Begins to Move.

PITTSBURG, Jan. 22.—This city is threatened with the worst flood in years. The heavy ice is moving. In all parts of the Pittsburgh district the rivers are rising.

The Allegheny, Monongahela and Youghiogheny Rivers are putting out their ice and this afternoon and tomorrow morning will see a great part of it passing Pittsburgh. It is believed that Pittsburgh will see the great flood within the next twenty-four hours.

The crest of the flood may not reach here before tomorrow night or Sunday morning, however. Even now the water is rising at a rate of one foot in two days. Very little ice is passing Pittsburgh as yet.

The shores of both the Allegheny and Monongahela Rivers are lined for miles with loaded and empty craft, and despite all precautions taken considerable damage can hardly be averted. The Ohio is rising at all points between Pittsburgh and Cairo, and considerable damage is already reported.

During the month there was a loss of $8,567, occasioned by 111 fires. The total material loss for the month was $1,200,000, or 4.5 per cent of the total insurance on the property—$285,600.

Chief Belt reports further that 525 mercantile houses, including theaters and hotels, were inspected in December, and in all but a few cases structures were found to be in good order for protection against fire.
