

PROF. PHILLIPS IS MADE DEAN Announced at Columbian Graduation Exercises.

HEADS MEDICAL BUREAU CLOSES TOMORROW AT SIX Degree Awarded to Medics and Dentists—Prize Winners Announced.

In the flower-decked and well-filled auditorium of the National Theater, fifty-two graduates from the School of Medicine and twenty from the School of Dentistry of the Columbian University were graduated last night.

On the same occasion announcement was made that Prof. William F. R. Phillips had been advanced to the deanship of the medical department.

The stage was occupied by the faculties of the two schools, Dr. Philip Moxam, of Springfield, Mass., who delivered the baccalaureate sermon Sunday, by President Needham, and by the speaker of the evening, Prof. H. W. Wiley, of the Agricultural Department.

Prof. Wiley was simply presented by President Needham, after the invocation by Rev. James Macbride, and spoke upon the progress of the medical art.

The physician of the past was described as the magician and medicine man, the empiric and the rationalist. The physician of the present is the general practitioner, the specialist and the health officer. The quick, the charlatan, and the nostrum were defined and termed the foes of scientific medicine.

Prof. Wiley enlarged upon the growing preponderance of preventive medicine, the influence on the physician of the future, who, he said, will be the herald and exponent of prophylaxis, teaching the principles of public hygiene, attached to schools as well as to hospitals, and paid for health rather than disease.

He urged the importance of physicians taking a more prominent part in public affairs, particularly in legislation relating to matters concerning the public health, and said the physician should go into politics in order to take his place in the State and national lawmaking bodies.

Diplomas Presented. The diplomas were presented to the graduates by Prof. William F. R. Phillips, acting for the medical school, and Dean Lewis for the dental. Those to receive the degree of doctor of medicine were:

KING EDWARD RECEIVES MAHAN OF AMERICAN NAVY

LONDON, May 31.—King Edward received Captain Mahan, United States Navy (retired), in private audience yesterday afternoon. His majesty expressed his deep appreciation of the captain's contributions to the naval history of the world.

The King held a brilliant levee in the morning. Five Americans, including George W. Tomes, Jr., and William Barclay Parsons, were presented.

After the levee the King received in audience the Alake of Abeokuta (Upper Guinea), a picturesque West African potentate, who has left his country for the first time in his life. The British government has agreed to buy all the Alake's Lagos cotton for three years.

Father's Mania to Slay Proves Irresistible Kills His Daughter Preparatory to Another Murder—Calmly Told Story of Crime to the Police.

PARIS, May 31.—An extraordinary psychological study is afforded by a crime just committed here. One Henri Morillon, a widower, who came from Madagascar six years ago, lived with his daughter Louise in the Rue de Paradis, and was for the most part contented of men and the fondest of fathers, but occasionally he would give way to fits of rage, shake his fist at imaginary tormentors, and frighten Louise out of her wits. After such an outburst he would weep bitterly and be kinder than ever.

Last night at 11 o'clock Morillon presented himself at the police depot of St. Denis.

"Arrest me," he said. "I have committed a crime."

At his request several officers accompanied him to his home. Morillon led the way to his daughter's bedroom, where lay the girl with a bullet wound in her temple and another in her neck.

The father, with the calmness of despair, told the story of the crime.

"Like every man who lived in the colonies, I have suffered from fever. This has made me value lightly my life and that of others."

"For a year past I have felt the longing to kill some one. Every body worried me—the cabmen, omnibus conductors, newspaper sellers, but principally cabmen."

"I wished to kill a cabman, and bought a revolver for sixty francs to this end."

"But not! I thought if I commit this crime my child will be exposed to the world's scorn as the child of an assassin. I therefore persuaded myself that I ought to make away with Louise, so that she might not survive the crime which fate compelled me to commit."

With a break in his voice he told how he had murdered the girl as she slept.

"I was in my garden. Every one of the plants had been turned up by the truder, who turned out to be Dawson. The flowers had been gathered in an immense bunch which required two arms to hold."

"Going to give them to my wife, you know," said Dawson. "We had met the trapper of soldiers who had been on the streets and this is a forerunner of what's to come."

HE IS A MILIONAIRE Insane Workman Buys Diamonds and Has His Teeth Extracted—Roots Up Neighbor's Flowers.

HEMPSTEAD, L. I., May 31.—Robert Dawson, who has been working for some time as a blacksmith for members of the Meadow Brook Hunt Club, has become insane, and imagines he has $10,000.00. He decided to give up a life at the forge and left for Hempstead.

He went to several stores and told the proprietors that he had fallen heir to a very large fortune in England, where he formerly lived.

The goods he asked for were at once ordered. Among the things he ordered were two diamond rings, a handsome gold watch, gold eyeglasses and some of the best suits of clothing.

As he was being fitted for one of the suits Dawson noticed the American needed attention, and decided at once to have two of the finest sets that could be purchased and at the same time to do away with toothache forever.

He went to a dentist. "Pull them all out and give me the best sets I can buy, and I have plenty of money for them."

The dentist did as he was told and out came all of Dawson's teeth. Now the dentist is wondering where his pay is coming from.

This morning P. Berg noticed a man in his front garden. Every one of the plants had been turned up by the truder, who turned out to be Dawson. The flowers had been gathered in an immense bunch which required two arms to hold.

"Going to give them to my wife, you know," said Dawson. "We had met the trapper of soldiers who had been on the streets and this is a forerunner of what's to come."

DIES AS GRAVE OF HERO IS WREATHED Widow, About to Be Dispossessed, Expires.

STARVATION, SAYS DOCTOR Tried to Live on $6 Pension—Home Overlooked Tomb of Warrior Husband.

NEW YORK, May 31.—While the band played a dirge and colors were furled in Trinity Cemetery yesterday and the members of the John A. Dix Post, Grand Army of the Republic, watched by thousands, decorated the graves of the soldier dead, the widow of one of those whose grave was being decorated, homeless and an inmate of a charity ward, lay dying in Lincoln Hospital, not far away.

The $6 a month pension which she drew from the Government as a soldier's widow was her sole means of support, and it was scarce enough to furnish food for the aged woman and the little fox terrier, her friend and companion.

Was Dispossessed From Home. When the soldier's widow was taken from her home at 1832 Amsterdam Avenue, where she had rented a room with a window facing upon the cemetery that she might be near and look out upon the grave of her husband, it was supposed to be for the non-payment of rent for the month of May was found in her room. A few hours later City Marshal Kingsley appeared at the house and threw into the street the bit of furniture, a few books and pictures that were the only possessions of Mrs. Elizabeth Epps, sixty-six years old, the widow of the soldier who fought for the preservation of the Union.

The scanty bit of furniture remained in the street, and yesterday cheering crowds passed it by while they cried, "God bless the boys in blue," and to those looking from the cemetery where the graves were being decorated, the roomful of furniture piled on the curb on the opposite side of the street had no meaning.

Starved, Says Doctor. "Starvation" was the doctor's answer to a question of the cause of death when the old lady, with the bands playing and the crowds cheering when the steady tramp of soldiers was heard upon the streets and the last and her withered frame relaxed to rest.

Coroner Berry was notified of the death and also heard that Mrs. Epps had been dispossessed by City Marshal Kingsley, who acts as an agent for the landlord, Joseph H. McGuire. The case was once started in an investigation, thinking that "violence might have been used in ejecting her."

He found, however, that the woman had been removed to the hospital before the furniture was thrown into the street, and that beyond the pale of law, the dispossessed notice was a heart wound, and that beyond the pale of law.

Husband in Cemetery. None of the neighbors knew anything of Mrs. Epps' husband, as she only moved to the neighborhood after his death. They only knew that he had been a soldier in the civil war, and was buried in the cemetery across the street. No friends came to visit the widow in her little room.

Mrs. Epps' last request was that she be buried beside her husband, and that the neighbors take care of her little dog. The latter wish has been observed, but unless some friends appear to supply the money for her burial in Trinity Cemetery, her body will not be beside that of her husband, but will be interred in potter's field.

DRUGGIST ADVISES WATER TO INCREASE WEIGHT Applicant for Engineer's Berth Has Time of His Life to Pick Up Four Pounds.

CHICAGO, May 31.—Thomas T. Walsh, who must gain four pounds by Friday so that he may qualify for engineer in the fire department, is cast down. He began the struggle Friday to make his four pounds in 10 pounds. Yesterday morning he weighed 128, but last night he was only 137.

All day long his friends who had read the story of his race against time and underweight kept offering well meant advice that in some cases was rejected.

"Water is the thing," said the druggist. "Drink enough water and you'll gain. A pint of water weighs a pound. Drink eight pints just before you get on the scales, and you'll get the job."

He ate meat three times a day, baked potatoes, chicken soup, home-made bread and butter, with sweet milk.

The Walsh home is the Mircea of an "old-be-thin" cure, breakfast food manufacturers, and health doctors. Mrs. Walsh, the mother, is losing weight from the anxiety the doctor had often, and the neighbors say the performance is almost as good as a circus.

bullet of lover does NOT STOP A WEDDING Herbert Pond Begins Service for Crime as Jessie Smith Marries William Schupp.

MIDDLETOWN, N. Y., May 31.—In Sing Sing prison beginning his term of ten years for attempting to take the life of Jessie L. Smith, his sweetheart, Herbert L. Pond, may soon hear of the girl's marriage, and friends fear that the news may affect his mind. In view of this fact, it is possible the news will be kept from him.

Previous to November 14 last Pond had been attentive to Miss Smith, the attractive daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Smith, of Independence Avenue, this city. On the evening of that day as Miss Smith and her mother were walking toward their home Pond suddenly appeared and shot Miss Smith. He escaped in the darkness, but was arrested on a car a short time afterward, tried, convicted and sentenced.

Pond declared that he shot the girl because he loved her and could not bear the thought of her receiving attentions from anyone else. Miss Smith, who soon recovered, and William Schupp were married at the home of her parents yesterday by the Rev. William Trebert.

ONE WOMAN DROWNED. SALIDA, Col., May 31.—By the breaking of a footbridge over the Arkansas River here a crowd which was watching the ceremony of casting flowers of the water in memory of naval heroes, was thrown into the water. Mrs. Warren Thompson was drowned.

Anglo-Indian Claims Seat in House of Lords Complications in Gardner Peerage Due to Oriental Marriage of Stewart William in Northwest Provinces of Hindoostan.

LONDON, May 31.—The strange complications of the Gardner peerage, which has been dormant since the death of the third baron without male issue, will shortly come before the house of lords. In the early part of the last century Stewart William Gardner, a grandson of Rear Admiral Lord Gardner, lived in the northwest provinces of India and contracted a marriage with a native woman, and begat numerous descendants.

In 1884, soon after the third baron died, the eldest of these Indian descendants sought to take his seat in the house of lords, but the lord chancellor decided an inquiry must be held into his claims.

On the death of his father in 1901 Alan Hyde Gardner, who also claims the title through a collateral branch, proceeded to India to obtain evidence as to the validity of the marriage on which the title of the Indian claimant depends.

He is advised that the result of his inquiries along this way to the success of his own claim to the peerage. The case will come before the house of lords in due course.

Two and Three Piece Suits of P.-B. Make.

The negligence of summer doesn't mean careless dress—but allows of the display of infinite ability on the part of the designer to produce a properly graceful but not stiff looking garment. Our cutters have done their work with rare skill. Slip on any garment you fancy here. It feels right, for it fits right; it drapes gracefully—it is cool and comfortable. It dresses a man as he wants to dress, and should be dressed in warm weather.

Among the two-piece suits are flannels, homespuns, and other light fabrics, ranging in price from $10 to $30.

The 3-piece suits include worsteds, serges, chevots, etc., ranging in price from $12 to $35.

The line of separate outing trousers in flannels, striped serges, and homespun made with cuff bottoms are right at their best now—and more than reasonable for what they represent in value—at $4 to $6.

Two and three-piece suits for youths, too, made with all the care to detail that characterizes the men's garments, and with little kinks of style about them that particularly appeal to young fellows.

Boys' Wash Suits. Just a word about the Boys' Wash Suits. Styles are well varied with the different blouse effects predominating. They're suits that are made to withstand the constant assaults of the wash-tub and come out as fresh and shapely and as firm of seam as they are here right now. Prices $1 to $5.
