

ROOSEVELT VISIT CHEERS EAST SIDE

Jerome Says Next Congress Will Be With Him

MORE LOVED THAN LINCOLN

Speech of Mr. Roosevelt at the Hungarian Club Banquet—Americanism His Theme.

NEW YORK, Feb. 15.—The name of Roosevelt is echoing through the east side today.

His visit there last night, the first time a President has visited the section, will be a nine-days' wonder. The banquet in his honor by the Hungarian Club is now east side history.

The President keenly enjoyed his visit. He stepped from his carriage and raised his hat to the cheering thousands crowded into the tenements near "Little Hungary" until he drove away, four hours later, the President was all smiles.

The dinner itself became a delightful informal affair. The President dipped into the Hungarian dishes with a relish, drank the Hungarian wines sparingly, but with satisfaction, and even smoked a Hungarian cigarette.

Rose to Greet Ladies. When Mrs. Braun, wife of President Braun, of the Hungarian Club, and Mrs. Schwartz, wife of the proprietor of the Cafe Liberty, appeared the President left the table, and they shook hands warmly with both of them.

Next Congress Will Be With Him. "President Roosevelt will have a Congress that will be with him next time," said Mr. Jerome.

"Roosevelt is even more loved than Lincoln and Grant."

Six years ago, after he was elected governor, the President was given a dinner by the Hungarian Republican Club in the Cafe Liberty.

Upon his arrival at Little Hungary, shortly after 7 o'clock, the President, escorted by Marcus Braun, president of the Hungarian Club, entered the reception room through a cheering crowd of 400 persons.

The walls of the room were covered with banners showing the American colors, ropes of smilax hung in graceful festoons from the ceiling, and the President stood under a life-size oil painting of himself while Mr. Braun presented the guests to him.

The police protection was thorough, too thorough, they thought, for the reason that they resented the impudent cast on their society by the presence of so many policemen and Secret Service men.

There was, however, only one untoward incident throughout the evening. A man who shares with Mr. Roosevelt the liking and respect of east sideers is William Travers Jerome, a reformer, at present district attorney of New York.

When the President left Mr. Jerome was called on to speak, and his words were of the guest who had just gone.

Owen Kelly Confesses Shortage in Accounts

Says He Lost Money of Other Persons in Steel Speculation and Only Flew When Exposure Appeared Certain.

LOS ANGELES, Feb. 15.—No doubt exists that the man found by the police here last night is Owen Kelly, the missing merchant and bank director of Philadelphia. The nerves of the wanderer are shattered.

"I've made a mess of my life," he cried. "I want to go back to Philadelphia and make a man of myself."

He begged to be taken to Bishop Convent, of the Catholic Church here, who, he says, is his personal friend. The police refused the request, but have communicated with the bishop. Kelly could Chief of Police Hammett that he will make complete statement to Bishop Convent, and to no one else.

He refused to talk to the reporters, but did not keep aloof. Kelly has fully admitted his identity and that he was short in his accounts.

Debts About $50,000. He says that he does not know the exact amount of his indebtedness in the East. He cannot tell whether it is $50,000 or more, but thinks it is somewhere near that amount.

It has been ascertained that after leaving Philadelphia he sailed from Boston on a square steamship bound for a Mediterranean port. He went through the hands of his neighbor and by the country as a whole.

"And now, gentlemen, I wish to say that we cannot keep too clearly before our minds the fact that for the success of our civilization what is needed is not so much brilliant ability, nor so much unusual genius, as the possession by the average man of the plain, homely, workaday virtues, that make that man a good father, a good husband, and a good neighbor—a decent man with whom I deal in all relations of life."

Need of Righteous Living. "We need good laws, we need honest administration of the laws, and we cannot afford to be contented with less; but more than anything else we need that the average man shall have in him the root of righteous living; that the average man shall have in him the feeling that will make him ashamed to do wrong, to submit to wrong, and that will make him feel his bounden duty to help those that are weaker, to help those especially that are in any way dependent upon him; and while not in any way losing the power of individual initiative, to cease to act in combination with his fellows for a common end of social uplifting and good government."

"And now, one word in closing upon success in life, upon the success that each of us should strive for. It is a great mistake—oh, such a great mistake—to measure success in terms of money. Money is a glittering but without, or to speak of it in terms which will mislead those who are not especially the young or people about us, as to what success really is."

Pride of Work. "Look back in your own lives; see what the things are that you are proud of as you look back, and you will, in almost every case, and on every occasion, find that those memories of pride are associated, not with days of ease, but with days of effort, the day when you had to do all that was in you for some worthy end, and the worthiest of all worthy ends is to make those that are closest and nearest to you, your wife and children, and those near you, happy and not sorry that you are alive."

"This kind of success is open to every one of us. The great prizes come more or less by accident, and no man knows that better than any man who has won any of them. The great prizes come to each man there comes normally the change so to lead his life that at the end of his days his children, his wife, those that are dear to him, shall rise up and call him blessed, and so that his neighbors and those who have been brought into intimate association may feel that he has done his part as a man in a world which sadly needs that each man should play his part well."

True Americanism. "Americanism is not a matter of birthplace, of ancestry, of creed, of occupation; Americanism is a matter of the spirit that is within a man's soul. From the time when we first became an independent nation to the present moment there has never been a generation in which some of the most distinguished and most useful men were born in this country, and it is in this country that we have had the greatest of our statesmen, our soldiers, our sailors, our judges, our legislators alike—American citizens, and nothing else."

Worked With Fellow-Guests. "The others I had known before. With one of my fellow-guests, General Grant, I was then working in common, and at different times I spoke at meetings presided over by or held in the clubhouses of various of the gentlemen here present, sometimes on political subjects, but much oftener on matters of citizenship affecting us all as good citizens."

"I grew in those years, gentlemen, to have a very close feeling of sympathy and affection toward the men, women and children of the great east side of this city, and I needed no urging when I was invited to come and be a guest at a club of the east side this evening."
