

tions, the whole Administration plan will be shuttle-cocked about in the regular session and killed. Appropriation bills will be given the right of way, as is customary, and rate legislation will bring up the same cry which greeted it last winter. "It is too big a question to handle in a single session," the comment again. "Ample time must be taken to consider all points of view." Then the approaching Congressional elections will be urged as a reason why the party cannot afford to do anything, and it will be determined by the Senate leaders that nothing can be done. The bill, however, it is thought the President will be very unwilling to alter his original plan in the slightest. The bill does at all it will be ascribed to a willingness to prove tractable to the party leaders rather than following his own best judgment. So it is generally thought more likely that the President intends to "stay put," fair and square.

PHILADELPHIA MACHINE CRUMBLING UNDER REVCLT

He is in the red business, but has done little business lately. Those who deal with him are sure will be disappointed. Sam Springer is a downtown saloon-keeper. He is a gas-lease councilman. No more than a gas-lease councilman. He is in the red business, but has done little business lately. Those who deal with him are sure will be disappointed. Sam Springer is a downtown saloon-keeper. He is a gas-lease councilman. No more than a gas-lease councilman.

To Strike Vital Spot

According to report, the ring is to be struck in one of its most vital spots—the contracts. It is there where most of the ring's money-making powers is located. McNichol, who, next to Durham, is the head of the organization, has a great filtration contract with the city, and is trying to get the street cleaning contract. He will lose the latter.

Ring Stocks Depressed.

The ring stocks, United Gas and Philadelphia Electric, have been declining with a persistence that indicates the way the situation is turning in the minds of the men on the street. United Gas was dropping yesterday, but 104 was the closing price, while today it was as low as 103 1/2. The Philadelphia Electric was sympathetic and its 4 percent bonds dropped to 79 1/2, as compared with 79 3/4 yesterday. Both stocks were heavily sold.

Votes Weaver Needs.

The all-absorbing question at present is whether the ring will be able to rally enough support in the councils to prevent the passage of the gas lease bill over his veto. To put the bill through over the veto a three-fifths vote is required in both the select council and common council. There are two select councilmen and eighty-four common councilmen. To pass the measure over the veto, 25 votes are needed in the select council and 51 in the common council. Failure to secure this vote in either council will kill the bill. To effect this Mayor Weaver must line up eight common councilmen in the select council and thirty-four in the common council. Just how the members stand is not known. The mayor asserts he has enough votes to ensure the failure of the measure.

Common Council Fighting Ground.

The common council is regarded as the more likely fighting ground, as the members are more responsive to the people and less under the control of the ring. There were four members of the select council who voted against the ordinance originally, and seven common councilmen, who took the same stand. The mayor is credited with lining up eighteen common councilmen and six select councilmen since the fight began. It seems likely that these figures give the mayor the greatest support he can claim.

Auerbach Reaches City.

Joseph Auerbach, of the law firm of Davies, Stone & Auerbach, of New York, who have been engaged by the committee of seventy which is leading the citizens' fight, to represent the people in the probing of municipal "rottenness," arrived in Philadelphia this morning. He went into conference at once with Mayor Weaver, Director of Public Works Acker, Director of Public Safety Potter, Director of Public Supplies Shoyer and Judge Gordon, Mayor Weaver's personal counsel. Following the conference the following statement was given out in the name of Mr. Auerbach: "I called upon the mayor as a matter of courtesy in view of the fact that our firm of Davies, Stone, and Auerbach have in conjunction with Thomas Raeburn White, a member of the bar in this city, and professor of law in the University of Pennsylvania, concluded to accept a retainer from the committee of seventy and to act for them in opposing the proposed gas extension lease. In so far as there does not develop any conflict between the interests of the mayor and this committee we shall hope to have the co-operation of Judge Gordon and Mr. Root with us, and to the extent that our advice and assistance are deemed by them to be helpful we shall co-operate with Judge Gordon and Mr. Root. Our firm is generally familiar with the controversy in question, having been one of the representatives professionally of the firm of E. B. Smith & Co., in the matter of their bid. Inasmuch as that relation might operate to embarrass our duties under our present retainer to the committee, we have, with the consent of the Smith & Co., terminated that relation."

Wagon Off Its Beat.

Garbage is always plentiful in the market streets and collectors from all over the city are in the habit of flocking to the district, according to Superintendent Stidham, to get a share of the rich pickings. Wagon No. 49 belongs to the Georgetown district and was neglecting its own territory. Complaints have frequently been made to the contractor that the Georgetown territory is receiving only two collections a week instead of six as required by contract.

Drivers Rely on Tips.

"His drivers rely upon such extras to place out a wage always smaller than the Director itself pays," the citizens paying receive collection at the expense of their poorer or more conscientious neighbors, and the temptation is always present with the drivers to intimidate by neglect or slovenly work—this, in time, deteriorating the public mind.
