INDIA HAS VAST HIDDEN HOARDS

Misgovernment Has Taught People to Secret Treasures.

It would be an immense benefit to all mankind if the stores of gold now held by individuals in India could be made available for general use, says a writer in Spare Moments.

Ever since the dawn of history that country has been gathering gold and hiding it away. Treasures of almost incalculable value are possessed by many Indian princes. When the Maharajah of Burdwan died, the stock of gold and silver left by him was so large that no member of the family could make an accurate estimate of it. A report made to the British government by a secret agent stated that on the estate of the defunct potentate were a number of treasure-houses, one of them containing three rooms.

A Gold Hoop.

The largest of these three rooms was forty-eight feet long, and was filled with ornaments of gold and silver, plates and cups, washbasins, jugs, and so forth—all of precious metals. The other two rooms were full of bags and boxes of gold mohurs and silver rupees. The door of this and other treasure-houses had been bricked up for nobody knows how long.

These valuables, according to an ancient custom, were in the custody of the maharajah's wife, the vaults being attached to her apartments, but none of them were allowed to be opened save in the presence of the master. One vault was filled with ornaments belonging to different gods and family deities of the maharajah's wife, and the natives of India commonly bury their hoards, and among the poorer classes a favorite hiding place is a hole dug beneath the bed. Divested heirs are sometimes employed for the same purpose.

Hoards Lost Forever.

It is undoubtedly a fact that very many hoards thus deposited are lost forever. Gold is also valued on religious grounds. The gods take up great quantities of gold, silver and precious stones. The temples containing the images of the yellow and white metals. The habit of hoarding seems to have been induced by ages of misgovernment, during which oppression and bloodshed were the order of the day. The feeling of safety existing, it was natural that the natives should adopt the practice of collecting their wealth to a concentrated shape and hiding it. Thus, in case of emergency the family savings in hard cash were always within easy reach, and robbers or other enemies were not likely to get hold of them. Meanwhile, century after century, the exports of India have greatly exceeded the imports of that country, and consequently, an uninterrupted stream of gold and silver has flowed thither. The country is indeed a bottomless well, into which a stream of treasure perpetually flows.

NEW VERSION OF "O. K."

Now comes a fourth version. Gen. J. Warren Kiefer, in the Archaeological Quarterly, says that in Urbana, Ohio, in 1840, a man with a pocket watch was in progress, a Whig farmer drove into town with this legend painted on his wagon: "The people in Oil Kiefer's name, but a Whig tavern keeper near Springfield, stuck the letters 'O. K.' over his door, where they remained until the building was torn down in 1901. This seems more probable than any of the other statements. The use of 'O. K.' however it started, has long been widespread and respectable. College presidents, bank officials, and even preachers find the initials indispensable in their business correspondence."—Journal.
