

STATE OF UNREST IN SANTO DOMINGO

Revolutionary Seeds Are Now Being Sown.

UNITED STATES HELPLESS

Question of Distribution of Revenue Collections Proves to Be Bone of Contention.

The State Department is much concerned over the situation in Santo Domingo, as it has been reported by United States Minister Dawson.

It is clear from the reports which have been constantly received from Minister Dawson that a state of unrest exists among a large part of the population of Santo Domingo, and that troublesome times, which are likely to eventuate in a revolution, are coming in the island.

Opposed to Americans.

According to the reports received by the State Department there is a certain element in Santo Domingo which has always been opposed to the American administration of the customs of the island, which, in the past, have furnished for them a source of large personal revenue. Under the American administration the 45 per cent of the customs dues that have been turned over to the Santo Domingo government exceeds the entire revenue collected in the past by unscrupulous agents of the government and given to the Santo Domingo treasury.

The growing revenues of the customs houses has made the revolutionary element in the island more desirous than ever to gain possession of the customs and more disgruntled with the present arrangement.

The fact that the United States is powerless to take drastic action to protect the modus vivendi now in force for the administration of the fiscal affairs of the island is each day becoming better understood in Santo Domingo.

The officials of the State Department believe that the Senate will this year certainly ratify the treaty between Santo Domingo and the United States, which would place this country on a firm footing in the island and give it the right to protect the custom houses and prevent revolution.

HIT BY CAR.

Struck by a west-bound car at Seventh and G streets, northwest, Cora Smith, who refused to give her address, received a severe shock and several bruises about the body yesterday afternoon about 2:30 o'clock. She insisted on boarding the car and proceeding on her way.

Hepburn Means to Push His Interstate Bill

Chairman of House Committee on This Question Determined to Have His Bill on Railroad Commerce Considered.

Chairman Hepburn, of the House Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce, announces that he will introduce, immediately after the opening of Congress, his bill for the reorganization of the Interstate Commerce Commission, the extension of its powers, and the increase of the salaries.

The same measure was known as the Hepburn bill in the last Congress, and failed, by a single vote, to secure adoption as the majority report of the committee, the Each-Townsend measure being sent out instead.

Chairman Hepburn expresses confidence that this time legislation will pass both House and Senate, and that it will be of the kind that the President and his supporters want. He believes his own bill is in line with these requirements, and therefore proposes to give it another try.

The Hepburn Measure.

The Hepburn measure provides for abolishing the present Interstate Commission and then creating a new one, under the same name. As first drafted, the measure contemplated a commission of seven members, instead of the five that now constitute the commission.

Later, however, it was raised to nine, and this is the number the chairman now has in mind. He proposes to fix the salary at $10,000 annually, which is the same that judges of the Supreme Court receive.

The measure provides for a Court of Commerce, to which appeals from the commission shall go. This court was to be made up of circuit judges assigned to this regular work, for limited periods, by the Chief Justice of the United States. Its jurisdiction was to be exclusive as to transportation matters, and appeal should be from it to the Supreme Court.

The particular occasion for dissatisfaction with the measure on the part of advocates of regulation was that it did not provide for the immediate taking effect of a rate determined to be reasonable by the Interstate Commission. Provision was made for the suspension of the new rate, on order of the court, pending presentation of the appeal. This, it was urged, violated the essential feature of the President's plan. What the radical regulationists want is that when the commission denounces one rate and after investigation names a satisfactory one to take its place, that rate shall immediately become effective, and remain in effect until on appeal it shall have been decided unfair.

There was also objection to the plan on the ground that the judges assigned for service on the court of commerce, serving only for short periods, would not have opportunity thoroughly to familiarize themselves with this branch of legal procedure and with the questions involved in making rates and determining their reasonableness.

Notwithstanding these objections from some of the ardent supporters of the plan to rehabilitate the commission, there is apparent a growing feeling that some such compromise will be pressed upon the President and that he may accept it.

One of the best known advocates of vigorous regulation measures, when told that the Hepburn bill would be introduced again, expressed much surprise, saying he could not believe the measure, retaining the essential features that characterized it last session, could get through the House. He thought the vigorous manifestation of disapproval that was noted at that time would be repeated, and that the House would never be willing to take its stand upon such a bill. He thought, however, that if the House could be induced to pass it, the Senate might do the same.

He also suggested the possibility that the House committee, when Speaker Cannon shall have effected the reorganization of his committee list, might be found to have a majority of Republicans who would be willing to bring out such a measure. There was only one vote lacking in the last session to make the bill the choice of a majority of the Republicans on the committee. In such a situation, with the Senate accepted as opposed to the President's plan, and with the House committee reporting a measure unsatisfactory to most of the backers of that plan, the situation would be so thoroughly muddled as to add greatly to the difficulties of securing any legislation at all.

Louis Stays Day Longer To Round Up His Tars

Many Missing As Sailing Hour Approached. Police and Immigration Officials Hunting for Men Not Yet Aboard.

NEW YORK, Nov. 18.—Because of the great number of missing sailors from the English fleet, Prince Louis' squadron did not sail today, as originally planned, but will wait until Monday to give the men a chance to recuperate and return to their ships, which are coaled. Since the arrival here of the fleet detachments have increased as the days wore on. Commissioner of Immigration

Watchorn, the police, and the British consul are rounding up the deserters today, wholesale orders for arrests having been issued.

The men, for the most part, the officers of the fleet hope, are deserters in name only—that is, they have been won over by the generous hospitality shown them by the Americans and are resting up after a hard siege of pleasure.

CUBAN DETECTIVES FIND ARMS HIDDEN IN CERRO

Included Two Machine Guns and Rifles. Considered Evidence of Revolutionary Plot.

HAVANA, Cuba, Nov. 18.—Government detectives today seized forty rifles, twenty-one carbines, two machine guns and 2,000 cartridges, which were found in a house in Cerro, a suburb of the city.

The discovery of the arms and ammunition proves the existence of a revolutionary plot of magnitude. Investigation is being made to run down the parties responsible for collecting the arms. As yet, no arrests have been made.

ARRANGEMENTS FOR VISIT TO WASHINGTON COMPLETED

BALTIMORE, Nov. 18.—Arrangements for a conference between representatives of business organizations of Baltimore and Secretary Shaw have been completed, and the delegation will leave Camden Station Monday morning for the Capital.

In the delegation will be Mayor Timanus, Collector of the Port William F. Stone, Robert Ramsay, president of the Board of Trade; E. Stanley Gary, president of the Merchants and Manufacturers' Association; Douglas M. Wylie, president of the Chamber of Commerce, and delegations from each of the organizations. Congressmen Frank C. Wichter and John Gill will also accompany the delegation.

The party will lay before Mr. Shaw the plans for developing a park on the west side of the new custom house, which was recently suggested at a meeting of the Board of Trade.

COLORED MEN OF TEXAS DENOUNCE RAGE'S BRUTES

Declare Time Has Come for Best of People to Stand for Law and Order.

HOUSTON, Texas, Nov. 18.—Colored men from forty-four counties of Texas assembled here today to hold an anti-criminal assault convention.

Several hours were consumed in the appointment of committees and listening to brief talks from the delegates from the rural districts.

All expressed the opinion that the time had come when the best of the race must take a firm stand for law, order and morality; must assist the officers and not the culprits.

Nat Q. Henderson delivered the address that will be submitted to the public as setting forth the purposes and objects of the organization.

A SCHEMER.

"Kin youse let me have a dollar, air?" asked Frayed Fagin.

"Why should I give you a dollar?" growled the citizen addressed.

"Andrew Carnegie has promised me dat amount when I kin raise a similar sum."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

It has the commendation of being composed of the leading men of several prominent manufacturing concerns. By extensive advertising, it is proposed to find just the car for the buyer and just the desired customer for the seller.
