Veterinarians Swear Go Between Full Fledged Stallion and Trouble Follows.

LOOKS BAD FOR SHIELDS

Stewards Want to Know Why He Entered Suburban Winner as Gelding. Others Questioned.

NEW YORK, July 2.—Go Between, the winner of the Suburban Handicap, is a full fledged stallion. This fact was determined yesterday by three veterinary surgeons, who made a thorough examination of the son of Medler-Indigo, and so reported to the stewards of the Coney Island Jockey Club.

Alek Shields, the owner of Go Between, was called before them during the races yesterday and asked to explain how it was that although he had had Go Between in his barn since last year, he had either concealed the fact that the son of Medler was not a gelding as represented or had been in total ignorance of the facts.

Others Questioned. The stewards also questioned Frank Brown, Charles F. Fox, and W. A. McNulty, all of whom at different times either owned or trained Go Between and allowed him to masquerade as a gelding.

Credit to Madden. If Shields is guilty of trickery he has kept his secret well. He has refrained from running Go Between in selling races this year, however, probably because he feared ultimate exposure.

DON'T SMASH THE JUMP. OR YOU'LL BE PINCHED. CHICAGO, July 3.—The umpires of Chicago from now on are to be safe from the flying pop bottles of deadly aim; likewise from bricks and various other missiles that make their lives burdens when the "fan" is in his glory of denunciation.

Personal Comment on Men and Things in the Field of Sports

BASEBALL.

Former Outlaw Burch, who is now with St. Louis, must look about the same to the Westerners as Davy does to us. In Sunday's game with Pittsburgh the rightfielder connected twice in both games.

J. Delehanty, of Williamsport, is fifteenth on the Tri-State batting list, with a mark of .252. Bob Unglaub is some higher up with .338. There are but twelve men in the league who are hitting .300 or over.

Harrisburg has not yet elected a manager to take the place of the veteran "Billy" Hamilton, who resigned one week ago because the directors were dissatisfied with him, owing to his failure to give the Capital City a winning team.

If Davy Altizer gets four or five hits in the next three games with Boston it will advance him a few more paces toward the top of the batting list. Last week the lanky chap got an average of more than a hit a game.

And maybe the Tri-Staters aren't keeping good their promise to give Scranton, last year's tallenders, a good team. From the bottom of the heap the Scrantonites have climbed to first place, which most all look good to the fans of that town.

The willow Willits, he of the 90 degree drop ball, has won ten straight games for the Pittsburgs.

"It would be better for the major leagues," says the Boston Herald, "if Sunday ball were entirely done away with."

Deshon, the crack pitcher of the Cornell varsity team, has signed with the DuBois, Pa., club of the Interstate League.

Billy Murray has a new college infielder for the Jersey City team. His name is Grant and he is in the Harvard law school.

No team in the country has as good a corps of fielding pitchers as the New York Nationals. Taylor, Wilste, and Mathewson are experts in that line, and McGinnity is pretty good.

"They will not stand the gaff of a bruising struggle," says Joe Kelley, referring to the Chicago Cubs. Maybe Sir Joseph was right, but the same thing was said of the Baltimore in 1894.

The coming Western trip will leave the New York Nationals out of the pennant hunt—New Haven Register. "Sir," replied Commander McGraw when called on to surrender, "I have not yet begun to fight."

President Herrmann of the Cincinnati club formally restored to the Pittsburg club Catcher Phelps, reversing his own decision of a week ago awarding Phelps to the Boston Americans.

Hal Chase has made seventeen hits in his last seven games and made one or more hits in each of his last seven games. It is mighty seldom that Griffith's nonpareil first base guardian hits a ball in the air. He uses a shorter bat than last year.

The Boston Americans have given Seibach his ten days' notice of release. Hoy, the new left fielder secured from Holy Cross, gave every indication of being first class man in the game in New York. He was noticeably handy with the bat.

"Clarkson," says Kid Elberfeld, who saw the game at the Polo Grounds yesterday, "is as good a pitcher as there is in the country, and all he wants is plenty of work." Elberfeld, by the way, says he expects to be in the game again in a couple of weeks.

Jimmy Williams, of the New York Americans, could not cover more ground than he is covering if he were equipped with wings. No player is more reliable on ground balls. Like Pfeffer and McPhee of old, Williams has the knack of being in front of the ball, making his plays look easy.

RACING.

The announcement was made yesterday by the New England Breeders' Club, racing at Rockingham Park, Salem, N. H., through the officials of the jockey club, that for the remainder of the Salem meeting the values of purses and all overnight races will be reduced one-half. The stake program, as announced, will be run off as advertised.

Tradition, when she ran second to Running Water at Sheepshead Bay on Saturday last, made her last appearance on the turf. The filly, which was one of the stars of 1904, and was second to Artful in the Futurity, has been retired permanently, her trainer, A. J. Joyner, stated yesterday. Tradition, after a glorious career as a two-year-old, was backward in her training at three years old, though she won a number of important filly stakes, and this spring suffered another setback from skin disease. She is too well bred to be drilled in purse races, and accordingly she is to be retired to the stud.

All the scandal which was in circulation several weeks ago about a St. Louis jockey who, according to report, has formed a connection in the betting ring, was revived yesterday when the jockey in question rode and was beaten on an odds-on favorite, against which there was a steady demonstration in the betting ring. There were many inquiries as to whether the stewards had taken any action regarding the race, as it was rumored that there had been a card of betting sheets and records, but no official notice of action was issued.

The Coney Island Jockey Club has announced a list of twenty-three stakes, to close on July 16, for the autumn meeting at Sheepshead Bay. The fixtures number six handicaps for three-year-olds and upward, including the $17,000 Two-Trip City, at one mile and a quarter, four for three-year-olds, including the $8,000 September, at one mile and three furlongs; one for two-year-olds and upward; the $5,000 Flight, at seven furlongs, and the $10,000 Flatbush, at seven furlongs; the $5,500 Grand Eastern Handicap, at six furlongs, and the $5,000 Autumn. Three stakes for steeplechasers also are opened, the most important of these being the new Great Autumn Steeplechase at two and a half miles, with $7,000 in added money and an estimated value of about $10,000.

The weights for the Spindrift Handicap, one mile and a furlong, for three-year-olds, to be run Thursday at Sheepshead Bay, were announced yesterday with Whimical as the top weight at 123 pounds. The next high weights in order are Accountant, 125; Flip Flap, 123; Ormondale, 122; Inquisitor, 121; Bohemian, 120; Sir Huon, 119; Measlip, 117; Clark Buff, 116; Bull's Eye, Roman Gold, and Running Water, 115 each, and Trip-toe, Kuruki, and Good Luck, 114 pounds each.

BOXING.

At the Wayne Athletic Club of Philadelphia tonight, Eddie Carter, of Germantown, and Jimmy Flynn, champion of Newfoundland, will clash for six rounds.

Will C. Lewis, welterweight, is hard at work training for his bout with Honey Melody, which takes place at Canelec tomorrow afternoon.

Hugo Kelly, the Chicago middleweight, is hot on the trail of Dave Barry, of Princeton. Kelly says that he will take Barry on at 165 pounds ring-side and will make a side bet that he will win.

A good fight is in sight in Philadelphia when George Gunther, the "Melbourne Kangaroo," and Jack Black-headers, of the Quaker City, will meet for six rounds. Gunther defeated George Cole last week.

Boston So Rotten Managers Called Halt on Farce in Seventh Inning.

ALTIZER LOST THE FIRST

His Inability to Cover Ground Allowed Visitors to Get Away With Undesired Victory.

There have been many freak games of baseball, and many in which the local average is ground and that which Washington won from Boston yesterday, but it probably holds the record as the only one in a major league in recent years which was so very rotten that the manager of the losing team volunteered to have the proceedings stopped at the end of the seventh round, and thus practically conceded it to his opponent.

Yet this is exactly what Chick Stahl did in the sixth inning. In that round the score stood 17 to 1, and Chick Stahl, who is engineering the Boston outfit during the sickness of Jimmy Collins, went to Jake Stahl and spoke on this wise: "Called it off."

"Jake, this is the worst ever. We couldn't win with a team of nine Keelers and three Mathewsons. We are so far from getting a good team that it isn't worth our while to continue the war. Therefore, I cannot see the use in having my athletes being permaluted pools of perspiration, and if you'll agree to quit at the end of the seventh, we will, and give thanks for the same."

The boy manager assented to this proposition in the name of sports, and a big league game coming to an end because of all-around rottenness became an incident for the rosters perpetration, and if you'll agree to quit at the end of the seventh, we will, and give thanks for the same."

Altizer Lost Game.

Washington lost the first game by 4 to 3, because of inability to hit Cy Young at the psychological moment, and because Altizer couldn't cover more than about two square feet ground in a short. If a ball went a few inches to his left he was not there to get it and another hit that should have been an out was recorded.

Now for the record-breaker. In it Boston showed the form of a twenty-time loser and the mystery of its slide to the bottom was exposed. The entire team played like sandlotters. But not this is so much of a reflection on the sandlotters and we take it all back. It did not display a single symptom of baseball, and the only value of the game was to fatten the Washington team and to give the Boston fans a good time. The game was a farce on the face out of pity for the sweating athletes and spectators.

Great Slugging.

Winters started to pitch, but after hitting Schlafly, giving a pass and being hit four times, all for five runs, Glaze went in. The young collegian was hit by three runs in six innings, and if you are, except that Parent's work at short in the first three innings was so bad that Godwin took his place and was equally as bad. Five errors were charged to Boston, but that doesn't anywhere near represent the character of the fielding, which was so bad that the fans could not take it any longer. The game settled down to one continuous performance of laughing.

CORNELL MAY DECIDE FOR PLAYING OF SUMMER BALL

"Rule Will Be Made Allowing it at Next Meeting of Athletic Association," Says Member—Residence For Moakley.

According to the statements to a Times reporter, of one of the managers of one of the athletic teams at Cornell, and a member of the Athletic Association council at the Ithaca University, Cornell will declare in favor of summer baseball at its next meeting in the fall.

The authority who made the above statement, and who will be a senior at the institution next year, said that this question had been before the authorities for the last few years, and that last year when it came up he had been among the number to vote it down, for the reason that the time for such action was not yet ripe. The motion was lost by less than half dozen votes. However, when it comes up at the October meeting, as it will without a doubt, it will receive at least one more vote, in favor of the change, that of the one who gave this information, that it did last year.

Georgetown's Action as Example. The action taken by Georgetown in declaring in favor of this step will undoubtedly have a great deal of effect on the voting at Cornell, and the Southern school's action will be held up as an argument in favor of the proposed new rule. The reason that such a law has not gone into effect before is that the more conservative members of the athletic council thought it best to wait at least two years before taking any decided stand in the matter. It has now been two years since the question first arose, and it was stated as practically certain that Cornell would decide to allow the members of its teams to make a small stipend on the side, during the "idly" months.

Furthermore, the same man makes the assertion that if not next year, inside of two more seasons, Princeton, Harvard, and Yale will be confronted with the same problem, and that if a rule permitting summer ball is not passed by next year's athletic associations it will be only a matter of time before it is done.

Professionalism Is Rife. "The reason for this is plain," said the manager. "It is an acknowledged fact, that at every college of size in the East at least, there are two or three, and in some cases almost every member on the team who has at some time during his baseball career fallen a prey to the offers of some small club and 'professionalized' himself. This cannot but have its effect, and will, I think, ultimately compel every institution in the country to take the step that I am almost certain Cornell will take in the fall."

Residence for Moakley. When questioned as to the truth of the press reports to the effect that Cornell would lose either a Trainer Jack Moakley or Coach Courtney, the manager said that there was absolutely nothing to such reports. Talking along this line, he said: "Both Courtney and Moakley are satisfied with their present berth for a number of very good reasons. In the first place Cornell pays these two most valued men a salary of no small proportions, which, though perhaps not any more than that paid others of lesser ability is thought to be sufficient by them, considering other things. In the second place, besides the salary paid to these men, Courtney has recently been presented with a handsome residence in Ithaca, which has been decided to him in his own right, and though it has not yet been made public, Moakley will shortly receive a like gift from the athletic council. Already the men in charge of the project have secured contributions of $1,000 or more in interest. It is hoped that this will be increased by graduates' subscriptions to something over $25,000. More time will be given to why the reports concerning the leaving of one or both of the men are unfounded is that both are in perfect harmony with students and faculty, and that there is still considerable time on the contracts of each."

NOTES OF THE NOTABLES

First game tomorrow at 10 a. m. and second at 2 p. m.

Let us not forget that Jake Stahl played a great game in both contests. He dug 'em out of the ground with a most surprising reach that brought forth applause, and got two hits in each game. The rooters appreciated this and applauded him liberally. Also, he kept his head much better than usual and with beneficial results.

There were three of the most glaring and inexcusable failures to back up when men hit balls on which they went to third. The ball was returned to Cross at that bag by long throws, with every chance of it going wild or of him falling down on it, but in not a single case did anyone on the team make the slightest effort to back him up, and had Cross missed the throw the man would have gone home. A club that doesn't have any more team work than that is lucky to be in seventh place.

It must be said that Jim Morgan's work for Boston yesterday did not make a very favorable impression. The Georgetown man does not abound in ginger, and his playing is not of the vigorous, rough-and-ready style which is necessary in a big league. One thing he did was to drive in Boston's first run in the second game, but Falkenberg was letting down then.

There must be some uncanny reason to account for the fact that the games Falkenberg pitches are the ones in which Washington does a vast amount of hitting. This series of coincidences had had to do with boosting his reputation as a twirler.

Washington had a streak of luck with Winters. Three of the hits on which the kind that barely touched the glove of the infielders, and went all the farther for being interfered with.

The track Schlafly got on the head in the closing of the second game was fierce, and it was lucky that he was not more severely injured.

Throw out yesterday's game in doping Glaze's career as a pitcher. It was one of those cases where a team gets going and no pitcher on earth can stop it, and besides Glaze had behind him the worst bunch of misfits in the American League.

It was very kind of the managers to allow the game to go long enough to give Lave Cross his triple in the sixth. In the midst of all the sweat he had shed since the start, when he reached third on the wallop he was so tired that he sat down and rested while Glaze put a couple of strikes over on Anderson.

The loss of that first game cannot be blamed on Smith. It was the fielding behind him that was bad.

Vice President Somers of American League Sued for Divorce.

Trips Around Circuit Caused Quarrels. Defendant Worth About Five Millions—Wife Is a Beauty.

CLEVELAND, Ohio, July 2.—Charles W. Somers, vice president and one of the founders of the American League, was made defendant in action for divorce yesterday.

His wife, Cora M. Somers, in her petition asks not only for absolute divorce, but alimony and the custody of their twelve-year-old daughter. They were married in 1891, but have not been living together for several months. Mr. Somers makes his home at Hotel Euclid. Mrs. Somers alleges extreme cruelty for the last three years. She filed suit for divorce about a year ago, but their troubles were patched up, and it was withdrawn before the news became public.

Baseball caused unhappiness in the family, and was the direct cause of the present proceedings, Mrs. Somers entered the game against the protest of his wife, and when his baseball interests took him out of the city frequently she became restless, and urged him to dispose of his interests in the American League to numerous quarrels, resulting finally in separation.

Besides owning 50 per cent of the stock of the Cleveland baseball club, Mr. Somers has a lucrative coal business here. He is reputed to be worth close to $5,000,000. Mrs. Somers is noted for her beauty.

ST. VINCENT VS. LANNAM. At Seabrook Fourth of July there will be a double header between St. Vincents, of the Marquette League, and the strong Lannams team.
