

MARKSMEN SHOOT IN DRIZZLING RAIN Second Day of Annual Event on District Rifle Range.

FIRST REGIMENT A WINNER

Defeats Second in Regimental Match by Total Score of 536 to 504.

Drizzling rain, soggy ground and puffs of wind did not deter the District Militiamen who journeyed out to the rifle range at Congress Heights this morning to compete in the second day's matches of the annual shoot.

The matches scheduled to be shot today are the Mosher, Washington Post, Harries Long Range, Re-entry Revolver, Brett Re-entry Revolver.

The Mosher match began at 9:30 o'clock this morning. It was open to teams of six from the army, navy, marine corps, and National Guard.

Results of First Day.

The First Regiment downed the Second in the Regimental match at 500 and 600 yards, ten shots to the man, yesterday afternoon. In the 500-yard competition, the Second Regiment tied the First with 299 points.

The Individual Scores.

Table with 2 columns: Name and Score. Lists scores for Second Regiment and First Regiment across various matches.

STUDENTS' BOMBS FOUND IN RUSSIA

ST. PETERSBURG, Oct. 4.—What is regarded as the gravest event in months, causing widespread fear in bureaucratic ranks as well as among all students in the Empire, was the recent discovery of sixteen bombs in the institute for engineers.

The finding of these bombs is considered an undoubted confirmation of the fear which has been entertained for a long time that the majority of students are supporters of the revolution, and even the high schools are nurseries of terrorism.

Captain Assassinated

MOSCOW, Oct. 4.—Captain Dyankowsky was assassinated in the barracks here by a youth who followed him into the building and shot him three times with a revolver.

Czar's Health Wrecked

LIVERPOOL, Oct. 4.—The health of Czar Nicholas, of Russia, is causing the greatest concern of the government in Russia who know of his real condition. Persons in close touch with British court circles have heard ominous reports in regard to the Russian monarch's physical and mental condition.

Recent events have made the Czar suspicious of every one, as he no longer knows upon whom he can depend to protect him from the revolutionists who are seeking his life.

Rumored France Recalls Ambassador to Russia

LONDON, Oct. 4.—The St. Petersburg correspondent of the Morning Post says that it is reported that M. Bompard, the French ambassador, has been recalled by his government because he expressed himself too strongly against the regime of M. Stolypin, the supreme minister.

THE PRESIDENT'S ADDRESS AT HARRIBURG

living force only by the way in which we handle ourselves in the present, and each of us can best show his devotion to his own State by making evident his paramount devotion to that Union which includes all the States. The study of the great deeds of the past is of chief avail in so far as it teaches us to grapple resolutely and effectively with the problems of the present. We are not now menaced by foreign war. Our Union is firmly established. But each generation has its special and serious difficulties; and we of this generation have our special difficulties springing from the very material success of which we are so proud, from the very growth and prosperity of which we justly boast.

Look Out for the Lawyers.

If we fall thus to increase it, we show our impotence and leave ourselves at the mercy of those ingenious legal advisers of the holders of vast corporate wealth, who, in the performance of what they regard as their duty, and to serve the ends of their clients, invoke the law at one time for the confounding of their rivals, and at another time strive for the nullification of the law, in order that they themselves may be left free to work their will upon the masses of the people.

Duties of the State.

Strong nationalist though I am, and firm though my belief is that there must be a wide extension of the power of the National Government to deal with questions of this kind, I freely admit that as regards many matters of first-rate importance, we should rely purely upon the States for the betterment of present conditions. The several States must do their duty or our citizenship can never be put on a proper plane.

Good Work in Pennsylvania.

It is surely not too much to say that this body of substantive legislation marks an epoch in the history of the practical betterment of political conditions, not merely for your State, but for all our States. I do not recall any other State Legislature, which, in a similar length of time, has to its credit such a body of admirable legislation.

Brains Repaired

GRAPE-NUTS RESTORATION

There is above all true in connection with the employment of child labor. In Pennsylvania you have made a beginning, but only a beginning, in proper legislation and administration on this subject; the law must be rigorously enforced.

Congress. The great bulk of the work, however, must be left to the State Legislatures, and if our State Legislatures would act as drastically and yet as wisely on this subject of child labor as Pennsylvania has acted within the present year as regards the subjects I have enumerated above, the gain would be literally incalculable, and one of the most virtuous of modern, mercantile life would at last be adequately met.

Powers of the Nation.

So much for the State. Now for the nation, and here I cannot do better than base my theory of governmental action upon the words and deeds of one of Pennsylvania's greatest sons, Justice James Wilson. Wilson's career has been singularly overlooked for many years, but I believe that more and more it is now being adequately appreciated, and I congratulate your State upon the fact that Wilson's body is to be taken away from where it now rests and brought back to the, as it should, in Pennsylvania soil. He was a signer of the Declaration of Independence. He was one of the men who saw that the Revolution, in which he had served as a soldier, would be utterly fruitless unless it was followed by a close and permanent union of the States, and in the Constitutional Convention, and in securing the adoption of the Constitution and expounding what it meant, he rendered services even greater than he rendered as a member of the Continental Congress, which declared our independence.

He believed in the people with the faith of Abraham Lincoln and expressed his faith in the people he had what most of the men who in his generation believed in the people did not have, that is, the courage to recognize that faith in the people amounted to nothing unless the representatives of the people assembled together in the National Government were given full and complete power to work on behalf of the people. He developed even before Marshall the doctrine (absolutely essential not merely to the efficiency but to the existence of this nation) that an inherent power rested in the nation, outside of the enumerated powers conferred upon it by the Constitution, in all cases where the object involved was beyond the power of the several States and was a power ordinarily exercised by sovereign nations.

In a remarkable letter in which he advocated setting forth in early and clear fashion the powers of the National Government, he laid down the proposition that it should be made clear that there were neither vacancies nor interferences between the limits of State and national jurisdiction, and that both jurisdictions together composed only one uniform and comprehensive system of government and laws; that is, whenever the States can act, because the need to be met is not one of merely a single locality, then the National Government, representing all the people, should have complete power to act in the spirit of Wilson that Washington, and Washington's lieutenant, Hamilton, acted; and it was in the same spirit that Marshall construed the law.

Should Have Complete Power.

Under a wise and farseeing interpretation of the interstate commerce clause of the Constitution, I maintain that the National Government should have complete power to deal with all of this wealth which in any way goes into the commerce between the States and practically all of it that is employed in the great corporations does so in. The national legislators should most scrupulously avoid any demagogic legislation about the business use of this wealth, and should realize that it would be better to have no legislation at all than legislation couched either in a vindictive spirit of hatred toward men of wealth or else drawn with the recklessness of impracticable visionaries.

Not only do orders say "sell," but the necessity of gaining room for new stock would in itself justify the great price sacrifices we are making.

have, as a matter of fact, left vacancies left blanks between the limits of possible State jurisdiction and the limits of actual national jurisdiction over the control of the great business corporations. It is the narrow construction of the powers of the National Government which in our democracy has proved the chief bulwark of those great monetary interests which oppose, and dread any attempt to place them under efficient governmental control.

Many legislative actions and many judicial decisions which I am confident will show to have been erroneous and a damage to the country would have been avoided if our legislators and jurists had approached the matter of enacting and constraining the laws of the land in the spirit of the great Pennsylvania, Justice Wilson—in the spirit of Marshall and of Washington. Such decisions put us at a great disadvantage in the battle for industrial order as against the present industrial chaos. If we interpret the Constitution in narrow instead of broad fashion, if we forsake the principles of Washington, Marshall and of Lincoln, we are as a people will render ourselves impotent to deal with any abuses which may be committed by men who have accumulated the enormous fortunes of today, and who use these fortunes in still vaster corporate form in business.

The legislative or judicial actions and decisions of which I complain, be it in the power to deal with corporate wealth in business. Actual experience has shown that the States are wholly powerless to deal with this subject; and any action or decision that deprives the nation of the power to deal with the wealth of the people, that leaves the corporations absolutely free to work without any effective supervision whatever, and such a course put us in a position of danger to the future of our whole system of government, and, indeed, to our people.

All honest men must abhor and reprobate any effort to excite hostility to men of wealth as such. We should do all we can to encourage thrift and business energy, to put a premium upon the conduct of the man who honestly earns his livelihood, and more than his livelihood, and who honestly uses the money he has earned. But it is our clear duty to see, simply results in leaving the corporations absolutely free to work without any effective supervision whatever, and such a course put us in a position of danger to the future of our whole system of government, and, indeed, to our people.

Justification for Policy.

Perhaps the best justification of the course which in the National Government we have been pursuing in the past few years, and which we intend steadily and progressively to pursue in the future, is that it is condemned with almost equal rancor alike by the reactionaries—the Bourbons—on one side, and by the wild apostles of unrest on the other. The reactionary is bitterly angry because we have deprived him of that portion of his power which he misuses to the public hurt; the agitator is angered for various reasons, including among others the fact that by remedying the abuses we have deprived him of the fulcrum of real grievances, which alone renders the lever of irrational agitation formidable.

We have actually accomplished much, but we have not accomplished all, nor anything like all, that we feel must be accomplished. We shall not halt; we shall steadily follow the path we have marked out, executing the laws we have succeeded in putting upon the statute books with absolute impartiality as between man and man, and unremitting in our endeavor to strengthen and supplement these by further laws which shall enable us in more efficient and more summary fashion to achieve the ends we have in view.

Big Things Accomplished.

During the last few years Congress has had to deal with such vitally important questions as providing for the building of the Panama canal, inaugu-
