STANDARD OIL CASE

Selected as Jurymen in Ohio Because Less Prejudiced Against Trust.

TOLEDO, Ohio, Oct. 10.—A Findlay special says: A jury of farmers is trying the Standard Oil Company conspiracy case.

The second day trial of the great Standard Oil case, wherein Prosecutor David expects to disprove the alleged trust, was called to order at 9 o'clock this morning.

The Standard Oil Company has not yet subpoenaed any witnesses and it is believed will not, preferring to take the case to a higher court just as soon as it is possible to do so.

Prosecutor David gave the jury a detailed history of the Valentine anti-trust act and followed with a brief "history" of the alleged Standard Oil trust from its origin in 1882 down to the present time.

Following a suit entered by Attorney General Watson, the supreme court of Ohio in 1902 found that the Standard Oil trust was a monopoly against public policy and ordered the trust dissolved.

Mr. David closed by saying that notwithstanding all the makeshifts made by the Standard Oil crowd, they have purposely and unlawfully maintained and operated a so-called trust, monopoly or combination.
