HOPING TO SUPPORT
AGGRESSIVE MOVE

The Nicaraguan envoy slipped away from this city yesterday afternoon, convinced that such a step was necessary if the Estrada forces were to be put in shape to completely subjugate the forces of President Madriz

Now Realizes Necessity for Decisive Action Against Government of Madriz.

Disappointed at the failure of his plan to obtain recognition by the United States Government of the Estrada government in Nicaragua, Dr. Salvador

Help Imperative.

Upon the outcome of this trip, it is said, will depend largely whether General Estrada will make an aggressive move within the next few days.

Want Investigation.

"If Madriz is so anxious to satisfy the United States that his administration is not merely an extension of Zelaya's, why doesn't he investigate the killing of Cannon and Groce and let me know that he is giving his people a better government?"

ZELAYA AND DIAZ
STILL PLANNING

MEXICO CITY, Jan. 2.—That the plan of President Diaz for a Mexican protectorate over Central America has not been entirely abandoned is currently reported in government circles today.

MEXICO BELIEVES IN ZELAYA'S WORD

MEXICO CITY, Jan. 2.—It is evident that the people and papers here accept as truth the telegrams regarding the clemency and acknowledging guilt, which former President Zelaya claims were sent to him by Cannon and Groce, his American victims in Nicaragua.

QUARRYMEN STRIKE
STILL UNSETTLED

TOLEDO, Ohio, Jan. 2.—No advance in efforts to end the strike of 1,300 quarrymen at Amherst, Ohio, was made in the meeting today of quarry officers and members of the strikers' committee, called by Secretary Bishop.

ARDILLAC gently laid down his filled cup upon the table and said, "The number thirteen is unlucky."

"How so, I mean, I cannot drink to the king?"

"Well, monsieur, you seem difficult to please, and apparently you are not in favor of this toast—therefore, I shall amend my proposition. As you wish to drink to the king, I will drink to the king."

"I have been told, my lord archbishop, that there are many spies in Loche's camp, and that they are plotting against the king's liberation."

"My plot consists in transferring her majesty from the chateau of Biols to the chateau of Loche's."

"Oh, the details! They are like the queen's and change by day; often several times a day."

"I think, monsieur," he said, "you treat the abbe with less consideration than his high office and distinguished personal qualifications deserve."

"If I succeed the queen will reach Loche's. If I fail my head will reach the king's. I am not a man to be trifled with."

"So far as I am concerned, that is the case," replied Cardillac. "I will assist you in your mission, but I will not be responsible for the consequences."

ed by the presence of the abbe, by the present impossibility of entering Biols, and, therefore, by the fact that he could not win a glimpse of his lady in the chateau.

"As he walked despondently through the town he met friend after friend who were greeting him with a look of surprise."

"Disappointed by the fact that the abbe was spying on him, Cardillac walked to the middle of the bridge, leaned over the parapet, where he was alone, and looked down the swirling, swollen river."

"That night, at dinner, Cardillac found opposite the abbe Rucellai, a face whose benign expression was softened by the crafty smile and the shifting eyes of the abbe."
