

PAULHAN AND WHITE HEROES OF LONDON

French Aviator Receives
$50,000—English Rival
Awarded Costly Cup.

LUNCHEON GUESTS AT HOTEL SAVOY

Victor of London-Manchester Race
Announces Intention of Attempting Trip to Paris.

LONDON, April 28.—Conqueror and vanquished, Louis Paulhan and Graham White, are the heroes of London today. The dare-devil Frenchman at a luncheon at the Hotel Savoy received $50,000 prize donated by Lord Northcliffe, which he won by his 186-mile flight from London to Manchester. White, at the same time, received the 100-guinea cup donated as a consolation prize because of his magnificent attempt to wrest victory from defeat.

Both men on their appearance on the streets today were given ovations that a Caesar might envy. Without disparagement for Paulhan, it is declared that White's attempt to overtake him and the Englishman's courageous flight in the dark night over the Channel, where he had been forced to descend, are fit to rank with Paulhan's own most daring feat—the ascent of nearly 5,000 feet at Los Angeles, last January.

Popular Subscription.
The enthusiasm with which England regards White is proven by the rapid growth of the public subscription opened by the Aero Club in his behalf. The fund will go for the purchase of another consolation testimonial.

Louis Paulhan, who but a few years ago was a penniless clown in a little half vaudeville today appeared before a gathering of the foremost sportsmen and scientists as the man who accomplished the most daring flight in the history of aviation.

Interest in the flight is scarcely less keen in scientific circles than among the public, as the belief has been general that his report of the long flight with air currents would prove of inestimable value in leading to thorough study of the hardest problems of the new science.

At the moment that he received the reward of his magnificent flight, it became known today that Paulhan is soon to attempt a trip over the English Channel to London journey Paulhan would be striving for no prize save that of the honor.

Allows Eight Hours.
The Frenchman has figured on the course, and decided that the 30-mile trip can be made in eight hours, allowing a two-hour rest at his only halting place, Boulogne, where the fuel would be replenished. Besides this flight, the crossing of the channel by Louis Bleriot would drop into comparative insignificance, that 25-mile journey then being remarkable only for its priority. In this Paris to London journey Paulhan would be striving for no prize save that of the honor.

The Savoy today was deluged with telegrams, not only from all over England, but from the continent. Scores were received from France, aviators, scientists, and friends of Paulhan sending congratulations to be read at the luncheon today. Many referred to White, praising his pluck.
The esteem of Great Britain for the foreigner who sailed through the heart of England was voiced today by many speakers at the luncheon. The chief interest, however, centers in Paulhan's own remarks.

To Enter French Race.
PARIS, April 28.—A French aerial race of 25 miles will be the next aviation feat. Louis Paulhan, not satisfied with winning the $50,000 Northcliffe prize in England, will try for the Michelin prize of $100,000. This event is likely to result in a race more exciting than the London to Manchester flight, as Henri Farman is also expected to enter. Leon Dubouche, who recently flew before Theodore Roosevelt, according to his friends will take part. He intended to attempt the London to Manchester flight but it was not accomplished by May 15.
The Michelin prize is for a flight from Paris to Puy-de-Dome, a mountain 4,900 feet high, 25 miles south of Paris, in the province of Puy-de-Dome. Only Paulhan has ever approached this height, he having soared nearly 5,000 feet at Los Angeles, Cal., aviation meet.

RACE QUESTION AN ISSUE IN MARYLAND ELECTIONS

Bladensburg Voters In Warm Municipal Fight Over
Board of Town Commissioners—Colored Leaders
Put Up Entirely New Slate.

HYATTSVILLE, Md., April 28.—Another battle is being fought in Bladensburg.

This time, instead of fighting the British soldiers, the natives are fighting among themselves. The plan to be obtained is the board of town commissioners which consists of five members elected every two years. The election will take place May 2.

An entirely new ticket has been placed in the field. A large portion of the inhabitants of the village are negroes and early in the campaign they put up a slate consisting of five of their color. The white insurgents, realizing that it could not only not be elected, but would tend to defeat their ticket, at once held a caucus and as a result both the colored and white insurgent tickets were withdrawn and a fusion ticket containing the name of one colored man was put up. Both sides are claiming an overwhelming victory.

Two newly incorporated towns, Capitol Heights and Mt. Rainier also hold municipal elections on the first Monday in May, and hot fights are predicted in both townships.

In Capitol Heights a mayor to serve one year, clerk for one year, a treasurer for one year, three councilmen for one year and three councilmen for two years are to be elected. Louis F. Edzard, who was instrumental in securing the incorporation of the town is a candidate for mayor and is being opposed by William H. McGinnis. L. Johnson Fletcher is a candidate for clerk with city opposition, but the balance of the ticket is overwhelmed with candidates.

Mt. Rainier is the scene of another fight for the mayor's chair, so far there being two candidates in the field and a possibility of more to follow. Those at present are Robert E. Joyce and M. Oberlin. Mt. Oberlin received the endorsement of the Mt. Rainier Incorporation Club by a vote of 19 to 18 over C. M. Weber.

PICTURE IN PAPER CAUSE OF WEDDING

Army Officer's Romantic
Courtship By Mail Wins
Him a Bride.

NEW YORK, April 28.—Romantic courtship begun at a lonely military post in Arizona, following the publication of the young woman's photograph in a New York newspaper, extending over a period of three years, will terminate tomorrow with the marriage of First Lieut. Collin H. Ball, U. S. A., Company K, Fifth United States Infantry, and Miss Maude Lorraine Eno, residing with her widowed mother, Mrs. Walter Eno, at 651 West 172d street.

Lieutenant Ball, serving with his regiment at the Arizona post, glancing through a newspaper, was attracted by the photographs of four girls attending the Wadleigh High School, 117th street and Seventh avenue, among which was a portrait of Miss Eno. Cutting Miss Eno's portrait out of the paper and writing a message in French on the reverse side, Lieutenant Ball mailed it back to the young woman.

Miss Eno promptly acknowledged its receipt. Letters began to pass. Although the writers had not seen each other, the correspondence soon became fervent. Lieutenant Ball's regiment was transferred to the Philippines. He took part in several engagements against the warring bands, and at one time, it is said, performed a secret mission for the Chinese government. Recently his regiment was ordered to the military barracks at Plattsburg, N. Y., and a few days ago Lieutenant Ball came to New York to claim Miss Eno as his bride.

Lieutenant Ball is thirty-three years of age and Miss Eno is twenty-one.

Victim of Clarence Wood
Tells Story of Attack
Upon Her.

RUTHERFORD, N. J., April 28.—Recovering from the effect of the brutal blows showered upon her in her fight for honor against Clarence R. Wood, who, after holding a possee at bay, shot and killed himself in the Rutherford boat house late yesterday, Miss Anna Klipp was able today to tell the story of the struggle.

"Clarence and I were going fishing," she said. "When he reached the boat house he went in to get the cushions for the launch. He called to me to come and help him. As I entered he struck me a heavy blow with a short club. I staggered back, but as he came at me again I struck him full in the face and knocked him down."
"He rushed at me again, and laid open my head with a club. I struck him twice and staggered out of the boat house. The next thing I remember I was being carried into our house by my mother. "I was a fiend, and I am not sorry he is dead."

LAKE IN DESERT GROWING LARGER

SAN BERNARDINO, Cal., April 28.—The strange increase of Silver Lake on the desert is puzzling engineers connected with the Tonopah and Tidewater railroad, and is giving them a hard fight to save the tracks from inundation.
The lake is where El Mojave river reappears after flowing beneath the desert. The engineers are inclined to believe that the volume of water now welling up in the middle of the lake comes from a source not connected with El Mojave. Dikes have been erected to protect the tracks from the rapidly rising water.
