

CLAGETT SCORES MISS MAUS, AGAIN AND IS LOCKED UP

Girl Collapses After Visit of Former Prominent Patent Attorney.

FATHER CALLS IN THE POLICE

Judge Mullowny Surprised, and Sends Man of Strange Conduct Back to Asylum.

While a physician and a nurse worked to revive eighteen-year-old Bertha Maus, who had fallen into a dead faint at the prospect of again facing Maurice J. Clagett in the Police Court, Mr. Clagett, formerly a prominent patent attorney of Washington, was arraigned this morning before Judge Mullowny for breaking his peace bond by reappearing at the court and trying to gain an interview with the young woman.

The reappearance of Clagett in Police Court followed his trial there a little more than two weeks ago, when he was prosecuted at the instigation of O. S. Maus, of 1530 Thirtieth street northwest, for attempting to force an entrance into his home and threatening his daughter.

Surprise For Judge. Judge Mullowny expressed surprise at seeing Clagett in his court again, as he had committed him to Washington Asylum for observation on October 15, and had placed him under a bond of $500 to keep the peace.

Assistant District Attorney Given explained that the asylum physicians had declared Clagett free from insanity, but suffering from acute alcoholism. He was freed from the asylum two days after his entrance there.

"You may be sane, but you are irresponsible while you are under the influence of liquor, as you are now and as you have been since your release from the asylum," Judge Mullowny told Clagett. "Therefore I intend to send you to Washington Asylum, and I will see that you stay there until you are thoroughly sober. You are committed for sixty days, but you may get out sooner if I deem it wise and if you give $500 bond to keep the peace."

Bond May Be Forfeited. The former bond of $500 may be declared forfeited or reannounced if the $1,000 bond is given. This will be decided by Judge Mullowny, when an application for his release under the new provision is asked for.

Miss Maus was unable to appear in court today, and was excused on a certificate from her physician that he might be endangered by any additional exposure to the trial of Clagett.

Her father appeared to ask that some measures be taken so that his daughter be assured of honor.

"I was away when Clagett appeared at my home, kicked against the door, and demanded to see my wife," the witness said. "We called the policeman and managed to avert trouble."

"Last Tuesday my daughter saw this man on the street, and she was carried into Kamm's store and it was half an hour before she revived."

Try To Delude Him. Miss Katherine Delabar testified that Clagett had called at the office of Victor J. Evans & Co., patent attorneys, in the Evans building, and asked to see Miss Maus. Miss Delabar said she suspected who he was and after a hurried conference with one of the men in the office told Clagett that Miss Maus had not been at work that day.

"Mr. Clagett mustered under his breath, 'I happen to know better,'" Miss Delabar said, "and then went away. He appeared to be under the influence of liquor."

The young woman also testified that the news of Clagett's visit excited Miss Maus to go into another faint. The release of Clagett will be the signal for immediate legal action on the part of the father and brother of Miss Maus, if he attempts to see or to communicate with her again.

CAPITAL DOCTOR KILLS HIMSELF WITH REVOLVER

Despondency Over Ill Health Causes Henry M. Newman to Commit Suicide.

FIRES BULLET INTO HIS RIGHT TEMPLE

Physician for the Past Thirty Years and Member of Hospital Visiting Staff.

Clenching a small .22-caliber revolver in his right hand, Dr. Henry M. Newman, for thirty years a practicing physician in Washington, and a member of the visiting staff of Providence Hospital, was found dead this morning in the bed room of his home, 246 Pennsylvania avenue northwest.

The bullet entered the right temple, and, in spite of the small caliber of the weapon, probably caused instant death.

When Paul N. Atkins, a nephew, who made his home with the physician, went to his uncle's room to call him for breakfast about 7 o'clock, he found Dr. Newman, fully dressed, lying across the bed. Seeing the revolver and the blood-soaked bed clothes, Atkins hurried to the telephone and summoned Dr. Thomas F. Mallan, of 839 Connecticut avenue.

None Heard Fatal Shot. No one in the house heard a revolver shot during the night, but from the condition of the body Dr. Mallan thought the physician must have ended his life several hours before his body was found.

His health, it is believed, prompted Dr. Newman to end his life. Since the death of his mother, a year ago, the physician's health had steadily declined, and the fact that he lost weight steadily worried him considerably. During the last few months he was obliged to give up active practice, attending only to office calls.

Confined to the house for the last three days, he told friends who called to see him that he feared he would never get well. He never intimated, however, that he intended taking his life.

Upon the arrival of Coroner Nevitt a jury was summoned and an inquest held at the house without removing the body to the morgue. An official verdict of death by suicide was rendered by the jury.

Enjoyed Large Practice. Dr. Newman was a son of the late Dr. W. G. H. Newman, one of the leading physicians in this city twenty years ago. Dr. Newman was fifty-four years old, and had practiced medicine here since he graduated from college thirty years ago. He enjoyed a large practice up to the time his health failed, and stood high with the medical profession.

He was a member of the American Medical Association and the Medical Society of the District.

He was unmarried. Two sisters—Mrs. Sullivan, wife of former United States Senator Sullivan of Mississippi, and a Mrs. Perle, and a brother, Charles Newman, survive him.

No arrangements have been made for the funeral.

VICTORY TOO BIG FOR DEMOCRATIC WELFARE IN 1912

Majority Unwieldy Is Talk Three Days After Country-Wide Sweep.

HOUSE FIGURES NOW FIFTY-NINE

Election Discussion Simmers Down, and Presidential Probabilities Are Coming to Front.

By JOHN SNURE.

Reports from various parts of the country on the third day after election are concerned chiefly with the size of pluralities, with the results in a few close Congressional districts, with legislative and senatorial situations, and the like.

In essential particulars, there is little to change the complexion of things as they stood on the first day after the balloting.

The Democratic plurality in the House has settled down to fifty-nine, with possibilities of slight changes in either the Republican or the Democratic direction. In a few districts, only the official count can decide and there is no doubt several contests will result in close districts. There will doubtless be a contest over the results in the Twenty-sixth New York district where there seems to be a tie vote between Representative Alexander and Charles B. Smith, the Democratic candidate.

Governor Judson Harmon, of Ohio, has come out of the fight with a remarkable plurality. It amounts to more than 165,000. This is the largest ever given a Democratic candidate for governor in Ohio. Harmon's friends are jubilant. They think it makes him more formidable than ever as a candidate for 1912.

Wilson Also Jubilant. But Governor Harmon is not the only Democrat, who has the right to feel jubilant. For instance, Woodrow Wilson's plurality in New Jersey ranges about 50,000. This is a much larger figure than his friends expected. They were talking about 5,000 before election, and some of them hazarded 10,000. But few got above that.

As in the case of Harmon, the size of Wilson's plurality makes him more than ever a man to be reckoned with when it comes to considering 1912. One man who has been eliminated is Francis of Missouri, who has been beaten for the Senate. In connection with the election of Mayor Gaynor, of New York, for the Democratic nomination in 1912, it is of interest that he being talked of for the Senate from New York to succeed Senator Dewey. Judge Alton B. Parker has declared he does not want the Senatorship from his State.

Developments in the Massachusetts Senatorial situation point to the re-election of Senator Lodge. Thus far, no prominent Republican has been found who will run against Lodge for the Senate. Representative Butler Ames is willing to run but he could not get the support of the conservative Republicans in the Massachusetts legislature even if Lodge stepped down from office.

One of the surprising features of the election is the Democratic plurality in Wyoming. Former Senator Carey was elected on the Democratic ticket by over 5,000. This is explainable only as a revolt against the Republican machine which returned Senator Thomas H. Carter will be defeated for re-election.

Root Blocked For Bench. One of the interesting phases of the election results is that the carrying by the Democrats of the New York legislature will prevent the appointment of Senator Root to the Supreme Court. Some talk of this has been going the rounds. But if Root were to be appointed to the Supreme Court, that would make it incumbent on the New York legislature to elect a successor and this would mean two Democrats in the Senate from New York instead of one. Hence, Senator Root may be eliminated.

DEMOCRATS ATTACK POWERS' ELECTION

CALEB POWERS, Elected From the Eleventh Kentucky Congressional District.

Claim He Is Ineligible to Serve in Congress Because of Having Been Convicted of Alleged Complicity in the Assassination of Governor Goebel.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Nov. 11.—While Caleb Powers, twice convicted and twice pardoned for alleged complicity in the assassination of Gov. William Goebel, has been elected to represent the Eleventh district in the Congress of the United States, which meets on March 4, next, he may, after all, fail to realize the ambition of his life, as it is said that a concerted movement will be made by the Democratic delegation from Kentucky in Congress to attack his eligibility to the seat, on the ground that he has been charged and convicted of a felony and has never been acquitted by a jury.

While Powers holds the distinction of being twice pardoned, the first issued by W. S. Taylor, a few days after the assassination, was held null and void by the court.

He received a free and full pardon at the hands of Governor Wilson last year, which, it is held by some, has the same effect as an acquittal.

However, it is pointed out that the whole matter rests with Congress to determine, from which there can be no appeal.

MEXICANS CLASH WITH AMERICANS

Hostilities Between Guerrilla Bands Reported to Have Begun All Along the Border Between the Two Countries.

ARMED RURALS PARADE STREETS

MEXICO CITY, Nov. 11.—A squadron of picturesque Rurales has been called in from the cattle and "bad man" country. They are wearing buckskins and sombreros and patrolled the streets of this city today with their carbines swung across their saddles ready for instant use.

However, while quietness prevailed on the surface plans were going forward for a great mass meeting, which will be held on Sunday, when a boycott of Mexicans and Americans are employed indiscriminately, and it is feared that the dislike which has always existed will give way to gun battles typical of the old days.

MORE ARRESTS EXPECTED IN POISON CASE

Wife of Dying Millionaire Schenk Remains Silent in Wheeling Jail, But Detectives Allege They Have Prominent Men Under Surveillance.

SAID TO HAVE TAKEN MANY "JOY RIDES"

Accused Woman Paid Numerous Visits to a Soothsayer, and Fell Under His Influence, It Is Also Alleged. Prosecuting Attorney Sure of Conviction.

Late Developments in Wheeling Poison Mystery

Rumor that two of Wheeling's most prominent business men will be arrested in connection with the poisoning by arsenic of John O. Schenk, millionaire pork packer, is latest sensation in the mystery.

Mrs. Laura Farnsworth Schenk, charged with the poisoning of her husband, refuses, in her comfortably furnished cell at the county jail, to either affirm or deny her guilt.

"She is where she ought to be," Schenk, who is fighting for his life at the North Wheeling Hospital, is alleged to have said, when informed that his wife is under arrest, charged with his poisoning. Schenk's relatives declared that regardless of the outcome of his illness, they will insist upon a prosecution of Mrs. Schenk.

By THEODORE TILLER.

WHEELING, W. Va., Nov. 11.—While her millionaire husband fights a battle for life at the North Wheeling Hospital, as physicians work to rid his system of the arsenic that has crept into it day by day, Mrs. Laura Farnsworth Schenk—silent, smiling, neither affirming nor denying her guilt—sits a prisoner at the county jail today, and awaits Mr. Schenk's recovery or death.

All the morning Mrs. Schenk rocked to and fro, to and fro, wrapped in her own thoughts and keeping her own counsel. Rocking chairs do not ordinarily belong to the furniture equipment of a jail, but then Mrs. Schenk is the wife of a millionaire pork packer, and she has been permitted to make her cell as comfortable as possible, following her sensational arrest yesterday.

Visited a Soothsayer. The police learned today that Mrs. Schenk has been paying frequent visits recently to a soothsayer, of Wheeling. These visits, it is claimed, affected her strangely.

Another sensational incident in the case is the possibility of the arrest of a well-known Wheeling professional man and a Wheeling business man, who are alleged to have been seen on "joy rides" with Mrs. Schenk. The Schenk chauffeur has been enjoined to secrecy by Prosecuting Attorney J. B. Handlan, of this county. Mr. Handlan made the following statement today:

"I believe we positively will secure a conviction in this case. The evidence in hand is sufficient in my mind to combat anything that might be brought to bear by the defense."

"Previous to Mrs. Schenk's arrest, I, with the detective agency, weighed every atom of evidence carefully, then we decided to act. As yet we have not seen fit to show our hand. The proper time for that will be when the case is brought to trial."

J. P. O'Brien, counsel for Mrs. Schenk, said:

"Mrs. Schenk is guiltless. She knew nothing whatever of the poisoning until after she was arrested. The accusations against her are outrageous. She is innocent, and we will be prepared to prove that such is the case."

Former Domestic. Thirteen years ago the present Mrs. Schenk was employed as a domestic. Her marriage to a millionaire created much comment. After she was taken in custody yesterday, charged with the subtle poisoning of her husband, who has been ill for weeks and whose continual loss of strength at first baffled the physicians Mrs. Schenk was permitted to drive in a cab to her palatial home on the Island, Wheeling's finest residential section, and to close her mansion.

These she told her children good-bye. The two Schenk children—Virginia, aged twelve, and Robert, aged seven—have been sent to the home of relatives at Fulton. They are yet unaware of the arrest of their mother and the desperate illness of their father.

Before she turned the key to lock the doorway to her fine home, Mrs. Schenk collected a number of soft pillows, toilet articles and an upholstered rocking chair, which she carried with her to jail. Then she sent for her attorney's and sealed her lips.

Keeps in Hospital. John O. Schenk has just been acquainted with the nature of his illness. When he was told that his wife had been accused of slowly poisoning him, Schenk wept. Then he is reported to have said: "Well, she is where she ought to be."

Schenk's relatives say that regardless of the outcome of his illness they will insist on a prosecution of Mrs. Schenk.

No more sensational case has ever aroused Wheeling and the State of West Virginia. There are rumors today that the arrests of two of Wheeling's most prominent business men are to follow and that they will be incarcerated along with Mrs. Schenk. A motive of most sinister character is alleged to be behind the attempted undoing of the wealthy meat man.

Schenk is the president of the Schenk Packing Company. He is worth more than $1,000,000 and has an annual income of $60,000. His home is one of the most magnificent in this State of wealthy coal, iron and beef barons. Mrs. Schenk has been afforded every luxury of life and, so far as the outside world knows, the domestic relations of the couple have been ideal, despite the former differences in their social station.

Twenty-three years ago, Miss Laura Farnsworth came to Wheeling from Friendly, Tyler county, this State. at

FIVE PERSONS SHOT FIGHTING BANDITS

CICERO, Ill., Nov. 11.—Shot down in an affray with three desperate bandits, one of whom will be the result of the melee, four other persons are wounded here today, two probably fatally.

The whole town was aroused by the firing, and hundreds of citizens set out in pursuit of the two bandits who fled. The wounded:

Louis Belmont, proprietor of a saloon the bandits raved, shot through shoulder, nose broken.

Fred Kob, shot in right side, hand and wrist, may die.

John Kane, policeman, shot in breast, arm, shoulder, and stomach. May die.

Millie Kohler, shot in face.

Unidentified robber, shot through head, will die.

The three-hold-ups entered Belmont's saloon early today while Kop and the Kohler woman were standing at the bar. As Belmont started to serve the drinks they ordered, the saloon man was ordered to throw up his hands.

Instead of complying, he reached for a gun and was felled with a "billy," which smashed his nose. Then all three

TAWNEY IS IN TOWN, TALKS OF ECONOMY

Chairman Tawney, of the House Committee on Appropriations, stopped in Washington today on his way to Panama, and held a conference with Secretary MacVeagh, of the Treasury. With members of the House Committee on Appropriations and Interstate and Foreign Commerce he will sail on the Yorkton from New York for Panama tomorrow.

Eight days will be spent on the Isthmus in an investigation of the financial need of the canal work to be provided for in the appropriation bill next winter.

"A saving of $11,000,000," said Tawney, "was the result of a similar trip made a year ago. Despite this saving there was no deficiency and the work was not delayed."

He said that Colonel Getchell did everything in his power to hold down expenses. Tawney expressed the opinion that visits to the canal works by Congressmen having authority over appropriations tended to spread a general influence among canal officials in favor of economy.
