

Miss Fola La Follette Is Wedded to George Middleton at Parents' Home

Only Members of Immediate Families Attend Ceremony.

In the presence of only the members of the two immediate families, the marriage of Miss Fola La Follette, daughter of the Senator of Wisconsin and Mrs. Robert M. La Follette, and George Middleton, of New York, took place today at 12 o'clock, at the home of the bride's parents in Wyoming avenue.

The Rev. U. G. B. Pierce, chaplain of the United States Senate and pastor of All-Souls' Unitarian Church, solemnized the ceremony.

Both bride and bridegroom were unattended, and the bride wore her traveling suit of dark blue cloth.

No invitations were sent out for the wedding, and there will be no announcement cards.

After an informal wedding breakfast, which was served immediately after the ceremony, Mr. and Mrs. Middleton left for their future home in New York.

The simplicity of today's wedding was characteristic. Miss La Follette inherits from her famous father and her gifted mother strongly marked democratic convictions and simple tastes coupled with displeasure at display and ostentation.

Miss La Follette's views on this way had definite illustration when she was an undergraduate at the University of Wisconsin.

All the sororities of that institution were eager to "pledge" her, fully as much for herself as for the prestige which the sorority would achieve if it could say that the daughter of the governor of the state was a member.

But Miss La Follette would join none. She disapproved of sororities on principle. Miss La Follette received her baccalaureate in arts in 1904. Her student career was marked by distinction in studies and by activity in college dramatic circles.

In the fall of that year, Miss La Follette became a seasonal actress, securing a place in the company of Ada Rehan, then making her last tour as Katherine in "The Taming of the Shrew."

After the tour, she appeared in support of Alice Fisher, famous in "Jack," the "School for Husbands," by Stanislaus Stange, being Miss Fletch in "The Sign of the Cross."

Later Miss La Follette became leading woman for Leo Dietrichstein for two or three seasons and last fall was given the leading feminine role in Percy Mackaye's "The Scarecrow."

Miss La Follette does not intend to give up the stage because she has married. On the contrary she will resume playing in "The Scarecrow" in the course of four or five days.

Part of the reason for her return to the stage is that she has been so long in part, an inheritance, for it is well known that Miss La Follette long hesitated between the stage and the law and politics, and only gave up the stage because he was advised that his future was not great enough for heroic roles.

Mr. Middleton also is interested in the stage, is a dramatist himself in fact. He wrote the play, "The House of a Thousand Candles," from the Meredith Nicholson novel; collaborated with Paul Keeler in a play, "The Sign of the Cross," and is the author of several other accepted and successful dramas.

A book of his plays with the title "Embers," is soon to be published. Mr. Middleton is a member of The Players and other New York clubs.

Miss Isabella P. Smith and W. W. Stuart married.

Last evening, at 8 o'clock, the marriage of Miss Isabella Pallen Smith, the daughter of Mrs. Isabella Pallen Smith, to William Warwick Stuart, took place in St. Thomas' Episcopal Church.

The Rev. George F. Ducey, rector of St. Stephen's Church, officiating in the presence of a large gathering of relatives and friends.

Palms, ferns, and white chrysanthemums adorned the church for the occasion. While the guests were being seated, selections from "Tales of Hoffman" were played by the organist of the church, and during the ceremony "Meditation," from "Thais," was softly played.

The bride, who was escorted and given in marriage by her brother, Irwin Z. Smith, of St. Louis, wore a beautiful gown of white satin draped in Irish lace, which has been in the family for years. Her tulle veil was arranged with a spray of orange blossoms, and she carried a shower bouquet of bride roses and lilies of the valley. Her only ornament was a string of pearls, the gift of her brother.

Mrs. Louise Yost, sister of the bridegroom, was the matron of honor. She wore a becoming gown of yellow satin veiled in crepe meteor embroidered on the bodice and sleeves in gold, and carried an armful of yellow chrysanthemums.

William I. Deming was best man for Mr. Stuart, and the ushers were Dr. Dwight Gordon Smith, of Washington, and Granville Smith, of Baltimore, brothers of the bride; Louis A. Yost, and Chris Coe Deming.

A large reception at the bride's home, 1748 S street, followed the ceremony at the church. The house was adorned for the occasion in autumn leaves, palms, and clusters of white and yellow chrysanthemums. Mrs. Smith, who assisted her son-in-law and daughter in receiving their guests, wore a hand-embroidered gown of gray crepe meteor with trimmings of princess lace. She wore a dog collar of pearls and topaz, an heirloom of Russian jewelry which has been in her family for over three hundred years.

Mrs. Virginia Lee Stuart, mother of the bridegroom, who also was present at the reception, wore a gown of black chintilly lace over white satin. Mrs. Granville Smith wore white satin veiled in white chiffon. Mrs. Dwight Gordon Smith was in embroidered blue crepe de chine, and Mrs. Frederick Smith Pickett was in black velvet and rose point lace.

After the reception Mr. and Mrs. Stuart left Washington for a wedding trip. Mrs. Stuart traveled in a tailored suit of brown cloth with a hat of the same shade. Upon their return to Washington they will be at home at 1748 S street after December 1.

Among those from out of town who attended the wedding were Mr. and Mrs. Granville Smith, of Baltimore; Mrs. Frederick Smith Pickett and her son, Dr. Frederick Smith Pickett, of Philadelphia, and Irwin Z. Smith, of St. Louis.
