

HERE'S A BRAND NEW FUNNY PICTURE SERIES

HOME WANTED

Copyright, 1913, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.

SOCIETY CHRONICLES

SANDMAN STORIES

JULIA MURDOCK'S GOSSIP

President and Mrs. Taft Bid Farewell To Scores of Friends at White House

Last Day of Their Stay in the National Capital Will Be Most Strenuous.

The last day of the President and Mrs. Taft in the White House will be quite as strenuous as their first, and if their time permitted, they could receive a procession of people miles long, who would like to touch them God speed.

Mrs. Taft will be the guest of the officers of the Woman's Suffrage parade in their box this afternoon.

Later in the afternoon, the President and Mrs. Taft will receive the heads of embassies and legations, who call to bid them good by.

At 6 o'clock, the President-elect and Mrs. Wilson will call upon the President and Mrs. Taft, at the White House.

The President and Mrs. Taft will be entertained at dinner tonight by Miss Wilson.

Mrs. Taft will be the guest for whom Mr. and Mrs. Chandler Hale will entertain guests at dinner tonight.

Miss Taft spent the morning in receiving her girl friends and in making hurried calls.

Mr. and Mrs. William McC. Wilson entertained at dinner last night in one of the private dining rooms at the Shoreham, having as guests Mr. and Mrs. John A. Wilson, Edwin Wilson, Mr. and Mrs. Alfred McC. Wilson, Miss Elizabeth Wilson, and Wayne Blakely, and little Miss Elizabeth Wilson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Wilson.

Mr. and Mrs. William McC. Wilson have arrived from Franklin, Pa., and are at the Shoreham, where they joined other members of the Wilson family.

Mrs. Wilson is well known in Washington as Miss Gilly Sibbey, daughter of former Congressman J. C. Sibbey of Franklin, Pa.

Senator O'Gorman of New York was joined by the Shoreham yesterday by Mrs. O'Gorman and the Misses O'Gorman.

The President and Council of the North Carolina Society of Washington have issued an invitation to all North Carolinians in Washington to an informal reception they are giving this evening at the Confederate Veterans' Association Hall, 1322 Vermont avenue, from 7:30 until 9:30 o'clock, in compliment to the governor of North Carolina.

Senator and Mrs. Simmons and Senator and Mrs. Overman, the other members of the North Carolina delegation in Congress and their wives, and Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Daniels will receive the guests, assisted by the reception committee, which includes, J. A. Holmes, president; Dr. John W. Stewart, A. T. Hill, G. D. Ellsworth, Parker R. Anderson, R. O. E. Davis, C. W. Huske, Thomas M. Robertson, W. E. Eller, Dr. Gilmer Brenizer, and W. F. Tomlinson.

Maj. Gen. and Mrs. Albert L. Mills have as guests for the week, Clark Howell, editor of the Atlanta Constitution, and Mrs. Howell, who arrived here at noon.

After luncheon at the home of General and Mrs. Mills, Mr. and Mrs. Howell went to the Ellipse to watch the general review of the Cavalry Cadets, who are here as the escort of the Vice President-elect at the inaugural ceremonies tomorrow. Later in the day, General and Mrs. Mills and their guests, called upon the Vice President-elect and Mrs. Marshall at the Shoreham.

Mrs. Lamar Lipscomb, of Georgia, who is staying at the New Willard, will entertain at an informal tea there this afternoon, the greater number of her guests being the Southerners now visiting in the city.

Colonel and Mrs. John L. Clem will entertain a dinner party at Rauscher's tomorrow night.

On Thursday a party of Congressional people including Congressman and Mrs. E. R. Bhatrack of Ohio, Congressman and Mrs. L. P. Padgett of Tennessee, Congressman and Mrs. E. W. Roberts of Massachusetts, Congressman and Mrs. Trumble and Miss Trumble of Georgia, and Congressman and Mrs. S. A. Witherston of Mississippi, will sail from New York for a trip to Cuba and Panama.

MRS. HENRY WHITE.

The former Ambassador to France and Mrs. Henry White will entertain at dinner this evening.

Miss Flora Wilson, daughter of the Secretary of Agriculture, entertained at luncheon today at the New Willard.

Her guests were Madame Pezet, Senator Dona Luiz Mendes, Senora Ramona Lefevre, Madame Haug, Mrs. Henry F. Dimock, Mrs. Herrick of Paris, Mrs. DeWitt Tallmage, Mrs. Claude Swanson, Mrs. William Bailey Lamar, Mrs. Horace Bennett of Denver, Mrs. Ritchie of New York, Mrs. George W. Fairchild, Mrs. N. W. Harris of New York, Mrs. Benjamin Micou, Mrs. Charles McKenney, Mrs. Ronalds-French of London, Mrs. William Bailey Horton, Mrs. Jacob M. Dickinson, Miss Black of New York, and Miss Grace Allen of Asheville, N. C.

Yesterday was turned into a regular Cabinet reception day, hundreds of their friends in official and resident society calling to pay their farewell respects.

Mrs. MacVeagh received several hundred visitors following the luncheon which she and the Secretary gave for the President and Mrs. Taft, and members of the Cabinet. The great organ played during the afternoon.

The Secretary of War and Mrs. Stimson also received hundreds of callers, and the home of the Secretary of the Navy and Mrs. Meyer was also filled with visitors during the afternoon.

Mrs. Christian Haug entertains at a dinner tonight at which the Attorney General will be a guest, and a number of Southern people now in town.

The Vice President and Mrs. Marshall will be the guests of honor at a dinner tonight with Mr. and Mrs. John E. Lamb, and Mr. and Mrs. T. M. Foley, of Terre Haute, as hosts. The Indiana delegation in the Senate and House and a few other Indiana people will form the party, which will be entertained at the New Willard.

Madame Pezet was at home yesterday afternoon at the Peruvian legation, receiving a large number of visitors from the Diplomatic Corps and resident and official society.

The marriage of Mrs. Frank Ellis, of Cincinnati and Washington, and Glet Blair, took place at noon today in New York at the Episcopal Church of the Ascension, the Rev. Percy Stickney Grant officiating in the presence of a small gathering of relatives and a few intimate friends. Tomorrow Mr. Blair and his bride will sail for Europe and upon their return will reside at the historic old Blair house in Pennsylvania avenue.

Mrs. E. W. Samuel, of Mount Carmel, Pa., wife of Congressman Samuel, has arrived in Washington for the inauguration and is stopping at 1139 Sixth street.

Indiana and North Carolina Societies Invited to Reception to Governors Tonight.

The District of Columbia Branch of the Southern League of the Woman's Wilson and Marshall Organization extended an invitation to the Indiana Society and the North Carolina Society, in addition to all local and visiting Democrats, to attend the reception which they are giving this evening at the New Willard in compliment to the visiting governors. The reception will begin at 8 and continue until 11 o'clock, thereby making it possible for guests to attend the reception which the Indiana and North Carolina societies are giving this evening also.

Mrs. Hewitt Tomlin, of Jackson, Tenn., and Miss Emily Withers are the latest additions to the receiving line for this evening at the reception.

Mr. and Mrs. Dean Caldwell entertained at luncheon today at the University Club in honor of Gov. Charles R. Miller of Delaware and Mrs. Miller, and President Joseph Swain, of Swarthmore College, and Mrs. Swain, when all the guests as well as the hosts were graduates of Swarthmore College.

The decorations, which were of deep red roses and white lilies, carried out the college color.

The additional guests were Congressman and Mrs. A. Mitchell Palmer of Pennsylvania; Mr. and Mrs. W. S. Knox, Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Pyle Cochran, Thomas Miller, secretary of state of Delaware, and S. D. Caldwell.

Miss Caroline H. Howland and her brother, Hewitt Howland, arrived in Washington yesterday to remain as the guests of the President-elect and Mrs. Wilson, at the Shoreham, until after the inauguration.

Mr. and Mrs. Edson Bradley will have more than 600 West Point cadets and officers at luncheon with them tomorrow. Forty girl friends of Mrs. Bradley will assist her in the entertainment of the cadets. It was the desire of Mr. and Mrs. Bradley to have some members of the families of the cadets meet them at the luncheon, but the party would have grown into thousands, and they were compelled to keep the list strictly confined to the cadets and the forty other invited guests.

Mrs. Wickenshaw, wife of the Attorney General left Washington today for New York. She has had an attack of grip, and her physicians urged her to retire from the social engagements which would have filled her time from now until she sails with the Attorney General for a trip around the world.

Mrs. Samuel C. Adler and daughter, Miss Beulah F. Adler, are visiting Mr. and Mrs. V. B. Hillyard, 124 Tenth street northwest. This is the first visit Mrs. Adler has made to Washington since she moved from here, eight years ago. She now resides at 22 West Ninety-seventh street, New York city.

Mr. and Mrs. Hewitt T. Tomlin, of Jackson, Tenn., have arrived in Washington for the week and are stopping at 142 Massachusetts avenue.

President Joseph Swain, of Swarthmore College, and Mrs. Swain are in Washington for the inauguration guests of Mr. and Mrs. Dean Caldwell, in West Chevy Chase.

Miss Pauline Wagner, of Cincinnati, has arrived in Washington for the week and is the guest of Mrs. Joseph Stranburger, in Wyoming avenue.

Mrs. Herbert Rudbeck and her daughter, Miss Hazel Rudbeck, and Miss Alice Rudbeck, of Baltimore, have arrived in Washington for the inauguration and are visiting Mrs. Polst in Maryland avenue.

Miss Lucy Quarrier, Miss Elizabeth Quarrier, and Miss Janet Laidley, of Charleston, W. Va., are in Washington for the inauguration and are stopping at 125 G street.

For The Times' Children Just Before It's Bedtime

HANS AND THE WEATHER WITCH.

"HANS, Hans, I am going to market and you must stay at home and look after things while I am gone," cried the good Dutch mother to her fat son one bright morning.

Hans only nodded his head and went on eating milk and bread. "And you must not go in the cupboard to scatter things around," continued the woman. "Don't touch a thing while I am gone." So she put on her blue cap, and, taking her basket, set out to the town whose white spires shone in the distance.

For a while Hans was satisfied, but as soon as he had finished his bowl of milk he began to grumble at the weather. It was always too hot or too cold or too rainy or too dry for him. The weather never did suit him, no matter what it was.

When he had finished out a big cake he wrapped his coat about it and started to the woods.

"It is so much nicer to eat while lying under a tree on the grass," he said. So down on the sod he dropped and placed the cake between his knees. Then he began to eat as if he would never get enough.

"You greedy thing," said a rough voice at his side. And from behind the tree came a curious old woman all dressed in strange fluffy cloth. This cloth was black, but it swung around in dozens of odd-looking folds. On her head was a green cap, and in her hand a broom.

"I am hungry," said the old woman, "and I will take this bit of cake. You have had enough for one boy already," and she put the cake in her mouth.

"Am the Weather Witch," she kept on, "and it is my duty to attend to what the clouds are doing. I must hurry home now, and it has been sunny for five days, and people need a little rain. But as I need a boy, I think I will take you with me." And she grabbed Hans by the ears, and dragged him up a high mountain to a queer, round house on the top.

Here in a little room were dozens of boxes stuck in the wall, and from each stuck out a long handle. On one box was written, "Snow," on another "Rain," on another "Cold," and on the last two "Heat" and "Fog."

"I am going to leave you here a few hours to see that no one touches these handles and mixes the weather up," said the witch as she banged Hans down into a hard chair. "Now, mind me! Stay in that chair and don't touch a thing in the room. I know what a habit you have of fooling with other people's things, but you had better not try that with me." Hans was beginning to get hungry again and thought he might be able to find something to eat in the boxes.

So he ran over to the first box and pulled the long handle. And something did happen quick. It was the box marked rain, and a heavy mist rolled over the land. It washed the fields and flooded the towns, and Hans could see the people rushing from their homes in fear.

So with a quick jerk he grabbed the handle of the "heat" box. One swift pull and the cold was gone. The sun came out bright and hot and the muddy roads dried up so fast that people and horses got stuck in them.

"That won't do at all," cried Hans. "I think I will turn on the 'fog' handle." So he did, and a heavy mist rolled over the land. People could not see how to get about, and the ships ran into each other in the bay.

"Well, I seem to be making a nice mess of it," said Hans in despair. "But here's one more try," and he pulled the "cold" handle. In a moment the whole land was a sheet of ice and people walking about half frozen.

"I think I will run home out of this," cried Hans. "I have done enough damage by attending to other's business and messing in other people's things," and he started to run. By the time he got to the door the witch, who was coming in a hurry, saw him and started after him with her broom. Hans ran fast, but she chased even faster. And just as she was about to crack him on the head he woke and found he was under the tree and a squirrel eating the last crumb of the stolen cake.

But as he sighed and he started up briskly, "I am glad that was only a dream. I will never grumble about the weather any more, and I am going to get mother's cupboard alone from now on."

So in after years he grew up to be a fine boy, who always attended to his own business and let alone that of other people.

WENT ON EATING MILK AND BREAD

Copyright, 1913, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.

Julia Dean Admits to Julia Murdock That She Is In Favor of Suffrage

Praises Band of Brave Women Who 'Hiked' From New York to National Capital.

It is of especial interest just at present to note the fact that Julia Dean, who spent three successive and successful seasons in Washington when associated with the Columbia Stock Company, and who is favorably known for other dramatic achievements, owns up to being a suffragette. It is her one regret that she was not able to be in Washington to greet the "hikers" last Friday, and add her words of congratulation to the little band of women who braved the exposure of the long trip from New York to Washington.

Miss Dean says she is not of the militant type. The arguments Miss Dean advances for her attitude toward equal suffrage smack of reason and rational forethought, and the character she portrays in "Bought and Paid For," in which she is to be seen this week in the Belasco Theater, is but one of the manifold illustrations whereby a woman must lay claim to some form of independence.

Miss Dean fixes her convictions on the very logical fact that if a woman can be regarded as a state of betwixt, and because of her sex, she should not be handicapped or retarded in her endeavors and undertakings.

Refers to Claims Set by Statisticians. "Statisticians, who have weighed both sides of the argument," she says, "claim that the business women of the world today are rated higher for integrity and reliability than are men; inasmuch as they are more honest, more painstaking in what they set out to do, and are not given to intervals of debauchery, a trinity of conditions that makes her an asset in the field of commercialism."

Miss Dean always did, still does, and always will regard the home as the proper place for a woman, provided tranquility reigns within its walls. "But when the fixed rules of domesticity become shattered and deformed, it is then a woman is duty-bound to claim her independence, a prerogative that she is justly entitled to," she says.

The masculine affairs of the actress, who clamors for a place at the polls, not knowing wherein she would be benefited by this privilege, and furthermore lends herself to conditions that hold her up to ridicule, has no place in my rostrum of reform.

Miss Dean always did, still does, and always will regard the home as the proper place for a woman, provided tranquility reigns within its walls. "But when the fixed rules of domesticity become shattered and deformed, it is then a woman is duty-bound to claim her independence, a prerogative that she is justly entitled to," she says.

The masculine affairs of the actress, who clamors for a place at the polls, not knowing wherein she would be benefited by this privilege, and furthermore lends herself to conditions that hold her up to ridicule, has no place in my rostrum of reform.

Miss Dean always did, still does, and always will regard the home as the proper place for a woman, provided tranquility reigns within its walls. "But when the fixed rules of domesticity become shattered and deformed, it is then a woman is duty-bound to claim her independence, a prerogative that she is justly entitled to," she says.

The masculine affairs of the actress, who clamors for a place at the polls, not knowing wherein she would be benefited by this privilege, and furthermore lends herself to conditions that hold her up to ridicule, has no place in my rostrum of reform.

Miss Dean always did, still does, and always will regard the home as the proper place for a woman, provided tranquility reigns within its walls. "But when the fixed rules of domesticity become shattered and deformed, it is then a woman is duty-bound to claim her independence, a prerogative that she is justly entitled to," she says.

The masculine affairs of the actress, who clamors for a place at the polls, not knowing wherein she would be benefited by this privilege, and furthermore lends herself to conditions that hold her up to ridicule, has no place in my rostrum of reform.

Miss Dean always did, still does, and always will regard the home as the proper place for a woman, provided tranquility reigns within its walls. "But when the fixed rules of domesticity become shattered and deformed, it is then a woman is duty-bound to claim her independence, a prerogative that she is justly entitled to," she says.

The masculine affairs of the actress, who clamors for a place at the polls, not knowing wherein she would be benefited by this privilege, and furthermore lends herself to conditions that hold her up to ridicule, has no place in my rostrum of reform.

Miss Dean always did, still does, and always will regard the home as the proper place for a woman, provided tranquility reigns within its walls. "But when the fixed rules of domesticity become shattered and deformed, it is then a woman is duty-bound to claim her independence, a prerogative that she is justly entitled to," she says.

The masculine affairs of the actress, who clamors for a place at the polls, not knowing wherein she would be benefited by this privilege, and furthermore lends herself to conditions that hold her up to ridicule, has no place in my rostrum of reform.

JULIA DEAN.

of the hatchet incapable of even handling a duster, to say nothing of presiding over a household, and says "such misguided women can only be regarded as a state of betwixt, and weak to dicate in affairs of civic and too strong-minded to bring happiness to the freeds. When a woman forgets all claim to the duty and demeanor befitting her walk in life, she has a through ticket on the tabernacle of ruin, and a woman's chances of scoring, who digresses from the established orbits allotted her, is likely to lose out instead of advancing her condition in life.

But Former Popular Member of the Columbia Players Not of Militant Type.

"Joan of Arc, an history teacher, had her fing, but her achievement, if it can be regarded as such, gave her a niche in the archives of history. It is true, but how much more commanding is the woman who creates a life instead of recording it," she continued.

"An understanding between the sex is all that is required to better conditions and revolve the caps of congeniality," concluded Miss Dean.

"Know yourself before you undertake to pry into the affairs of thy neighbor is one of Miss Dean's ways of reasoning out this intricate problem. "If you cannot handle yourself," says Miss Dean, "there is little chance of your being a success when it comes to the handling of other people or their affairs. It is human nature to be susceptible to some weakness, but beware of an over-accumulation of habits, if you would retain your mental balance."

JULIA MURDOCK

DURING THE INAUGURAL PARADE Allen's Foot-Ease

The antiseptic powder for Tired, Tender, Aching, Swollen Feet. It instantly takes the sting out of corns and bunions, soothes the feet and makes walking a delight. Allen's Foot-Ease makes the walking of new shoes feel easy and prevents blisters, sore and callous spots. The standard remedy for nearly a quarter century. Sold Everywhere. Do not accept any substitutes. For FREE Sample address, Allen S. Ostrand, 135 Rev. St. N. Y.

HOME WORKERS' MARKET PLACE

The purpose of this section is to make it possible for women in occupations which they carry on at home to offer, first hand and at a low advertising cost to them, various articles of handiwork, needlework, home made delicacies, confections, personal service, etc., to Times readers. The offers here made to you, the readers of The Times, may include just the very thing you have wanted and looked for in vain. Samples of all goods advertised in this section may be seen and bought at Room 425 Munsey Building, where the Polly Frimm exhibition, is now being held.

Advertisements for various home services including Dressmaking, Crocheting, Sewing, and other crafts.

Nat Goodwin's Leading Woman Gets Divorce

BALTIMORE, Md., March 3.—Marjorie Moreland, leading woman with Nat Goodwin, has obtained a divorce from her husband, Charles N. Doughty. Witnesses testified that Doughty ill treated his wife, contributed nothing to her support, and finally abandoned her.

Doughty, who is a real estate man of San Diego, Cal., brought suit last December for $2,500 damages against Nat Goodwin for the alleged alienation of his wife's affections.

LOCAL MENTION

"A Great War Drama" Today. Virginia Theatre.

Wilson's Famous Chocolates 1336 F St. N. W.

NOTICE TO WOMEN Falling hair, oily hair, dandruff, tight scalp, etc., corrected by experts at the office.

HATTIE M. SHACKLETTE 1002-4 F St. N. W. Phone No. 3474. Only Women and Children.

WEDDING RECEPTIONS FINE CATERING Friends BANQUET PARLORS 815 10th St. N. W. TIMES WANT ADS BRING RESULTS

Ask for Armour's Bouillon Cubes

