

POLICE UNABLE TO GET CLUE TO THIEF

Woman Who Was Robbed of Gems Only One of Many Who Lose Valuables.

No clue to the identity of the pick-pocket who robbed Mrs. P. J. Drury of $400 worth of diamonds in Center Market yesterday has been found by the police. Mrs. Drury can recall no person who acted suspiciously in the crowd. Mrs. Drury was standing before a flower stand when she noticed a gold encased fountain pen on the floor. Stopping to pick it up, she saw that it had her own. A hasty examination of her handbag revealed the fact that it had been opened and her purse, containing a camera bag with her jewels, was missing. A jeweled rosary was hanging half way out of the bag. The missing pieces included Mrs. Drury's engagement ring, and other gifts from her husband, which she declares were invaluable through association. She had refused to put them in a safety deposit box because she felt that they were safer with her. Mrs. James E. Hibbs, of 1524 Fifteenth street, also lost her purse in the market yesterday. She does not know whether it was dropped or stolen. It contained only a small amount of money and a bunch of keys. Thomas Lucas, of 420 Twelfth street northeast, reported to the police of the Ninth precinct, last night, that an unknown man picked his pocket of $5 while he was standing at Fifteenth and H streets, early last night. Several other minor thefts were reported to the police. A diamond ring, valued at $125, was stolen from the home of Mrs. Walter J. Fenny, of 1123 Lamont street northwest. Mrs. J. W. Orme, of 2217 Sixteenth street northwest, reported the theft of a silver watch and chain from a pew in the Sacred Heart Church, fourteenth street and Park road, Friday night. Horace Gordon, of 1234 S street northwest, lost a suit of clothes and a white vest from the National Hotel. Vacant houses at 25 Elm street and 223 Oakdale street northeast were robbed of fixtures. Break thieves entered the home of Charles R. Newman, 2833 Eighteenth street northwest, early this morning, by an unfastened rear window, stole $100 and stole $3 in bills from a purse left on a desk in the dining room. Two coats, one light brown and one blue, were also missing.

Paint and Powder Club To Feature New Dances

The feature of "Florodora," a musical comedy to be given by the Paint and Powder Club at the Belasco Theater on Friday, March 22, will be the introduction of a number of dances, ranging from the stately folk dances to the modern turkey trot and tango. The dances, which do not appear regularly in the play, have been arranged by A. V. Tuttle, director of the ballet, and T. Robert Jenkins, chairman of the committee on dancing. One of the most elaborate dances will be the French military dance, in which three men and three "girls" will take part. The costumes in the play will be the most elaborate. Those who will participate in this dance are F. Beacham, W. L. Underh, G. B. Shaw, F. M. Boyd, E. Loudensinger, and Dr. Lyman H. Whitte. The solo dance given by Dr. Whitte promises to be the most interesting. Whitte will appear in female costume, and his execution of the classic waltz might well be envied by a professional. Not since Harry Price appeared in the productions of the Paint and Powder Club has the organization boasted such a graceful dancer. Among the other dances will be the Zulu dance, by J. H. Kuhns; the Booleooleo dances, by ten members of the club; a tango dance called the Chevy Chase, by Dr. Kuhns and Harry Pilsen; and Nellie Huss and Baby Deslys; and the dance of the Pierrots.

New Hampshire Senator Is Strong Democrat

When Senator Henry F. Hollis of New Hampshire took the oath of office as a Senator in the Grand Old Party, the Senate was represented in the upper house by a Democrat for the first time in fifty-eight years. Senator Hollis is a fellow townsman of Senator Gallinger. The latter is a strong conservative. Senator Hollis is a pronounced progressive. He is for tariff revision, direct election of Senators, a larger navy, woman's suffrage, and the keeping by the Democratic party of all its pledges. Mrs. Hollis, with her son and daughter, are in Mexico, where the children are studying. Later, they will come to Washington.

Today Marks Birth Of Charles Wyndham

This is the seventy-second birthday of Sir Charles Wyndham, the eminent Anglo-Saxon actor, who was born in 1841. He intended to enter the medical profession, but his intentions were abandoned soon after he began his studies. Instead, he came to America and fought in the Union army in the civil war. His first appearance as an actor was made in the company of John Wilkes Booth, the assassin of President Lincoln. Then he returned to London. He built Wyndham's Theater, but his fame is chiefly associated with his long and successful management of the Criterion Theater in the same city. Cardinal Bourne, archbishop of Westminster, is fifty-two years of age today, and Sir Donald D. Mann, the Canadian railroad builder, has reached his forty-seventh year. The Rev. Thomas H. Kennedy, rector of the North American College at Rome, is fifty-three years old.

THE TIMES' DAILY SERIAL STORY. The Destroying Angel

By Louis Joseph Vance

Synopsis of Preceding Chapters. Hugh Morton Whitaker, a young lawyer, has been chosen by specialists as a martyr. He goes to a hotel, determined to end his life, and there meets a woman who is about to commit suicide because she has been deserted by a man who has left her to be married, but who disappeared just after they started. Whitaker offers to marry her. Mary Lorraine, to protect her good name, and they are married as Mr. and Mrs. Morton. Immediately after the ceremony they go separate ways. By a curious twist of fate Whitaker remains in health, but is reported drowned in the South sea. After six prosperous years in Australia he returns to New York just in time to attend the farewell performance of Sara Law, a prominent theatrical star, who is leaving the stage to become the wife of Carter Drummond, Whitaker's lawyer. In the midst of the play, the actress recognizes Whitaker as her supposedly dead husband and the curtain is hastily rung down. Drummond is reported to have leaped to his death from High Bridge. A retired detective named Ember comes to Whitaker with the astounding news that he knows the whole story. He loves with Whitaker's wife, and, furthermore, that he has seen Drummond since his reported suicide. Whitaker is assaulted in his room, and Ember takes him to his bungalow on Long Island and leaves him. Whitaker makes the acquaintance of a young lady who lives next door to him, and whom he mistakes for Drummond. Whitaker twists his ankle, and the young lady helps him. Ember returns, turns up with no trace of Drummond. During the night some one enters the house and stealthily makes for the door. The intruder, who proves to be Drummond turned back by Ember, who is led away by Ember. The unknown lady is kidnapped and taken away in a motor-car. Whitaker pursues her, following all night. Then both boats are wrecked, and the girl and the man are to reach the shore. The two find themselves on an unknown island, at present uninhabited, and prepare to make themselves comfortable in a cave. Whitaker, however, is attracted to himself in love with the unknown girl and declares himself, then telling her that he is Hugh Morton Whitaker, the body of Drummond and burials it.

CHAPTER XXII. Black Out.

TOWARD 8 o'clock in the evening, after a day-long search through all his accustomed haunts, Ember ran Whitaker to earth in the dining room of the hotel. The younger man, alone at table, was in the act of tipping off an excellent dinner with a still more excellent cigar. His person seemed to diffuse a generous atmosphere of contentment and satisfaction, no less mental than physical, and singularly at variance with his appearance, which, for that matter, was singularly out of keeping with his surroundings as well as with his normal aspect. He wore rough tweeds, and they were dating at his boots were a trifle disorderly; his hair was a mass of tangled and greasy locks, and his eyes were a pair of unattractive, but not unkindly, eyes. He was eating a figure which might well have been the property of a prizefighter, and he was dining at a table which might well have been the property of a prizefighter. He was eating a figure which might well have been the property of a prizefighter, and he was dining at a table which might well have been the property of a prizefighter.

Wilson Named Honorary President of Students

The name of Woodrow Wilson, President of the United States, heads the honorary committee on the Eighth International Congress of Students, to be held at Cornell University, Ithaca, N. Y., August 29 to September 12. Other Americans on the committee are Gov. William Sulzer, of New York; Dr. P. P. Claxton, United States Commissioner of Education; John Barrett, director general of the Pan-American Union; Hamilton Holt, editor of The Independent; Mayor William J. Gaynor, of New York city; Edwin D. Mead, of the World Peace Foundation; Samuel T. Dutton, of the American Peace Society; together with the presidents and other officers of many of the leading universities of the country. The International Federation of Students was started in Italy in 1888, and now has affiliated organizations in many European countries and in both North and South America. The principal aim of the federation is "to support and spread the idea of unity and brotherhood among students," without regard to their religious or political beliefs. At the last Congress, held in Rome, in 1911, the United States was selected as the meeting place for 1913, and it was determined to take up at this time a plan for developing an all-embracing world organization of students in the higher institutions of learning.
