laborers Resort to Violence. Plans Rushed to Send Children to New York.

PATERSON, N. J., April 18.—Paterson's great silk industry today faces the crisis in the strike of its 27,000 workers. Made desperate by more than eight weeks of idleness, certain branches of the strikers have become daily more difficult to restrain, particularly the dyers and their helpers. These men form the bulk of the unskilled labor, and as in previous silk strikes, have been the first to resort to violence. The action of the silk manufacturers in settling to work "Detective" Jerry O'Brien's band of "strong arm" men and "strike killers" aroused the fury of the dyers house workers. Two of O'Brien's men are under arrest today for the shooting of Antonio Viscicchio during a disturbance in front of the Weidmann Dye Works. Viscicchio is said to be dying, and the private detectives are being held to await the outcome. Another strike is in a critical condition from a fractured skull and half a dozen were slightly hurt in a battle that followed the attempt of the police to disperse the crowd. So serious has the situation become that the L. W. W. leaders are rushing plans today to remove 5,000 of the children whose parents are strikers, to New York, to be cared for by sympathizers until relief comes. The plan was announced at a mass meeting of mothers and children and was received with acclamation by the youngsters as well as their parents. An attempt was made to sound the city authorities as to whether they would make any attempt to prevent the deportation of the children but no responsible city official would discuss the question.

REBELS EXPECT TO CAPTURE MONTEREY

Northern Mexico City To Be Capital of Revolutionists in Fight Being Made to Depose Huerta As President of the Republic—Activities of Party Resumed.

By JUDSON C. WELLIVER.

The city of Monterey, "the Chicago of Mexico," and the most important railroad center in the northern part of the country, is expected to fall into the hands of the revolutionists within a few days, according to positive statements of the Mexican revolutionary agents in Washington. These statements, moreover, are generally borne out by intimate reports from news sources in Mexico. With the fall of Monterey it will become the capital of the north Mexico revolutionists. The railroad lines which center there and which have for the greater part been put out of commission, will be restored as fast as possible. At present, all the lines north and west of Monterey are out of business. The only road operating from the city is a line to the southwest, by which Tampico is reached, and from Tampico, by a zig-zag, roundabout route, the City of Mexico. This last line will be cut within a few days, according to advice received here, and then Monterey will be completely isolated. It is believed there are not over 500 federal troops there at present. The capture of Monterey is expected to be the signal for a big extension of the revolution throughout the country. Senator Gante, the revolutionary agent in Washington, declared positively today that the revolutionists would not ask recognition of their belligerency at the hands of the American State Department.

Not a New Revolution. He explained: "This is not a new revolution. It is the same national uprising that started in 1910. The rise of the Maderos to leadership was a detail; so was the collapse of Diaz, the election of Madero, and his murder. The revolution did not consist of a man or a family, and it is going right on. It is certain to win; no more certain than it was in the very hour of Huerta's momentary successful treason, but today more obviously certain. The whole world knows now that the statements he has made through were true. "The revolutionary agents in Washington declare that they will keep away from the State Department. They demand that they will perform, not talk," said Senator Gante.

The tentative move on the part of the British government toward recognition of the Huerta government has rather pleased the revolutionists than otherwise, it is declared. On this point the local junta is reticent, but it is known that the situation is regarded about thus:

Huerta Fears Washington. Huerta hates and fears Washington, and, in his ignorance, believed he could make an appeal in London, through some of the British concession owners, that would array the English government in hostility toward Washington. So he offered Bartolome Carrvajal y Rosas as minister to London, Rosas being a notorious enemy to the United States, whom the State Department does not at all fancy because of his former record. The London government has indicated that Rosas would be acceptable to it, though it has not yet formally received him.

The revolutionaries calculate that, in thus giving offense to Washington, Huerta overdid matters and decidedly injured his chance of getting any recognition here. The pronouncements of the State Department have completely wrecked all chance of Huerta getting a big loan in this country or Europe, and he must have money soon. Meanwhile, the British squint toward recognition of Huerta will do him no real good. Four years ago the Emperor of Germany impulsively wrote a letter to Madrid, usurping and anti-Washington President of Nicaragua, that was tantamount to recognition. The move was distinctly offensive to Washington, and was supposed for a few days to be a great coup for Madrid. After that Berlin discovered the mistake, and explained that no disrespect or interference ence was intended. Madrid was duly disposed of and American plans carried out. It is supposed that the British government may be a trifle piqued over American interference in the "Chinese situation," and that the London attitude toward Huerta may be inspired by this feeling. But in any case, American interest and influence in Mexico are paramount, and the revolutionists are confident that efforts by Huerta and Carraras, to what will be between the United States and any European country will only serve to make Washington the more determined to be rid of Huerta.

Senor Gante told today for the first time the story of how Huerta was "recognized" as President by the Mexican congress. "The congress," he said, "was a Maderist body, and, after the arrest of Madero, Huerta needed to force it to recognize the new regime. A plan was devised which promised to make this constitutionally possible. Madero's alleged resignation was secured, also that of Suarez, the minister of the interior; then Lascurain resigned and Huerta the "constitutional" successor.

Tells of Huerta's Move. "Huerta, with all plans laid for this coup, planted 300 federal soldiers in the room immediately under the hall of the chamber of deputies, and placed two machine guns where they commanded the doors of the chamber. In disguise, I went to the capitol and saw these things with my own eyes. Then the Huerta members demanded recognition of the new government. There was not a quorum present, and no action could be taken without one.

"In Mexico, members of this chamber have made, who in certain circumstances may act for their chiefs. By holding as many as possible of the deputies, rounding up alternates, and threatening men whose presence was needed to make the quorum, the number was increased to a sufficient number necessary number. The necessary resolutions were put through, and then the Huerta members, at the point of the gun, compelled men who were not present to sign statements that they had been in order to complete the showing of a quorum and of legality. "When I asked a Maderist member why he should have done it, he shrugged his shoulders and asked: "What else could we do?"

MILITANTS CAPTURE ENGLISH MONUMENT

Billingsgate Tower Is Still Held By Two of Women Who Defy Police.

LONDON, April 18.—For several hours today, militant suffragettes attempted to scale the Billingsgate monument, which they captured by strategy and rained suffrage literature and missiles on the heads of the angry crowds, stopping all traffic, and interfering with the business of the fish merchants whose stands are in the street. One suffragette, who attempted to force his way up a small spiral staircase with the intention of forcibly ejecting the women. The suffragettes hurled lead pellets and other missiles upon him until he was forced to retreat. When the police arrived they attempted to scale the small staircase, protecting their heads with improvised shields. The women hurled missiles upon them, and declared their intention not to leave the monument. One vowed that she would throw herself into the street if the police tried to eject her. For a while this determination balked the officers, and they tried to hold a peace conference and negotiate terms, but this, too, proved useless. At last the police united in a rush, and each grabbed a woman and tried to drag her to the street. The women screamed, bit, scratched, and did everything in their power to free themselves, acting up to the name which has been given them—the "wild women."

Three suffragettes are still holding their own in the top of the monument, and another assault is being planned. If this fails the only thing left to do will be to lay siege to the stronghold. The women declare they will never be taken from their stations alive.
