

MANY THANKS FOR MOTOR OUTING

Automobile Ride and Visit to Columbia Theater Heartily Enjoyed by Old Ladies.

Many letters of thanks are being received by The Times from those who enjoyed the automobile ride and entertainment at the Columbia Theater last Wednesday afternoon...

The hope is that the party and the ride may be repeated... Old Ladies Joyful.

From the Baptist Home came the following communication:

"My dear Miss Murdock: We wish to express our thanks to you for the pleasure of yesterday afternoon...

"MRS. M. C. FISHER, Matron."

The Ruppert Home writes:

"My Dear Miss Murdock: Please let me thank you for the pleasure The Times gave the inmates of our home...

"MRS. H. RAMM, Matron."

Express Appreciation.

This letter speaks for itself:

"The Washington Times: The ladies of the Home, of Georgetown, wish to express through your columns to Miss Murdock their appreciation of the great courtesy extended them on September 17...

"MRS. LANE, Acting Matron."

Mrs. M. E. Burke, in charge of the Catholic Home, at 148 N street, writes:

"My dear Miss Murdock: Please accept the thanks of the ladies of the Catholic Home for the pleasure given them on the afternoon of the 17th...

Owners' Spirit Shown.

The spirits of the car owners of Washington and the manner in which they responded to the request for machines is told by the following letters:

"My dear Miss Murdock: I beg to acknowledge the receipt of your letter regarding the use of my car on the 17th, and to thank you both for the thought of me, and to assure you that it will give me the greatest pleasure to be of any assistance to you."

"WILLIAM B. JACKSON, Silver Spring, Md."

Eleventh Hour Offers.

Even at the last moment after all arrangements had been completed, and enough automobiles had been contributed so that all of the elderly guests had been provided for, telephone messages and personal offers of automobiles in profusion to Miss Murdock's office.

Among those whose offers came at the last moment, and were much appreciated, were Benjamin Woodworth, Charles Goldsmith, Jesse J. Haas, George Schmitt, Thomas Grant, of the Chamber of Commerce, and a woman who would not give her name, but who was assigned to one of the institutions.

The Times takes this opportunity of thanking the Columbia Theater management, George Klein, who contributed the entertainment "Quo Vadis," and all the automobile owners who so materially helped to make the old ladies' automobile ride the success it was.

PRINCESS, FOILED IN LOVE, A SUICIDE

Member of German Nobility Forbidden to Wed Berlin Banker. Father Once a Waiter—Prince Wilhelm of Saxe-Weimar-Eisenach Worked Here at Odd Jobs.

HEIDELBERG, Sept. 19.—Princess Sophia, the only daughter of Prince Wilhelm of Saxe-Weimar-Eisenach, killed herself with a revolver in her room in her father's castle here. The act is supposed to have been caused by melancholia, brought on because of the apparently insurmountable obstacles to her marriage to the man of her choice and the hopeless, loveless future before her.

The princess, who was twenty-five years of age, was in love with the young Baron Hans von Bleichroeder, son of the head of the famous banking house of Berlin. His father was employed for valuable financial services to the empire, and is one of the most influential financiers in Germany. The story of their love has been rumored for some time, and it was said that the young baron returned her affection; in fact, they were betrothed.

The romance was shattered, however, by the opposition on the part of the family of the princess. There have been vague rumors of violent scenes in the family of the young woman. The princess made a fearful, pathetic and hysterical appeal for permission to marry the man of her heart, but her relatives remained immovable.

Grand Duke Opposed Marriage. The rock in the path of the happiness of the princess is said to have been the Grand Duke Ernst of Saxe-Weimar-Eisenach, the uncle of the house, who is said to have declared his unalterable opposition to the marriage not so much because the uncle is beneath the princess in rank as because the young man's father is a Jew who has refused to renounce his faith.

The father of the princess, Prince Wilhelm, is said to have been won over to her side, but she has had to live on the appanage granted him by the Grand Duke Ernst in his consent to his daughter's marriage. It is said that she has resulted in his allowance being stopped.

It was said at first that the princess had been found dead in her room and that she had died of heart disease. Rumors that she had committed suicide by shooting herself with a pistol in her hand and a hole in her forehead.

Brother in Various Scapes. A brother of the princess, the Count von Ostheim, had to leave here and go to London because of his marriage to a beautiful American woman, in which he was involved. He got into the bankruptcy court in London shortly after his arrival at the English capital. He gave up his title of Prince Hermann of Saxe-Weimar-Eisenach and held pre-emptive to the grand ducal throne. He was attached to a crack Berlin regiment, but was a notorious spendthrift, and soon became involved in the meshes of the law. He tried to retrieve his fortune by a rich alliance, and was a suitor of Marie Buonaparte, who after married Prince George of Greece, and who got her wealth from the money her father derived as part owner of the gaming tables at Monte Carlo.

After he had been deprived of all his honors and his title, he shipped to London, Count von Ostheim married in London, an Italian chorus girl known as Wanda Zalters, who has won a prize as a beauty in Milan. His wife is a beautiful figure with his wife at the New York horse show of 1909. His wife afterward got a divorce from him in the Paris courts.

The career of the father of the Princess.

Princess Sophia, who was twenty-five years of age, was in love with the young Baron Hans von Bleichroeder, son of the head of the famous banking house of Berlin. His father was employed for valuable financial services to the empire, and is one of the most influential financiers in Germany. OCTOGENARIAN TWINS OBSERVE BIRTHDAY

Albert G. and G. Alfred Hall Receive Old Friends in Lateral's Residence.

Those Hall twins—Albert G. and G. Alfred—are having a birthday today. It's their eighty-second.

A week or two ago, Albert G. left his home in Doylestown, Pa., and came to G. Alfred's residence, at 126 Avenue of the Presidents, where they invariably hold their celebrations and receive their old friends.

There is nothing formal in their observance of their birthday, but following the old custom, Albert G. and G. Alfred, sit at G. Alfred's home on the Avenue of the Presidents and receive the congratulations of their friends.

Many wonderful stories these two tell. Both were telegraph operators, and tapped telegraph keys before the days of the Morse code. Albert G. was credited with carrying the first Republican banner ever carried in the District of Columbia, and in 1864, A. Hall flashed the first message announcing the nomination of Abraham Lincoln for the presidency.

When the gold rush to California started, in 1849, the Hall boys were telegraph operators. The telegraph had been known only a few years, and the only line into Washington at the time was the Bain chemical line, which was supplanted in 1852 by the Morse line. The Hall twins went with the new company.

Among other things, the Halls are also the oldest telegraph operators alive. Both the Halls are veteran Masons and are prominent in local Masonic circles. Later in life, both held important Federal jobs. G. A. Hall became a member of the House of Representatives for a number of years. A. G. Hall has been more or less of a politician.

They were born in Vassalboro, Me., and both married in the same year. G. A. Hall had nine children, but only two are alive. A. Hall had eight, of whom six are living.

Boy's Previous Record May Cost Him Pardon

President Wilson will probably not pardon young James O'Connor, the Washington lad sentenced last January to one year in St. Mary's Industrial School at Baltimore, on the charge of shooting craps. Representations were made to Secretary of War Woodrow Wilson, but according to a report made on the case today by Attorney General Clegg, the boy had never been in trouble before, and arrangements were being made for his release.

Baron von Bleichroeder had arranged to enter the diplomatic service last year and arrangements were being made for this end when Foreign Minister Kiderlen-Waechter died. The Kaiser at that time was anxious to get young business men into the service, but the success of Dr. Kiderlen-Waechter, apparently, did not carry out the latter's plans in regard to Baron von Bleichroeder, as nothing more has been heard of the appointment.

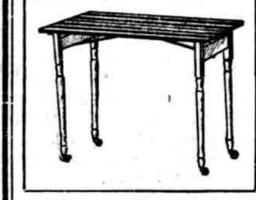

Young Baron Visited America.

Baron Hans von Bleichroeder was in New York three years ago, studying the New York banks. The young man, who was said at the time to be heir to $60,000,000, kept his identity secret for ten months to all except his most intimate friends, and spent all of his time in studying finance. Four barons and a count attended a farewell informal dinner in his honor at the Hotel Breunert before he left for home. Some one chaffed the baron with having concealed his identity because of the fear that some designing American heiress might ensnare him. He denied this and added:

"I have visited in Newport, Chicago and New York, where I met many beautiful American women, but I am returning now to Europe without being engaged. I like American women immensely. In fact, there is only one other place in the world where the girls can be compared with the girls here as regards beauty, charm, and smart appearance, and that is Paris."

Fraudulent, Misleading and Questionable Advertisements are not accepted by The Washington Times. It is the aim of The Times to maintain for its classified columns that stamp of character and worth which clean and reliable advertising alone can give.

Keeping out the undesirable want ads, however, is a problem in itself. Eternal vigilance is required. While this policy means a sacrifice of considerable revenue, The Times feels that the direct loss is more than made up in the ever increasing confidence of the people of Washington in its Want Ad pages.

So The Times will appreciate the co-operation of its readers, and information concerning advertisements thought to be otherwise than legitimate will be welcomed.

A telephone call, Main 5260, or a postal address to the Classified Advertising Manager will have prompt attention.
