

SEES GERMANS HERE "INTERNAL DANGER"

That Sobered American Patriots,
New York Correspondent
Says in Zeitung.

NEW YORK, Aug. 6.—An estimate of the public opinion of America from the German point of view, as sent by its New York correspondent, is presented in the Frankfurter Zeitung of July 18. The correspondent predicts that, barring an overt act by Germany growing out of the Lusitania matter, there will be no war, but adds that in case of war with Germany he feels the German-Americans will not hesitate to fight against Germany—not, however, for the Lusitania issue or a similar one.

Few Desire War.
"The torpedoing of the Lusitania formed the climax of the 'unheard-of' excesses against the lives and property of Americans," as the local newspapers call them, and for a week at least it looked as if war might be declared any minute. The war shouters had the floor. But after the first excitement was over, the voices of circumspect Americans, and particularly of the German-born citizens, began to assert themselves. Then it became evident that the put into great danger by German submarines.

"To be sure, there are great material interests at stake in war with a European power would result in enormous wastage in the economic life of the country. The element which did not regard the Lusitania as a furnished soon received important augmentation. It was declared that, to be sure, America had not recognized the war zone, but that nevertheless a part of the blame must be ascribed to those who were killed, inasmuch as they went needlessly into danger.

"The realization that America is in no wise equipped for war, brought about a cooler view in the case of many excited patriots, and beneath the surface very many thought of the internal danger. They realized, in other words, that the Lusitania and the other American ships, with their children almost 10,000, would certainly not warm up to such a war, even if a number of innocent Germans had declared that they would take the field against any one.

Interests of America.
"In my opinion, pretty nearly every German-American would indeed raise arms against the old homeland in so far as the latter encroached upon the real interests of America, perhaps by threatening the possessions of the country or seeking to found colonies in America. But it is quite clear that the assistance of the German-Americans would be lacking to the Americans in case such a war should be waged on account of the Lusitania or a similar incident, especially if there were present also the suspicion that assistance was to be given to Germany's enemies. It must be admitted, besides, that here in the East the Germans have not conducted themselves so bravely against the attacks of the Americans as in the West."

The correspondent asserts that the Jingoism seem to have "the support of the Lusitania." It will, however, become dangerous in case it should definitely appear that England is whipped under all circumstances. At present the friends of the Lusitania here still hope that, with the entry of Italy into the war, an end will be put to the victorious progress of the central powers and the ally on the Lusitania. But if the triumph of Germany should become clearly evident, rightly influences would appear here that would attempt to make America a "savior of civilization."

"They are already trying to smooth the way for that, as is shown by various indications. In Philadelphia there is just been formed a 'League for the Enforcement of World Peace, American Branch,' which is to get into connection with similar bodies of other nations to carry out its program."

Judging from its personnel, the correspondent says, the league harbors ulterior motives not expressed in its name and dangerous to Germany and Austria, in that it may work for peace objects in an anti-German sense among other neutrals.

Wilson Mistaken For a Town Joker

Cornish Postmaster Gets Angry
When President Talks Over the Telephone.

CORNISH, N. H., Aug. 6.—When Sam McClinton, assistant postmaster here, dropped a batch of mail to reach for a jingling telephone he didn't know he was marking a milestone in his eventful life. He said "Hello" with his usual politeness, but grew rather wroth when he was told from the other end of the wire to wait a moment as President Wilson wanted to speak to him.

He was just preparing an oration on the uselessness of jests during business hours when another voice asked him if he could give him the times for the opening and closing of mails North and South.

"Yes," said Mr. McClinton. "Very well," answered the person at the other end. "I'll come right over after them."

While Mr. McClinton waited an automobile bearing the President halted in front of the postoffice. Mr. McClinton with a gasp rushed out.

He gave the President the desired list and then retired behind his barred window.

"I thought some one was trying to be funny," he said, "but it was the President talking to me—and over a telephone at that."

Wilson wanted to get acquainted with mail time only he knows.

Its Day of Independence

Gen. Simon Bolivar is pointed to as the George Washington of Bolivia. In April, 1825, he effected the liberation of Upper Peru from the long period of Spanish misrule. About three weeks later a congress met to determine the destinies of the new republic. On August 6, also the anniversary of the battle of Junin, Peru announced that it was important to the welfare of the new republic, not to incorporate herself with any other state.

After a paper declaring the independence of Bolivia had been signed a decree also was signed declaring August 6 a national festival annually.

LONDON LOOKS FOR NEW GERMAN DRIVE

Critics Uncertain Whether It Will Be at Paris, Calais, or Northern Italy.

LONDON, Aug. 6.—British critics concede today that the fall of Warsaw will have a tremendous influence on the next six months' fighting in Europe, and possibly upon the political fortunes of the allies.

Capture of Warsaw will release at least 1,000,000 Austro-Germans for operations elsewhere. It makes it possible for the Austro-Germans to hold the Vistula line with a minimum of men against any offensive blow the Russians may be expected to deliver for many months. The military critics, therefore, turned their attention today to speculating on Germany's next move.

Expect Drive At Paris.
A popular guess was that the Germans would renew the offensive against Paris at once, or hurl all available forces against the Anglo-French lines in an effort to reach Calais. Other critics suggested that the Kaiser will now join Austria in a determined attempt to march down the Alps into northern Italy, or completely to crush Serbia.

The Petrograd report that the Russian armies have escaped from the German trap is accepted as true in military circles here, where it is assumed that the German campaign in Poland is now about to close. In some quarters, however, it is believed that von Hindenburg may attempt an advance against Petrograd or along the Odessa railway, though this view is not shared by the majority of London critics.

German Victory Minimized.
The military value of the capture of Warsaw is generally minimized in military circles here, though it is admitted that the blow probably will render it impossible for Russia to resume the offensive for an indefinite period. London, however, lays great stress upon the political importance of the German victory, especially in view of the wavering attitude of the Balkan neutrals.

"The military and strategic consequences, however, are very different from the political," says the Daily Telegraph, whose comment today is typical of the London press. "When Emperor William adds up the net gains and losses he will discover that at much cost of blood and treasure he has only enabled the Russians to fall back to lines more easily defended and to that illimitable space of territory which always has baffled conquerors of the west."

Riga's Fate Sealed.
The Petrograd correspondent of the Times wired today that "the fate of Riga is sealed," and that the evacuation of the city was in full swing when last reports reached Petrograd. The dispatch said the Russian government last week set aside $2,000,000 to pay for the removal of factories from Warsaw.

MODIFIED BLOCKADE NO LOSS TO ENGLAND

Manchester Guardian Thinks
Friendship More Valuable Than Strict Embargo.

LONDON, Aug. 6.—The Manchester Guardian, in the course of a long article on the British-American notes thinks American friendship worth more than a strict embargo.

our meeting the American point of view if we can. What should we lose if we did meet it? Of neutral ports there could be no blockade, but we might extend the doctrine of continuous voyage so as to secure the right to intercept all contraband imported through neutral ports for German use, and there could still be no legitimate ground of objection. We might go further and extend our list of contraband so as to cover cotton, and conceivably even foodstuffs, imported through neutral ports for Germany, and still our action would lie within the forms of international law and give the United States no ground for protest.

"What advantage have we now through our present policy that we should lose if we adopted the policy that we have sketched? Simply this, that though German ports would be closed to everything, Germany could still trade with the outside world through neutral ports in articles which not being of use in war, would not be on our extended list of contraband. We do not think that that would be a serious or even an appreciable loss.

ing rid of this controversy with the United States might be very great. It would remove the screen which we are placing between Germany and the full gale of American indignation over her inhuman outrages on law. It would keep up, so far as it can be kept up with justice to ourselves, the distinction between the civilian and belligerent use of articles of commerce.

Germans Fear Hostile Landing in Schleswig

COPENHAGEN, Aug. 6.—According to the Danish newspapers, Germans now fear a landing of hostile troops on the western coast of Schleswig. The German staffs have taken elaborate measures to guard against an attack upon the Kiel. The rigid regulations make travel in Schleswig almost impossible.

What's Your Own Opinion?

MAN said to us yesterday: "Women are better economists than men."

"You can offer women reduced prices on furs in August and they will buy for full use."

This student of human nature again says: "Men never buy until they absolutely need wearing apparel."

So, here's a test case: P-B has reduced the prices on their elegantly tailored Full Dress and Tuxedos for today and Saturday. The idea is that men will appreciate the difference or rather saving in price and be ready for the many formal and informal affairs coming in September and the fall months.

Mind you, these styles are right, the tailoring and materials the best, otherwise they wouldn't bear the P-B label. These are the reductions:

- $25 P-B Tuxedo Suits at... $18.75
- $30 P-B Tuxedo and Full Dress Suits at... $21.75
- $35 P-B Full Dress and Tuxedo Suits at... $25.50
