District of Columbia Happened at Banquet

Thomas Jefferson Held Dinner for Statesmen and Selection of Washington as Capital Was Result, Says Francis E. Leupp in New Book.

The District of Columbia happened because of a dinner. Probably many of the statesmen, later plumed into the National Capital's gay round of dinners and winings, and made to realize that the gastronomic peril is one of the gravest dangers of Washington's official life, did not know this.

It is only one of the many interesting sidelights thrown on the founding and the building up of Washington in an entertaining book "Walks About Washington" by Francis E. Leupp, former Indian commissioner, and more recently a newspaper correspondent.

Francis E. Leupp does not encroach upon the province of the many histories of Washington in his volume. But he has tracked down many illuminating incidents, and brought to life, by relation of personal traits and significant anecdotes, incidents worth recording in the city's growth.

Francis E. Leupp tells how the first telegraph message was received there, how religious meetings were held in the old House of Representatives room on Sunday, and how the building became the seat of the nation's government.

THE BROKEN COIN

By EMERSON HOUGH.

CHAPTER LI. The Battle. Sachio and Ladislav, as may be seen, were drinking water.

"Yes, the sack of the city will be large," said Sachio. "For my own I shall reserve but one item."

"And that woman?" "And that woman?"

"But Sachio only smiled grimly to himself, and said no word of what or who the woman was."

"No, your majesty," said Cortislaw. "I hastened to bring your majesty here in your own person."

"We soon shall know," said Cortislaw, and signaled the advance.

"The sound of hoofs and trampling of hooves filled the air."

War Times and Their Sequel' is a chapter of particular interest in view of the G. A. R. encampment in this chapter of the personal sketch of the doughty Alexander R. Shepherd, plunger, who launched Washington on progress.

Every public building these clings a host of associations which Mr. Leupp recalls. Especially is the Capitol building fraught with such memories.

Even more interesting, from the human standpoint, are the anecdotes of early law makers. Non-attendance at sessions of Congress is no new complaint.

CAPITAL TRACTION IS SOLD ON MARKET

Stock Loses Half a Point on Day's Sale of Fifty Shares.

Capital Traction stocks continued to sell off in the light market that prevailed at today's session of the Washington Stock Exchange. Prices generally were unchanged.

Traction lost half a point for the day on the sale of fifty shares. A quotation for the stock was 85 1/2, and another block of 250 shares was transferred at 85 1/2 as compared with a low of 85 Friday.

While an odd lot of four shares of Capital Traction was sold at 85 1/2, the bid for quotations lots of the stock was lowered to 85 1/2. Lanston, the other type stock, on the other hand, was up from 72 to 75, and the lowest offering made was at 80.

Other sales of the day included a Potomac Electric Power first 5 per cent bond at 105 1/2; $2,000 worth of Consolidated 5 1/2 per cent of the same company at 100 1/2; and a $500 Capital Traction 5 at 100.
