

FLANK MOVIE READY AGAINST PROGRAM OF PREPAREDNESS

"Small Army and Navy" Men Only Faction With Plans Made for Fight.

WILL HIT THROUGH REVENUE

Anti-Militaristic Party Can Count on G. O. P. Votes Against Taxes.

Congress enters this week upon the second month of the session and finds itself utterly without a definite idea of what it is going to do about national defense and revenue legislation.

Only one faction on Capitol Hill appears to have its program in shape—that is the "small navy" and "small army" Democrats, who are now about to make a flank movement on the defense bills and attempt to defeat them in a roundabout way even if they cannot be beaten by direct attack.

This faction, it is learned, has been holding quite a number of confabs during the last few days. The small army and navy men are quietly working out the strategy of the situation about as follows:

Expect Bills To Pass.

"We will have a hard time voting down these army and navy bills," the Republicans will vote almost solidly for them. So they'll probably pass, except for that continental army plan of Secretary Garrison.

However, the Republicans will not support a Democratic tax measure, and you've got to have more taxes if you have national defense. If twenty or thirty of the small navy Democrats vote against the revenue bills it will put these defense measures in a bad way.

The anti-preparedness Democrats can count on Republican votes against more taxes. He Republicans could not well afford to vote otherwise. They will justify such opposition on the ground that if a protective tariff were in effect it would be unnecessary to impose direct taxation burdens.

The astute small navy Democrats in the House have accordingly to defeat indirectly the defense movement by voting against the accompanying revenue bills. If a score of Democrats vote with the Republicans in opposing the tax measures, the majority party will be in the position of voting large appropriations for the army and navy to be paid out of an empty treasury. The possible situation is one that is giving great worry to Administration supporters.

Much Jockeying For Place.

Meanwhile there is legislative jockeying for place. When members of the Ways and Means Committee are asked when the question of revenue will be taken up they reply that the committee is waiting to see what amount of money will be needed by the Appropriations committee, including those auditing the army and navy bills.

The committee in charge of these measures are making practical progress, and they contend privately that the defense program "is somewhat contingent upon the question of revenue." Valuable time is being wasted, and Chairman Paigett of the House Naval Committee, rather disgustingly asserts that "it will be several months before we close the hearings on our bill, according to present prospects."

Mr. Paigett's pessimism evidently is predicated upon the filibustering tactics adopted by the small navy members of his committee who retarded the hearings last week by asking numerous questions of trivial nature, which Admiral Stanford was before the Naval Committee.

The situation is further complicated by the increasing activities of the so-called "pork barrel" committees of the House. The Roads Committee has reported a good bill calling for an appropriation of $25,000,000, and the Committees on Public Buildings and Grounds and Rivers and Harbors are threatening to bring "pork barrels" aggregating anywhere from $50,000,000 to $75,000,000.

General Row Coming.

A general row among the defense advocates, the "pork barrel" defenders, and the "small navy and army" faction is forthcoming, and Republican aid may be expected when the latter group of Democrats seek to embarrass defense legislation by voting against the revenue bills.

Little headway is being made with the defense program itself. Secretary Garrison's appearance before the House Committee on Military Affairs has not removed the proposed army bill from the zone of congressional chaos. No member of the House or the Military Affairs Committee appears to have a definite idea of what the army bill will contain, except there is continued antagonism to the continental army plan of Secretary Garrison.

Even the statement of Secretary Garrison that compulsory military training may follow in this country, if the continental army plan falls, has not stirred the House membership. One of the Democratic leaders of the House says Mr. Garrison's bearing toward compulsory military training will be unproductive of results because the United States will never accept the principle of such training.

No Militarism Approved.

"Nothing that smacks of militarism," said this leader, "can receive the approval of the Congress or the people of the United States. No system of military training could be put through Congress with public sentiment on this question as it now is."

This Congressional authority is one of the most influential members of the Military Affairs Committee and holds the present sentiment not only in that committee but the House.

There is small likelihood of the approval of the continental army plan or the substitute program adopted probably will be liberal Federal contributions for the maintenance of the national guard. There is likewise little prospect that the special taxes mentioned in the President's message will be included in the revenue bill.

Victim of Heart Disease.

Coroner Nevitt today issued a certificate giving heart disease as the cause of the death of Mrs. Sallie M. Miller, fifty, of Hillbrook, D. C. Mrs. Miller was found dead late yesterday as she dined from her house.

Ghost Deserts Castle Of New Baron Astor

BARON WILLIAM WALDORF ASTOR.

Shade of Anne Boleyn, Displeased by Recently Created Peer's Displacement of New. Is Local Explanation.

LONDON, Jan. 10.—It is believed the ghost of Anne Boleyn has vanished forever from Hever Castle, the seat of the new baron—William Waldorf Astor. Another Christmas week, the season during which the ill-fated mistress of Henry VIII had always chosen to appear, has passed without her.

The local explanation of her departure is she is displeased with Mr. Astor's replacement of the old with the new at Hever Castle. She was accustomed to cross the old bridge over the river at midnight once or oftener during the holiday season.

Dilapidation of the ancient structure caused Mr. Astor, when he became owner of the historic old pile, to put a new bridge in its place. He adhered closely to the style of the original but the sensitive nature of Anne Boleyn's ghost apparently could not endure the substitution. She has not been seen since.

Historic Memories. Hever Castle is in Kent and, like all the country around, filled with historic memories. It is moated, towered, machiolated and battlemented in the best style of its period. It is not large as castles go; a writer describes it as "the daintiest of castles, a castle in miniature, a castlettle of the feminine gender."

Even so, it is rambling and spacious and rugged. It is supposed the major part was built in the fifteenth century. It takes its name from William de Hever, who lived on this site during the reign of King John. The nation's ever memory, and the new baron has made it true by establishing, among other improvements, a park of his own well stocked with red deer.

When he took possession of the place was badly out of repair. In restoring it to habitable condition he attempted, with success, to retain the feeling of its period, and wherever possible to duplicate the original. At the same time he was bent on making Hever "castles possible as a place of repose for himself and his guests."

During one of the intermissions a brief address interpretative of "The Messiah" will be delivered by Rev. Charles M. Wood. The doors will be open at 7:30 o'clock and no cards will be necessary for admission.

It's Pneumonia. Not Grip, Says Specialist

The so-called grip infection which is sweeping over the country is not grip but a modification of pneumonia, according to Dr. Robert H. Babcock, a noted Chicago specialist in heart and lung diseases.

In a letter to Acting Secretary of Commerce Sweet, Dr. Babcock tells of the dangers of the infection and gives a list of instructions on the care of those afflicted. Acting Secretary Sweet has distributed 2,000 copies of the list among employes of the department.

If your nostrils are clogged and your head is stuffed and you can't breathe freely because of a cold or catarrh, just get a small bottle of Ely's Cream Balm at any drugstore. Apply a little of this fragrant, antiseptic cream into your nostrils, and let it penetrate through every air passage of your head, soothing and healing the inflamed, swollen, mucous membrane and you get instant relief.

Ah, how good it feels. Your nostrils are open, your head is clear, no more sneezing, sniffing, blowing, no more headache, dryness, or struggling for breath. Ely's Cream Balm is just what sufferers from head colds and catarrh need. It's a delight.—Adv.

SOCIALISM ATTACKED AT K. OF C. LECTURE

Peter W. Collins Says Party Wants Workers. But They Didn't Start Scheme.

The plea that socialism is a force for the benefit of the laboring classes, and that it was brought about into being and is being backed by the working class, is an hallucination, according to Peter W. Collins, who lectured at the New National Theater last night, under the auspices of the Knights of Columbus, on "What's Wrong With the World." The real ailment, he declared, is a lack of harmony and understanding between capital and labor.

The speaker declared 90 per cent of the socialists do not know what socialism is. It is not a government ownership, he said, although many misconstrue it to mean that. It is a community ownership that socialism stands for, but there are many things entering into the socialist platform that have no bearing on socialism. The minimum wage law, he pointed out, is included in the platform, when everyone ought to know that socialists are not in favor of such a law. This, the speaker declared, is for the purpose of deceiving the working man.

Continuing Mr. Collins said that socialism wants to get the laboring class, but it did not mean to get the laboring class. "The reason socialism wants the laboring class," he continued, "is because society is made up of political parties wants to get the working classes and use them as a crowbar, to throw society off its foundation."

Spanish War Veterans Will Entertain Solons

Chisholm, post department commander, will be the toastmaster. The guests will include Congressman L. C. Dyer of Missouri, commander-in-chief of the Spanish War Veterans; Col. Elias Montford, of Cincinnati, commander-in-chief of the G. A. R.; Senators Thomas W. Hardwick of Georgia, Albert B. Fall of New Mexico, William Hughes of New Jersey, James Hamilton Lewis of Illinois, James K. Vardaman of Mississippi, James W. Wadsworth, Jr., of New York, Franklin P. Roosevelt of Massachusetts, and Miles Poindexter, honorary member of the U. S. W. V.; Congressman John W. Langley of Kentucky; Richard W. Austin of Tennessee; Wyatt Allen of South Carolina; Sydney Anderson of Minnesota; Thomas S. Crago of Pennsylvania; Franklin F. Ellsworth of Minnesota; Augustus P. Gardner of Massachusetts; Frank L. Green of Vermont; A. C. Hart of New Jersey; R. H. Haskell of New York; Guy T. Helvering of Kansas; William S. Howard of Georgia; George Hudson of Alabama; Cordell Hull of Tennessee; Benjamin C. Humphreys of Mississippi; W. Frank James of Michigan; George A. Loud of Michigan; M. M. Neel of Connecticut; W. R. Oglesby of New York; William A. Oldfield of Arkansas; Sam R. Sells of Tennessee; E. T. Stone of Illinois; John A. Tamm of Virginia; Carl C. Van Dyke of Minnesota; Albert Johnson of Washington State; honorary member, and John A. Key of Ohio, honorary member.

Of all these, and they are legion, the most interesting is King Henry's courtship of sweet Anne Boleyn, whose ghost has been laid. She was the daughter of Sir Thomas Boleyn, the lord of the castle in that day. In the garden walks and long corridors of Hever the King made love.

To recount the tale from its inception to the headman's ax which finally ended the girl's reign is unnecessary. Nor was she the only occupant of the castle whose name has been handed down as household tradition. Another was the fat and humorous Sir John Falstaff.

One of the Scropes who lived there is said to have sold his binders to the French wars.

Sir Geoffrey Boleyn, a one-time lord mayor of London, and grandfather of the unfortunate Anne, purchased it from the lords of Cobham. And finally it reached Lord Hever, American-born and expatriate by choice, to whose son it will naturally descend in good time.

FOREIGN UNDERWEAR NOW UNFASHIONABLE Public Now Buying Domestic Output and Industry Booming, Experts Say. Foreign underwear is no longer fashionable in the United States. Purchasers no longer go into the fashionable stores and demand "something imported," according to experts of the Department of Commerce, who have just completed a study of the underwear industry of the United States. The knit underwear industry the experts say has had a rapid growth in recent years, and despite adverse criticism, is in a soundly prosperous condition. The fact that imported goods are no longer demanded is an encouraging sign of the times, according to the report on the subject. The total output of American cotton-made knit underwear in 1909 was valued at $84,446,000, whereas the imports of cotton knit underwear for the year previous to the war were valued at only $32,000. Cotton underwear forms the bulk of the imports of this class of wearing apparel.

The report on the subject just issued is a study of the underwear industry and situation by the cost of production division of the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce, which has absorbed the duties of the tariff board. The use of antiquated machinery and the failure to keep machinery in proper repair are cited as causes of low profits in some mills. There have been many improvements in machinery in recent years, and mills that have continued to use the old type machines are finding themselves at a decided disadvantage, without being aware, in some cases, of the real cause of the trouble.
