The President heard the result of the first and second ballots at the Republican convention after he returned to the White House from the theater. The results of the balloting were received at the White House by the wires, but the President, with Mrs. Wilson and party, attended Keith's.

There was a large party, and they entered the theater before the curtain rose. With the President were Mrs. Wilson, her mother, Mrs. Bolling, Miss Bertha Bolling, Mrs. Galt, John R. Bolling, and Miss Margaret Wilson.

As the President passed Doorman Lane, who opened a section of the entrance for the party, the President smiled, and said in an undertone: "I'm coming, strong tonight. There are seven of us."

Brief reports from the convention were read from the stage, but this was the only information from the "opposing" camp received by the President until he read the accumulated dispatches to his study after the theater.
