SCHOOLBOY ELEVEN TO PLAY TOMORROW IN PRACTICE GAMES

Tech, Business, Central, and Eastern Have Worthy Opponents in Gridiron Struggles.

By BRYAN MORSE.

Some real action is expected on scholastic gridiron tomorrow. Technical is journeying to Baltimore to play the Baltimore Polytechnic High School. Central is meeting the Episcopal High School of Alexandria. Eastern is stacking up against the Army and Navy Preparatory School eleven, and Business is slated to oppose the Randolph-Macon Academy eleven of Ashland, Va.

For the first time this season a comparison can be made between the school teams. Last week Central stacked up against the Baltimore Poly and defeated them by a 7 to 0 score. The Central players blocked a kick and got through for a touchdown. On the same afternoon Technical went to Episcopal High and was swamped by a 33-to-0 score.

After tomorrow's games it will be noticed that Tech and Central are able to do against the same teams. Central recently lined up against the Army and Navy Prep eleven and was able to score three touchdowns, so the account of the affair goes. The future soldiers and sailors went through Central for a touchdown. Eastern, with a much lighter eleven than Central and possessing fewer veterans, is expected to have its hands full.

The Army and Navy Preps have two open dates on their schedule as announced by Coach Frank Newberry today. The Preps open their season tomorrow against Eastern and will play Business next Thursday, October 25. Technical is played, November 4 will find an open date, while the following Saturday Episcopal is met at Alexandria. On November 18 the Shenandoah Valley Military Academy is played at Winchester, Va. The date of November 25 usually filled by the St. Albans School is left open. It is thought that this game will not be played this season on account of the fact that the Preps so far outclass the St. Albans youngsters this season. Georgetown Preps may be asked for a date.

Judging from the few games played and the practice scrimmages indulged in this fall, the high school eleven cannot boast much in the way of offense. None of the teams has scored more than a single touchdown, and two of them have failed to score in their initial battles. Central has some excuse in its Baltimore Poly contest, as the Monumental City lads greatly outweighed the Central team. In Western's win at Alexandria the Red and White team was out-weighted, but failed to sustain any sort of an attack.

Tech has usually relied upon the physical strength of its team to pound the opposition into submission, but even this failed against Episcopal. Business has had a varied attack, which has succeeded in the games before the title series, but has been usually checked in the series.

With two weak teams in the series this season Tech, Business, and Central should be able to demonstrate something in the scoring line.

Billy Martin's Georgetown Prep eleven is sure to be a comer before the end of the season. Martin has a rangy eleven which has sufficient beef to produce a driving attack. The defense at this early date is all that could be desired in a schoolboy eleven.

In obtaining the services of Jack Gass and Hunter McGuire for referee and umpire of the high school series, the advisers have made a net strike. Jack Gass is unusually popular with the boys, as is Hunter McGuire. Their ability to run the games successfully has never been questioned.

Gonsaga is making a start under Landrean and Horland this year. The team is improving with each practice. Dyer, Monroe, Netzey, Sullivan, Wilson, McCabe, Ford, Schildroth, Keane, Neegan, Duffy, Murphy, Sheehan, Keane, Morris, Taylor, Smith and Duffy make up the squad.

"Billick" Wheelock, Western's quarter last year, got into the Maryland State-Navy game for awhile on Wednesday. Wheelock is the lightest man on the Navy squad this fall and was one of the eight plebes selected for the varsity.

Western College, which plays Georgetown on the Hilltop tomorrow afternoon, has two Alexandria lads playing in the backfield. The Phil boys entered Eastern recently. They have played for Alexandria for the past three years, and this year Ford, Schildroth, and G. Phil captain of the Alexandria eleven. Two weeks ago the boys joined the Eastern College eleven and were instrumental in defeating Randolph-Macon.

Cusack May Not Play In Tomorrow's Game

Georgetown's Veteran End May Be Saved for Stiffer Clash With Dartmouth—Virginia Faces Hard Contest and Coaches Are Coming.

By LOUIS A. DOUGHER.

It is possible that "Red" Cusack, Georgetown's veteran end, may not play at all tomorrow against Eastern College. If he remains on the sidelines, Stewart, the freshman from St. Anselm's, Manchester, N. H., will very likely be found in his place.

Cusack was injured shortly after the opening of the Navy game. He suffered a cut over one eye that necessitated four stitches to close it. The Hilltop coaches see no reason for using him tomorrow, and may allow Stewart to start his first varsity game.

Coach Exquidine is schooling his squad for the Dartmouth game a week from tomorrow. He knows that the Hilltoppers will be up against one of the best teams in the East when they trot out on the gridiron in Haverhill, Mass., and all his present efforts are to have his eleven in shape.

Johnny Gilroy, last year's star halfback, is still with the second eleven, his work not having improved sufficiently to give him his old place on the varsity. However, he will probably get into the Dartmouth game. Gilroy is working his head off against the varsity every afternoon, but McQuade continues to play left halfback on the first team.

Today's signal drill will take up the practice period, every player getting a workout.

With its big game against Georgia only a week distant, Virginia has settled down to whip its varsity eleven into shape for the fray. Harry Varner, last year's head coach, has arrived to assist in the good work, and Buck Mayer, last year's star halfback, "Empty" Cooke, and Hardy Todd are expected to be on hand by Monday. Virginia's weakness against Yale presages a tough campaign for the Orange and Blue.

Navy bumps up against real opposition tomorrow when Pittsburgh appears at Annapolis. Glenn Warner has another whole of a team this fall and, while the Pennsylvanians are not claiming a large score, it is generally believed they will run up at least thirty-five points. A victory for the Middies would be most surprising.

Three good contests are marked for tomorrow in the East. Yale's clash with Lehigh, Princeton's battle with Tufts, and Penn's skirmish with Swarthmore. Of the trio the Tiger-Tufta tussle is the best. Though the Medford, Mass., eleven triumphed over Harvard last week, it is not favored to win from Princeton. The Jungle eleven is stronger than Harvard at this time, and will produce a far faster and more varied attack, with a defense that is most stubborn.

Yale barely won from Lehigh last year, 7 to 6, but this year a new spirit fills the Elis, and a comfortable margin of victory is expected at New Haven.

Pennsylvania seems to be running right along under the coaching of Bob Fowler, so successful at Washington and Jefferson during the past three or four years, but Swarthmore should provide strong opposition on Franklin Field.

Following are some of the more important games scheduled for tomorrow: Georgetown vs. Eastern College, at Hill top.

Catholic University vs. Randolph-Macon, at Brookland.

George Washington vs. Gettysburg, at Gettysburg, Pa.

Gallaudet vs. V. M. I., at Lexington, Mass.

Navy vs. Pittsburgh, at Annapolis.

Army vs. Holy Cross, Columbia vs. Vermont, Princeton vs. Tufts, Penn vs. Swarthmore, Harvard vs. North Carolina, W. and L. vs. Rutgers.

COLUMBIA CRACKS IN FIRST EIGHT PLAY

Maryland Golfer is Only Out of Town Entrant Feared Today.

By LOUIS A. DOUGHER.

Eight Columbia Country Club golfers are competing today in the first sixteen of the Bannockburn invitation tournament by virtue of their efforts in the qualifying round played yesterday over the nine-hole course near Cabin John Bridge.

An outsider, Thomas W. Sasser, of the Maryland Country Club, who headed the list of contestants with a card of 78, is likely to cut quite a figure in the tournament for top honors. Sasser was the only visiting player to finish in the first flight, but the form he showed augurs none to well for the local representatives.

Of the seven others in the honor section, four represent the host organization, the Washington Country Club, and one Kirkaldie, W. H. McCallum, whose 85 placed him fifth, played in the name of the Chicago Golf Club, but is really a local entrant.

D. F. Asbury, of Columbia, won the handicap match held in conjunction with the qualifying round for those with handicaps of not more than 12. His card read 82, 14, 68. W. J. Hughes, fourth of Columbia, led the prize for golfers with handicaps exceeding 12, with 86, 12, 74.

An oversight in posting the scores caused many at the club to believe that Hugh McKenzie, the Columbia golfer, had turned in a net 68, but later it was found that he had been giving wrong handicaps of 22. A proper 18 gave him 69, just one stroke behind Asbury. H. Stonier, of Bannockburn, also had 69.

Sasser played consistently well throughout the eighteen holes, driving and putting with the accuracy of a lance. His following is six strokes above par: Out 4 5 4 4 5 3 3 3 3 28 In 4 3 4 5 2 7 4 6 4 37

One interesting feature of the first day's play is that only one, Dr. M. Dorset, of Columbia, made the first hole, which is not a difficult one, in better than par 4. He sunk a mashie shot for a 2.

Golf balls have a habit sometimes of finding peculiar resting places, but it is doubtful if many come to halt in the manner of one hit by J. C. Fales, of Bannockburn, yesterday. Driven from No. 2 tee, the ball was seen to land in the proximity of a drainage ditch. A careful search disclosed the gutta percha snugly encoined in a cavity barely large enough to hold it, a fair sized stone which it evidently had dislodged, all but covering it from view.

W. R. McCallum, who a day or two ago went around the nine holes in par, today, however, made the first hole, but his putting was badly off form.

Richard Beattie, the Bannockburn champion, was unable to get going, and of a consequence is playing today in the second sixteen.

Dr. Lee Harban, one of Columbia's most prominent entrants, who finished fourth in the qualifying round with 84, has dropped out of the competition.

Turner to Wrestle.
Joe Turner will take on Harry Swaboda at the Lyceum tonight in the feature bout of the evening. Tony Maslino and Frank Zeraga will go on in the semi-wind-up, and "Billy" the wrestling bear, will meet all comers in a preliminary bout.

RED SOX NOW WANT MORE EASY MONEY

Boston, Oct. 13.—Unless the national commission takes action, many of the Red Sox are going to make a barnstorming trip through New England. After cleaning up $2,000 each for the five games, the Red Sox might be suspected of a willingness to hang their spikes in the closet until spring. A barnstorming trip would hurt the dignity of the series and the title.

By LOUIS A. DOUGHER.

A Philadelphia correspondent wanted to know whether any Boston man could explain to him why Duffy Lewis is not a .300 hitter. The answer was, "I guess because he isn't in the National League."

The Brooklyn club will have to return a lot of money paid for tickets for the third game at Ebbetts Field. If Brooklyn citizens showed real civic pride they would contribute all that money to the club that made Flatbush famous and introduced in baseball the five dollar seat with an extra two inches.
