RUTH LAW REACHES N. Y., EQUALS RECORD

Daring Aviatix Flies 840 Miles From Chicago to Metropolis in Old Aeroplane. (Continued from First Page.) shield for protection, the plucky young woman outstripped Victor Carlstrom's record for continuous cross-country flight made on November 14, when she flew in a machine, and then continued her journey and flew farther than has any woman before in history.

Left at 7:20 A. M. Miss Law left Chicago at 7:25 (central time) yesterday. She reached Metropolis—590 miles away—at 4:30 p. m. and resumed her flight at 7:30 this morning.

Her flying time for the entire trip was 8 hours and 55 minutes. Numb with cold, Miss Law was helped from her aeroplane at Government Island by Major General Wood, Henry Woodhouse and Augustus Post, the latter two governors of the Aero Club of America.

The plucky little woman was immediately hustled into an automobile and driven to an army officer's house to get out of the cold.

The last leg of the flight—270 miles—was made through a dense fog. Miss Law was forced to fly very low, barely topping the hills along the route, in order to be able to see the ground and avoid her bearings.

Machine Often Inevitable. The fog was so dense, in fact, that her flight was followed with difficulty after she left Binghamton. One report was received of her passing Port Jervis, but at many points the aeroplane was invisible because of the mist.

"I followed the Delaware and Susquehanna rivers for a time after leaving Binghamton," Miss Law said. "Then I cut cross-country. It was pretty cold, but naturally it wasn't as cold as when I was in the air much longer. I finished the trip without taking on any gasoline in addition to that with which the tanks were replenished at Hornell. I barely had enough to finish on."

As he neared Governor's Island, the engine failed and she was forced to land on the ground. She was rescued by a boat from the island and taken to the shore.

Reception. Miss Law was given a rousing reception when she landed on Governor's Island. A band at the head of a detachment of soldiers on morning parade was playing as she was sighted and immediately their music was turned into a blare of greeting.

Immediately Miss Law was lifted from her machine and wheeled away to stand beside another aeroplane. The plane, strangely enough, was the same tractor in which Victor Carlstrom made his flight from Chicago to New York, and whose record of 452 miles continuous flight Miss Law surpassed.

Carlstrom is still in New York, and warmly commended the woman aviator. He declared her flight as the greatest aviation feat of the year. Post and Woodhouse, the Aero Club officials, declared the flight of Carlstrom and Miss Law had demonstrated beyond any doubt that an air line between Chicago and New York might soon be expected.

Had No Trouble. Her machine developed no trouble whatever. A loose bolt forced Carlstrom to alight when he landed at Erie, Pa.

All authorities were enthusiastic today over the great strides shown in this country in aviation within the last few weeks.

On the heels of Carlstrom's great flight, a fleet of twelve aeroplanes will be sent to the United States to witness the Yale-Princeton football game Saturday.

When came the flight of Miss Law, and almost simultaneously the announcement of the new palatial flying boat built by the American Trans-Oceanic company, of which Rodman Wanamaker is the head.

This flying yacht is built to carry five persons. The interior of the yacht is fitted up as luxuriously as a similar craft built for use on the water.

BOY'S LIFE SAVED BY STIFF COLLAR

Shot Fired at Deaf Mute Only Bruised His Neck. BALTIMORE, Nov. 20.—A stiff, turnover ligan collar probably saved the life of William Smithers, a fifteen-year-old deaf-mute, when another boy, Mervin Stambler, shot him with a .22 caliber pistol.

Stambler and five other boys were teasing Smithers and a fight followed, in which Stambler, it is alleged, pulled out a pistol and fired at Smithers. The bullet struck Smithers' collar and glanced off, merely bruising his neck.

Stambler and his companions, whose ages range from twelve to fifteen years, were arrested.

EMINENT BALTIMORE ATTORNEY IS DEAD

John J. Donaldson Succumbs at Country Home Near Relay Station. BALTIMORE, Nov. 20.—John Johnston Donaldson, associate counsel in Baltimore for the Pennsylvania Railroad, died at his country home near Relay station, Md., at 10 o'clock this morning.

His death resulted from organic heart trouble and hardening of the arteries, from the Maryland bar. Mr. Donaldson's hobby was literature and his whole purpose and aim of the encyclopedia of periods and movements in the literary world and of historical facts.

Loved Classics. Mr. Donaldson's particular love was for the classics. He devoted much of his leisure to the study of Greek and Latin authors. He carried in his pocket almost constantly a copy of Horace, which he enjoyed reading in his leisure moments.

He was the son of the late Thomas Donaldson, who was counsel for the Pennsylvania Railroad up to the time of his death. He was born in Edgewood, near Elkridge, in 1856, and the house he occupied at the time of his death was not far from the house in which he was born.

It was his custom to arise at 4 o'clock in the morning to go out on hunting expeditions, and he is said to have virtually cleared the woods for miles around of red squirrels.

Mr. Donaldson was a graduate of the law school of the University of Maryland, and later he lectured there on legal subjects. For two years he attended the Harvard law school.

Railroad Counsel. Mr. Donaldson was first counsel for the Philadelphia, Baltimore and Washington railroad, and later when it was absorbed by the Pennsylvania system he became joint counsel in Baltimore with the late Bernard N. Carter.

Years ago he served in the Maryland legislature. He was married about thirty years ago to Miss Ellen Shoemaker, who survives him. Three sisters also survive him, the Misses Mary and Lucy Donaldson, of Elkridge, and Mrs. Robert S. Sloane, of Woodmere, Long Island.

$31,000,000 Parade. CLEVELAND, Nov. 20.—The most expensive parade ever held here, a $31,000,000 affair, attracted there no attention. It was a procession of cash when a large bank moved its quarters.

Her machine developed no trouble whatever. A loose bolt forced Carlstrom to alight when he landed at Erie, Pa. All authorities were enthusiastic today over the great strides shown in this country in aviation within the last few weeks.

On the heels of Carlstrom's great flight, a fleet of twelve aeroplanes will be sent to the United States to witness the Yale-Princeton football game Saturday.

DEMAND DIGNITY IN BIRTH CONTROL MOVE

Members of League Meet Today to Take Action on "Jones' Cartoons" as Postcards. The "Jones Family Group" has started a disension in the ranks of the Washington Birth Control League. It threatens to line up the membership in two factions.

By way of explanation—the "Jones Family Group" is a cartoon drawn by K. R. Chamberlain for the "Masses" and widely used in the New York birth control campaign. Of Mrs. Margaret Sanger and her co-workers, the cartoonist, Mr. Jones believes that recently the Washington Birth Control League had a number of post cards printed with the cartoon on them, for sending out notices of meetings.

The cartoon represents a hopeless, withered family of seven, headed by the care-worn father and mother, with its members anaemic, deformed, and ill kempt. Below the cartoon is the caption "Mr. Jones believes that family limitation is criminal."

Some members of the league took exception to this method of publicity and one of the prominent members, Mrs. Evelyn C. Widney, 1356 Kenyon street, wrote as follows: "I wish to enter my protest against sending through the mail postcards such as I received a few days since, entitled 'The Jones Family.' These cards may be seen by many before reaching the one to whom sent, and by the uninformed and ignorant, and the whole purpose and aim of the 'league' distorted and vulgarized.

While there is no reason for any secrecy in the proceedings, I feel from the nature of the movement it should be conducted with the utmost dignity, and that only by such methods can the desired reforms be accomplished.

"If the methods to which I object are to obtain, I will ask that you remove my name from your list of supporters."

This and other protests led to a call for a special meeting of the league this evening at the home of its president, Mrs. Anna M. Wexler, 406 First street southeast.

SAYS BIRTH CONTROL ISN'T ULTRA-MODERN Birth control agitation is nothing ultra-modern; it dates back to the early '30's in this country. Charles T. Hallinan, of the National Birth Control League, told the Washington Secular League at Pythian Temple yesterday.

Robert Owen and others, the speaker said, agitated the question of birth control nearly 100 years ago in this country, and the movement is old and well-known abroad.

"Mrs. Margaret Sanger has not substantially improved on the methods of Robert Owen," Mr. Hallinan said. "The speaker then outlined the causes and the enactment of the so-called Comstock laws passed by Congress early in the '70's, which, he said, were fostered by Anthony Comstock, whom he described as "a young zealot who swung like a club the grand religious vest of the American middle classes."

"The speaker said that Comstock always allied birth control information with the whole purpose and aim of dissemination of birth control information through the mails became a crime.

In the discussion that followed, several speakers voiced their disapproval of the repeal of any portion of the so-called Comstock laws.
