

HERMIONE IN FLESH ON BELASCO STAGE

Suzanne Is Counterpart of Don Marquis' Herome.

FEMINISM THEME OF PLAY

"Saturday to Monday" Offers No Offense to Suffragists, However.

Hermione is in town. Of course, she isn't going by her real name, but any one who ever has read about the young lady made immortal by the columnist, Don Marquis, will recognize in Suzanne, the leading woman in the new Ames production, "Saturday to Monday," at the Belasco this week, an unmistakable Hermione.

And for that very reason no suffragist can seriously take offense at this brand-new play by William J. Hurlbut, which is in its first performance. No doubt those inclined to the negative side of the suffrage movement will see an argument against the "cause" in this delightful French pasty production, but the play is not after all, only the blind ones, who wouldn't know a Hermione if they bumped into one. Tan to one they are Hermiones there.

An Ardent Feminist. You see, Suzanne is a delightful, slender person of about, oh, twenty-six, widow of one Rollo (who wore rubbers), a social light of no mean candlepower, and ardent (though recently turned) feminist.

Suzanne has probably never been out of style in all her life, and it is safe to assume that she never will be. "What more natural than for her to go in strong for suffrage?" and since she had a new frock and looked adorable, succumb to the lure of street corner feminism.

And pray, what more plausible than for her to "turn down" Foxcraft Gray, who is in love with her, because she is afraid that he will be masterful!

A Trial Marriage. Again, it is well within range of possibility that this perfectly ingenious Hermione, masquerading as Suzanne, should hit upon the idea of a trial marriage, from Saturday to Monday, with Foxey Gray! She doesn't even have a church service but merely a civil marriage.

True to her role, when Suzanne finds herself hopelessly in love with Foxey, she renounces the cause she has so lately "perfectly doted on," and espouses the side of the man, pipes, sock darned, and home making, with no abatement of ardor!

We sincerely hope that nothing happy or lasting will result from the marriage of the cast of "Saturday to Monday." The maid in the last act is an unnecessary adornment, technically and artistically, and there are other roles which might be strengthened by different interpretations.

First Act Headline. But the roles of Foxey, played by Courtney Foote; Suzanne, played by Ruth Maycliffe; Mrs. Erroll, played by Adelaide Prince, and the work of Charles Trowbridge and Elizabeth Riedon should not be subjected to the pruning knife.

As for the play, the first act is good enough to read, and that is saying a whole lot for a play this day and age. Sundry minor changes of a mechanical nature, as to the necessity of which the management of this production is no doubt aware, must take place.

But all in all, Hermione's vehicle is most attractive. Mr. Foote could speak louder and more distinctly, as, indeed, could the whole cast. One is quite able to feel that the "society" is very high, without the aid of the "society voices," affected.

Delight at seeing Hermione in the flesh has almost made us forget to try tribute to Ruth Maycliffe, who impersonates her. Miss Maycliffe is clever, charming, intelligent, and, best of all, looks like one of those Cecil O'Neill's heroines. She plays the role of Suzanne delightfully, and would be perfect if Mr. Foote gave her a less wooden foil as Foxey.

Sailor of United States Navy Puts Some Punch in Program.

Ragtime Reilly, a sailor from the U. S. S. battleship Michigan, with a resonant baritone and a habit of playing the piano, came in first at B. F. Keith's Theater last night.

The stage lost a star when this young man joined the navy. He puts his songs over with a punch, and is thoroughly at home at the piano. He is on special leave for this engagement.

All in all, the bill this week is one of the best ever presented here. Walter Brower's monologue had the house rocking with laughter.

The tabloid comedy presented by Claude Gillinwater, supported by Julie Herne and a good company, is far above the ordinary. The plot of "The Frame Up" and the cast which presented it are exceptional.

REGISTRATION QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

The Times has received many letters and telephone calls about registration. Below are printed some of the questions asked and the most authoritative answers obtainable.

Q.—If I put off registration as an absentee until May 30, which is a legal holiday, why I do so then? I am a resident of New York.

A.—For the convenience of those persons who will be too busy to attend to their duties before May 30, the District Registration Board has arranged for registration of absentees in room 809, District building, on that date. Remember, however, that the registrar is volunteering his services. He receives no remuneration, and it is merely to accommodate you on whom the duty of registering on time devolves, that he is willing to be there.

Q.—I have a mother and sister dependent upon me. I don't get along well with the family and want to go to war. Do I have to state that I have dependents when I register? I am twenty-five years old.

A.—You should remember that the War Department does not want to make war any more horrible than necessary and wishes to decrease the suffering of the people to a minimum. If you are a man of twenty-five and thirty, both inclusive. Your ancestry makes no difference in your status.

Q.—I am deaf and dumb. Will I have some one to interpret for me when I register?

A.—Yes, your case will be provided for.

Piney Branch Citizens' Association Sees Patriotic Duty.

Every potential soldier who registers at the West School June 5 will be presented with a copy of Edward Everett Hale's immortal story, "The Man Without a Country," and a book containing the good wishes of the Piney Branch Citizens' Association.

After an extended debate as to the proper way to observe registration day, this plan was adopted at the suggestion of E. E. Clement. Every copy of the story will bear the name of the association, and will be presented in person by one of its "patriotic duty" committee.

The chassis and some of the equipment for the ambulance which the association is going to present to the American Red Cross has been purchased, and will be on exhibition at the school registration day. There was a roar of laughter at the announcement of Mr. Clement last night that the name plate, showing the name of the association as donor of the ambulance, would be of "German silver."

The twelve-acre potato field which the association has been cultivating has nearly all been plowed, and is about ready for harrowing. Mr. Cameron, who is in charge of the work, said agricultural experts had told him they should raise 2,000 bushels of potatoes this year with a reasonably good season.

The women of the association have organized a Red Cross auxiliary with headquarters at the home of Mrs. E. W. Hanvey, chairman, 1315 Emerson street northwest.

The association last night adopted a resolution asking the District Supreme Court to reappoint W. T. Galliber and Ernest H. Daniel to the Board of Education.

Turn Down Proposal for Demonstration Registration Day.

By a vote of 12 to 4, the West End Citizens' Association determined last night to rejoin the Federation of Citizens' Association, from which it withdrew a year ago.

Action followed a spirited debate on the advisability of a decision with such a small membership in attendance, and upon the benefits to be derived from affiliation with the Federation.

P. F. Sutor proposed to table the motion which had been made the order of business from the previous meeting. His motion was lost 10 to 8.

Refuse to Aid Gardens. An appropriation for garden work in the District was opposed by George W. Evans on the score that it was not a matter local to the west end, and that there were few home gardens in the association's territory.

J. J. Locher was elected to membership. Recommendation was made to the Commissioners for the following street improvements: Twenty-second street, from Virginia avenue to Potomac Park; G street, from Twenty-second street to the river; Twenty-fourth street, from G to K; H street, from Twenty-third to the river; Virginia avenue, from Twenty-second to Seventeenth streets; twenty-first street, from P to Potomac Park; and Nineteenth street from M to Pennsylvania avenue.

Reject Celebration Plans. There will be no celebration Registration Day in the East End. The association rejected the suggestion of the Commissioners, transmitted through Charles S. Shreve, president of the Federation of Citizens' Association, for a demonstration at the registration booths and for a celebration of the day.

Several members spoke against it, declaring that the day was not a holiday and that folks in general had to work. Registration, it was declared, was a duty and the association could see no reason for any flimsy.

A resolution making a new appeal to Congress for suffrage in the District was unanimously passed, as was a resolution urging upon the justices of the District Supreme Court the reappointment of W. T. Galliber and Ernest H. Daniel as members of the Board of Education. Both men supported Superintendent of Schools Thurston for reelection.

PREPARING FOR REGISTRATION.

The Brookland Citizens' Association will hold a special meeting tonight at 8 o'clock in Masonic Temple Hall, Twelfth and Monroe streets. District Commissioners have requested the association to provide entertainment on registration day at the Brookland School.
