

SEBACK NET RESULT FROM PICKETING OF SUFFRAGISTS

Neither President Nor Congress Will Be Forced Into Action on Amendment While War Demands Time.

By DAVID LAWRENCE. (Copyright, 1917, New York Evening Post Co.) Draft excitement and newspaper extras about it crowded the militant suffragettes hard in their effort to gain the attention of Congress today for the Federal amendment consequent upon President Wilson's pardon of the sixteen who were convicted for picketing.

At the same time, the full effect of militant tactics on President Wilson's attitude toward suffrage was disclosed. He takes the position that picketing can be resumed so long as no seditious banners are displayed, but that so far as he is concerned, he is much too busy with war legislation to urge the question at this session of Congress.

Will Not Be Dragged. In other words, while Mr. Wilson might have found a way under other circumstances to stimulate the progress of the Federal amendment, he cannot now be dragged into so doing. Many members of Congress feel the same way. They may be for suffrage, but they will enact no legislation by coercion.

McADOO SCORES PASTOR COOK FOR BUREAU SERMON

Stinging correspondence between Secretary of the Treasury McAdoo and the Rev. E. Albert Cook, pastor of the Capitol Heights Congregational Church, who scored overtime work in the Bureau of Printing and Engraving from his pulpit, was made public by the Treasury Department today.

The explanation given by the Secretary to Director Ralph is characterized as absurd, and the statement inexcusable. The correspondence is as follows: McAdoo to Reverend Cook. Sir: According to 'The Washington Times' of July 2d, you are quoted as making the following statement at the Capitol Heights Church on the night of the 1st instant: 'Director Ralph has not yet shown me that message from Secretary McAdoo which is allegedly to say: 'My Dear Ralph: We're nearly out of money and must depend upon you and your lady friends at the Bureau to make us some more. Please rush it through if it kills every woman in the Bureau.' My attention has just been drawn to the matter. I should like to know if you were correctly quoted and if so, upon what basis you gave circulation to such a misrepresentation? Respectfully, W. G. McADOO.

Pastor to McAdoo. Sir: Your favor of 9th instant has just reached me. The passage in my remarks on Sunday, July 1, which is referred to was exactly as follows: 'If only Director Ralph would show me a certified copy of that message from Secretary McAdoo which I did not believe I had sent any such message to the Director of the Bureau of Engraving and Printing. Until the receipt of your letter I could not bring myself to believe that any man who professes to be a Christian minister and who should have a holy regard for the truth would give public utterances to an "imaginary message" that obviously was found to mislead and misrepresent. Your statement in your letter is unworthy of further notice. Respectfully, W. G. McADOO.

Bureau Chief Lost, Redfield Hopes He Will Read Papers. Will the newspaper of the country please pass R. S. Cutler, acting chief of the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce. He is known throughout the commercial world as R. S. Cutler, president of the Cutler Desk Company. He is located in Washington. He cannot be found. Three days ago Dr. E. E. Pratt resigned as chief of the bureau, at present one of the most important in Washington, as it is largely administering the export control act.

Place Future Orders For Food, District Advises Housewives. The housewives of Washington are not speculators in the stock market, but they were "tipped off" today how to buy food futures and promote the canning campaign of the National and District governments.

Should Place "Future Orders." Mr. Nesbit's suggestion is that the housekeeper shall place what amounts to a "future order" for tomatoes and so on. "When tomatoes reach the price of blank cents," the housewife may inform her dealer, "buy me two crates and notify me."

Declares "Difference" Not Real. Sir: Your letter of the 18th of July has been received. I note, as you say, some "slight" differences between what you claim you said and the newspaper report of your remarks. There is no real difference. Your "imaginary message" was, indeed, a strained and strange creation of figurative speech, if I am to accept your

REICHSTAG ADOPTS COALITION PEACE PLAN RESOLUTION

COPENHAGEN, July 20.—The German Reichstag last evening passed the peace resolution fostered by the coalition of Center, Liberal, and Socialist party members, according to dispatches received here today. The vote was 124 to 116. It was announced amid great applause from the left and the center.

The coalition peace resolution declared that Germany does not desire peace with annexations. In moving adoption of the resolution, the Center leader, Kerenbach, declared: "If the enemy interprets this resolution as a sign of weakness, the Germans will prove that they are capable of a victory. The military situation precludes any misunderstanding. The Kaiser is magnanimous. This resolution corresponds with the people's wishes and hopes that Chancellor Michaelis will make a peace guaranteeing free development."

RESERVES USE PICKS IN TRENCHES OF MUD

Standing knee-deep in mud, future officers in training at Fort Myer are today learning at first hand how to make a trench, and make it right. While some shovel, others use a pick. Trenches have been in vogue at the camp for several days, but today saw the men remedying defects.

DRY LAWS HUGE JOKE TO WEST VIRGINIANS

BALTIMORE, July 20.—"Send a quart of whiskey to my home, will you?" said a modestly dressed resident of West Virginia as he entered one of the largest mail order liquor houses in Baltimore. The purchaser knew the Reed amendment, too. "Sure," replied the man behind the desk. "How'd you like to have it? For medicinal, scientific, or sacramental use? We have it any way you want it. Just say the word and I will paste the label on."

GERMANS TO END PEACE OVERTURES, MICHAELIS AVERS

AMSTERDAM, July 20.—Germany will not make another peace offer; the peace she desires to conclude is that of a victor, and it is the allies who must hereafter make overtures to end the war.

This was the challenge flung to the world by Chancellor George Michaelis, new premier of Germany, in his maiden speech of that office, delivered in the Reichstag. Dispatches from Berlin today quoting the Chancellor emphasized in the most vigorous possible fashion the fact that Germany's new pilot is a militarist to the core.

"We cannot again offer peace," the Chancellor said. "If our enemies abandon their lust of conquest and their aims of subjugation and wish to negotiate, we will listen honestly and be ready for peace—to listen to what they may have to say."

"Until then, we must hold out calmly and patiently and courageously. What we wish is to conclude a peace such as those would conclude who have successfully accomplished their purpose."

"I am unwilling to permit the conduct of affairs to be taken out of my hands."

Not Worrying About U. S. "We are not concerned in America's intervention in France," the Chancellor continued.

"England is scarcely able to feed and supply her own army without influencing the military and economic situation."

"Still more, considering our previous successes, we will be able to master the new situation through our fleet—particularly our submarines."

"Therefore we look forward to the further development of military events with a calm security. The burning question, how long will we war last, can be answered. Germany will not prosecute the war a single day after an honorable peace is obtainable, merely for the purpose to make conquest by violence."

The Chancellor made a vigorous defense of the German policy of unlimited submarine warfare, declared it lawful and justifiable, since it was a measure to shorten the war and because it was a reprisal for England's illegal blockade.

At the close of his address, Michaelis paid high compliment to his predecessor.

Defends Hollweg. "Bitter criticism," he said, "has been made of a highly deserving man who held this post before me. This has frequently been inspired by enmity and hate expressed behind closed doors. When the history of the war is told we will appreciate what Dr. Von Bethmann-Hollweg's chancellorship meant for the enemy."

The new chancellor expressed his realization of the tasks confronting him, but said he had taken office "trusting God and German might."

Territory Inevitable. "Our aims," the chancellor continued, "are: First, that the territory of the Fatherland is inviolable. We cannot parley with an enemy demanding parts of the empire. If we make peace we must be assured that our frontiers are made secure for all time. Peace must build a foundation of lasting reconciliation of nations, and it must prevent nations from plunging into further enmity through economic blockades, and must provide safeguards that a league of our opponents does not develop into an economic offensive alliance against us. You cannot expect me, after only five days in office, to express my views exhaustively and finally on questions of internal policy," Michaelis continued.

TWO NEWSPAPERMEN AMONG THOSE DRAWN

Two Washington newspaper men were among those drafted today, they being Alfred Louis Stern, son of Alfred Louis Stern, rabbi of the Washington Hebrew Congregation, and Victor Carleton Olmsted.

Olmsted's was one of the last names drawn. He barely came within the age limit requiring registration, his thirty-first birthday falling ten days after registration.

Olmsted has been previous military service, as a member of Troop A, of the District Cavalry, with which he did patrol duty on the Mexican border. He has an application in for the second officers' reserve training camp. He is now a copy reader for The Times.

Stern lives with his parents at 1315 Columbia road northwest and is a sporting writer on the Washington Post. He is well known in the upper Fourteenth street section, and has been engaged in newspaper work in Washington for several years.
