

WAKIVA SURVIVORS INCLUDE D. C. MAN, MOTHER IS TOLD

A Washington mother is happy today in the possession of a brief communication from the Navy Department that has relieved a long week of anxiety. She is Mrs. John E. Cooper, of 807 Seventh street southwest, and the letter from the Secretary of the Navy tells of the rescue of her son, O. P. Cooper, chief petty officer of the converted yacht Wakiva.

The happy mother told today how Cooper enlisted in the navy early in 1917 at Rochester, N. Y., and how he came to be among the first of the contingent of American sailors to be sent to European waters for war duty. The petty officer was assigned to the Wakiva, a submarine chaser.

Marriage is Announced. Announcement of the marriage of Miss Mary Belle Hooker and Ernst M. Elkin, was made on Thursday evening, when Mr. and Mrs. Oliver Henry Clarke entertained with musical and buffet supper at their home on Columbia road, in honor of the return of the bride and bridegroom from their wedding trip in Atlantic City.

The wedding, which took place three weeks ago, was hurried on account of Mr. Elkin's duties in the ordnance division of the Royal Flying Corps, and came as a great surprise to all their friends. Mr. and Mrs. Clarke were the only attendants. Miss Hooker was formerly supervising nurse, at George Washington University Hospital, and it was there that Mr. Elkin was a patient there that the couple met. Those present at the buffet supper were P. J. Linscomb, of Nashville, Tenn., guardian of the bride; Mr. and Mrs. Norton Wellesley Abercrombie, New York; Miss Miriam Kingsley, Houston, and her sister-in-law, Mrs. William Gordon Reed, this city; Miss Lucile and Grace Dellano, Toronto, Can.; Miss Delos Ciesel, Miss L. "TAGGING" FOR CASUALTY HOSPITAL IN PROGRESS

Be on the lookout and get tagged today. Six nurses of Casualty Hospital, each assisted by a corps of Girl Scouts, stationed themselves at various street corners, banks, and the Union Station today, tagging passers-by.

The tag day is for the purpose of clearing Casualty Hospital of indebtedness. At least $3,000 is expected to be raised by "tagging." Starting at 10 o'clock this morning and finishing at 4 o'clock, the nurses will have disposed of between 7,000 and 8,000 tags, which are shields of Nile green.

Missie Vaughan, president of the board of lady managers of Casualty Hospital, has charge of the tag sale.

"Vigilante," is beginning to revolve around two women—Maud Allan and Mrs. George Keppel, the latter said to have been a close friend of the late King Edward VII.

In substance, the charge against Miss Allan is that she as a dancer permitted her art to be used for odious and criminal purposes. At least that is what the Vigilante asserted.

Mrs. Keppel, it is contended, was the enticement of King Edward to Holland on a number of occasions to treat with the German Kaiser. It is pointed out that it was hardly probable that Mrs. Keppel would have worked to the disadvantage of Great Britain, because King Edward VII was a friend of France, rather than of Germany.

The search continues for the alleged "black list" said to contain the names of 47,000 suspected persons whom German agents believe they have evidence of moral perversion. Two witnesses have sworn they have seen the list, that it contains among others, the names of Premier Premier Asquith, his wife and many others prominent in affairs of state.

The political significance of the situation is becoming of so great moment that Maud Allan is about to become a mere figure in an incident. The Vigilante, which Mr. Pemberton-Billing helps to run, has increased its criticism to Maud Allan, the dancer. From Mr. Pemberton-Billing and his newspaper, it is charged, that the list have emanated instructions against many of Britain's leaders. He is said to have been responsible for rumors that Premier Lloyd George had to defend himself against.

"King George himself," one English writer says, "has had to vindicate his reputation against these 'whisperers,' and in doing so his honor was defended by Earl Reading, who was then attorney general. What we see today is nothing fresh and Great Britain will not believe one word of what is put forward unless it is proved."
