

BELGIANS INVADE LAND OF RAVAGERS

By ROBERT J. BENDER, (Copyright, 1919, by the United Press.)

PARIS, Jan. 14.—President Wilson is expected to go before the American people, after the peace treaty is signed, to urge its ratification and solidify support of the new world thought it embodies.

By thus shattering another precedent, the President would put the verdict of indorsement of the peace settlement up to public opinion, rather than to a possibly hostile Congress, it was pointed out.

The belief was expressed by friends today that the President will tour the country late this fall, taking the opportunity to urge new domestic policies that lend themselves to changing international ideals. He is to give the key of his policy when he addresses Congress after his return from Europe. His course after that will be determined largely by the attitude in Washington.

That the President will return to France, to be present at the actual consummation of peace, seems to be a foregone conclusion. Much of his future domestic policy will rest on the final details of the peace settlement. He hopes that peace will insure the possibility of a new kind of trade relations, built upon friendship rather than upon treaties and jealousies.

The presence of Vance McCormick, Bernard Baruch, Edward Hurley and Charles Schwab in Paris will enable the President to study domestic problems in relation to foreign affairs. He can keep pace with developments and will be in a position to arrive at a definite policy that could be launched immediately after the treaty was signed.

DUBLIN MAYOR GETS FRENCH PASSPORT

DUBLIN, Jan. 14.—The British foreign office has informed the lord mayor of Dublin that a passport will be issued to him, and that he may go to Paris and confer freedom of the city upon President Wilson.

There is a possibility that the lord mayor, if he obtains an audience with President Wilson, may seek to acquaint the latter with the Irish version of the political situation in that country. He was prevented from doing this when the British authorities refused to grant him a passport to the United States.

On that occasion the lord mayor sent an official communication to the President, urging American indorsement of independence for Ireland on the principle of self-determination. Previous news dispatches have asserted that the passport of the lord mayor was refused by the French government.

LODGE TO SPEAK AT T. R. CONGRESS MEMORIAL FEB. 9

By unanimous vote of the Senate and House, Senator Lodge was chosen to deliver the eulogy at the joint Congressional memorial for Theodore Roosevelt in the House chamber on February 9. Senator Lodge had for many years been one of the former President's closest friends. He will be the only speaker at the exercises.

Friends of the late Colonel Roosevelt here and in New York are sending out a request that each State hold simultaneously on February 9 Roosevelt memorial services. The request will be telegraphed today to the governor of each State.

GERMAN SHIPS MAY BRING YANKS HOME

The Allied War Council at a meeting at Treves tomorrow, will consider taking over a number of German merchant ships for American troops transportation.

The ships under consideration would bring 70,000 soldiers home monthly. In admitting that such a proposal would come up, Secretary of Navy Daniels announced today that he had begun an active recruiting campaign for the navy, as that service would have to man these ships.

Moreover, it will be necessary to fill up gaps in the service caused by men anxious to return to civil life. Secretary Daniels particularly wants firemen and engineers. The navy must be kept at 250,000 strength in any case.

Admiral Benson, representing the United States, at the council, cabled here an outline of the plan to take German ships. A considerable group of ships now held in German ports is listed for requisitioning.

By seizing these vessels, the return movement of troops should soon approximate 300,000 a month. The War Department declared a week ago that tonnage in sight would take care of at least 200,000 a month. At that time it was intimated that future arrangements would make it possible to bring troops back at as rapid a rate as they were sent a cross—about 300,000 or more a month.

Maude Adams Under Care Of Boston Specialist

Maude Adams, the actress, is ill at the home of Miss Phyllis Robbins, of Boston, where she is under the care of a specialist for nervous breakdown. It was said that she was resting comfortably, and that rapid improvement was expected to follow the complete rest ordered by her physician.

Miss Adams' stage activities this season have been brief. It is understood she has in preparation a new play by Sir James M. Barrie, written for her.

Paintings Done in Dugouts Under Shell Fire Are To Be Exhibited Here Today

Pictures destined to make history—canvases which are history in themselves—these are the official British war paintings, done in the trenches and under shellfire, in sound of all the tragedies of the great conflict, which are being placed on exhibition at the Corcoran Art Gallery for the first time in this country this afternoon. Today's showing is a private view and by invitation only for all officialdom and notables of the city, but the general public will have an opportunity to view them every day afterward until February 2, inclusive.

Nearly 250 in number, the exhibit represents the work of ten of England's most noted artists, designated by the British government at the beginning of the war to go to the front and picture for the British public the various phases of the war as they came under the artists' eyes. Here is no studio output, painted from imagination and second-hand description. Here, instead, are vibrant, vital canvases which in their return have done their part at the front, painted in dugout studios, moved to the rear many a time before the paint was yet dry, and finally transported to England across the channel by airplane for greater safety. It is understood that each canvas is insured by the British government for £2,000.

No War Horrors Shows.

Those who go to the Corcoran Gallery expecting horror piled on horror will be entirely disappointed. Those who are contemplating remaining away for fear their sensibilities will be shocked by the pictorial representation of sights in the trenches and on No Man's Land need have no fear. The paintings do not show the war as the average individual would expect. There is no great panoramic canvas, no great stretch of no man's land, no great air battle, no naval engagement.

Instead the artists take you here and there, show you a fragment of this, a bit of that, give you the symbol rather than the obvious fact. Maybe the British government ordered that for the benefit of posterity the greater horrors be left out, to be forgotten by this generation and the next as best they may be. Maybe the sensitive eyes of the artists recoiled from certain sights and preferred to give their public other insights into France as it has been for the past four years. At any rate, out of nearly a hundred canvases which Sir William Orpen alone has painted, there are only two which need have no fear. They have been imagined, and it is noticeable that the dead in the trench are marked "Dead Germans in a trench." For those ghastly forms could have been any of the uniformed men who gave their lives on both sides of No Man's Land.

The other, "The Falling Bomb," depicts a half-naked, wholly terrified fugitive seeking refuge in a bomb cellar.

Orpen is easily the great feature of the exhibition. His industry alone—it requires two great rooms for the display of his work—is phenomenal, and the breadth and variety of his work evoke exclamation. His canvases do the work of half a dozen artists, such is the varying treatment accorded the different subjects.

Orpen's "Belgian Refugee" is a creature of appalling blonde beauty, so fragile, so wistful, in the steady gaze of those tearless eyes—eyes one trembles to look into, for they have since shed all their tears and learned their futility. His "Belgian Refugee" No. 2, might be the little younger sister of the first, such is the resemblance in beauty and pathos, but there is a horror in the eyes of this nearly nude little figure which makes one feel she has looked in the eyes of the Hun when they were red with wine and lust.

Orpen's portraits are smashing and direct. Out of the painted canvases looms the man, whether it be Field Marshal Haig or the young flyer the artist thought typified all the valor and courage of the allied armies. The Haig Orpen shows us is a kindlier man and with more human qualities than the photographic likeness we have had heretofore. He is the man of simple faith and ideals. The gem of the exhibition, the portrait of Generalissimo Foch has not yet been hung, but is expected at the last moment. Curiously enough quite the most intelligent figure of all the por-

WILL ARREST GIRLS IN GEORGIA KILLING

BLAIRSVILLE, Ga., Jan. 14.—The arrest of Rose and Margaret Crawley, as accessories to the murder of Deputy United States Marshal B. F. Dixon, was expected this forenoon. Dixon of the girls, together with Felix and Frank Crawley, captured yesterday by troops from Camp Gordon, will be sent to Atlanta for safekeeping.

Determination to send the quartet to Atlanta was made at a conference between United States Marshal Howard Thompson, who was sent here yesterday on direct instructions from Washington, and Col. Herman Glade, commanding the Camp Gordon troops. Fear that the prisoners would be freed by friends, or harmed by relatives and sympathizers of the slain deputy, officers said, prompted this move.

A squad of soldiers stood on guard at the Crawley home last night watching the women inside, and on the lookout for the remaining three members of the Crawley band now at liberty.

Ruddy Cheeks—Sparkling Eyes—Most Women Can Have

Says Dr. Edwards, a Well-Known Ohio Physician

Dr. F. M. Edwards for 17 years treated scores of women for liver and bowel ailments. During these years he gave to his patients a prescription made of a few well-known vegetable ingredients mixed with olive oil, naming them Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets. You will know them by their olive color.

These tablets are wonder-workers on the liver and bowels, which cause a normal action, carrying off the waste and poisonous matter in one's system.

If you have a pale face, sallow look, dull eyes, pimples, coated tongue, headaches, a listless, no-good feeling, all out of sorts, inactive bowels, you take one of Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets nightly for a time and note the pleasing results.

Thousands of women as well as men take Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets—the successful substitute for calomel—now and then just to keep in the pink of condition. 10c and 25c per box. All druggists

U. S. LED IN HOT AIR ALONE, SAYS ALLEN

TOPEKA, Kan., Jan. 14.—America's reported domination of the air at the battlefield in France was merely "domination of hot air," according to Gov. Henry J. Allen, who last night made his first address dealing with his experiences during ten months with the Y. M. C. A. in France.

The governor charges that lack of equipment, airplanes, and transportation was largely responsible for the loss of 50 per cent of the men in the Thirty-fifth Division, which lost 7,000 men in six days' fighting in the Argonne forest.

"We saw much in the papers that came to us of American domination in the air," Mr. Allen said. "But we did not know that throughout the war it was going to be a domination of hot air."

R. R. WORKERS FOR FEDERAL CONTROL

Government ownership of the railroads is going to get practically the unanimous indorsement of railroad workers and affiliated organizations, according to labor officials here. When a referendum vote is being taken to determine the stand of the international unions, and reports already show they will vote almost unanimously for Government ownership. It will be several weeks before the final results are known. J. F. Anderson, vice president of the International Association of Machinists, declares that "all the unions will show a strong majority for it."

GLASS SAYS PATRIOTISM MUST FLOAT FIFTH LOAN

NEW YORK, Jan. 14.—Carter Glass, in the first public address he has made since appointment as Secretary of the Treasury, took occasion to boost the proposed fifth Liberty loan, when he appeared before the New York State Bankers' Association.

He expressed the belief that the patriotism of the American people would float the next loan.

CAN'T FIND DANDRUFF

Every bit of dandruff disappears after one or two applications of Danderine Rubbers will into the scalp, and you have a soft, playful child again. Children simply will not take the time from play to empty their bowels, and they become tightly packed, liver gets sluggish and stomach disordered.
