

We Congratulate The Times Upon Its Successful Service to the Washington Public During the Past Two Years

We are glad for the success of ANY newspaper in Washington. The good we can do for our patrons is more or less proportionate to the field covered by the papers of the community. The more people they reach the more folks we are able to tell of our merchandise—specially or otherwise bought.

If we had the power to do it, we would place a newspaper in the home of every resident of Washington. It would increase our purchasing power by bringing more people to our doors. And the more friends we had the larger quantities we could buy, which would mean greater savings.

So, you see, we have a real interest in the success of the newspapers of this city, and it is with pleasure that we congratulate The Times upon the degree of success that has come to it during the past two years under its present management. May this growth and prosperity continue through the years that are to come.

Editorial

How inter-dependent we are on each other, and yet how little we realize it until something unusual happens.

Who would suppose that a street car strike would cut the profits of a daily newspaper, and yet that is exactly what happens.

During the street car strike of Detroit we find the newspaper advertising cut in half. Some department store ads eliminated entirely—because the people couldn't come down town to shop.

Suppose the newspapers suspended publication, people wouldn't be invited down town so alluringly, and the street cars would suffer along with the stores.

Closing up the stores would hurt both the papers and the street cars.

We all certainly do need each other.
