

Women of France and Brazil Have Smallest Feet; U. S. Runs Third

The greatest of international foot races—the size of women's shoes—is a dead heat for France and Brazil. Statistics gathered by the United Press via cable regarding the size of women's shoes sold in various countries, revealed that French and Brazilian girls have the smallest feet, size 4. The United States, Germany, and Argentina are tied for third place with 4 1/2, while Great Britain is almost an also ran with 5 1/2.

United States Runs Third. Chicago, San Francisco and Atlanta, picked to represent the United States, were shown in a similar symposium recently to have the smallest feet in this country. While a different system of measurement prevails in most countries, competent dealers were obtained to translate all sizes into the American standard. Following are the reports from the various countries:

Paris Average Is 4. PARIS, Nov. 12.—Sales of women's shoes in Paris range from 3 to 5 1/2 in size, but the average, according to dealers, is 4. The widths vary from C to E. Only plain blacks or tans are worn for street wear, while the color for evening wear varies with the gown.

Argentina With United States. BUENOS AIRES, Nov. 12.—Argentine women's feet average about the same as their American sisters, but are two or three sizes wider. The average length is No. 4 1/2, while widths range from B to E. Dark brown pumps are the most popular of styles.

5 1/2 Size in London. LONDON, Nov. 12.—The present generation of British women has generally been "crippled" by badly fitting shoes and lack of graduated sizes, according to several prominent shoe dealers. As a result the size of the average woman's foot in London is 5 1/2.

Present day English children are stiffer shod and more carefully shod, did one, "and when they are grown up their feet will be as small and graceful as any in the world."

U. S. ATTORNEY ASKS DELAY OF DRY TEST

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Nov. 12.—On the eve of arguments on a suit to test constitutionality of the wartime prohibition law and the Volstead Enforcement act in Federal District Court, United States District Attorney W. V. Gregory announced that he would resist attempts to secure the hearing prior to adjudication of much the same issues in a previous action based on argument in the United States Supreme Court November 20. The case on the court calendar here was brought by Attorneys William M. Bullitt, Louisville, and Levy Mayor, Chicago, on behalf of Wright & Taylor and Brown & Forman, Louisville distillers. It primarily questioned the validity of wartime prohibition and sought eventually to prevent interference with sales of nearly 1,000,000 gallons of tax-paid whiskey commonly known as "floor stock." The case appealed to the Supreme Court, hearing of which on motion of the Government was advanced to November 20, was instituted by the Kentucky Distilleries and Warehouse Company. It also attacked wartime prohibition on constitutional grounds and alleged that under its terms about 30,000,000 gallons of whiskey, worth approximately $75,000,000 in various bonded warehouses were about to be permanently removed as a domestic commercial commodity.

50,000,000 TONS TO BE RELEASED

Upward of 50,000,000 tons of bituminous coal will be released by the railroad administration as soon as it is definitely known when the miners will return to work. It was stated here today. This coal is on wheels, and it is urgent that the cars be released so that they may be sent back to the mines. It was learned that there is hardly a railroad in the country that does not have at least thirty days' supply of coal on hand, while New England and the Upper Lakes region and the northwestern States have virtually a full supply for the winter. The production of bituminous coal has been increasing daily recently, and reached the top figure on November 9, when 9,719 cars, containing 185,900 tons were moved.

IN MEMORIAM

"VICTORINE." In loving remembrance of my dear wife, LUCY VICTORINE, second daughter of the late Benjamin and Sarah Willett, who entered into rest, April 12th, 1915, at her home near White Plains, Md., in the fifty-eighth year of her age, the following lines are thoughtfully dedicated by me, her devoted husband: Dost thou remember, dear, o'er life's dark sea, When grace and beauty—thine—embarked with me, How on my tireless arm, a little while I bore thee up, and welcomed ev'ry smile? Dost thou not know that, in this mad domain, Those bygone moments bring me greatest pain? And that when called to meet thee, and until, My ceaseless song shall be: "I love you still." For thou wast good to me, and took the hand Which smoothed thy brow, that I might understand; How two and forty years, then ebbing fast, Could make a dying scene the living past. Yes, in the Spirit Land, sweet Victorine, I love you, though thou canst no more be seen; Where once—ah me!—as years gave place to years, We waded our thread, but passed from smiles to tears. Was there an ill, not thine, but mine alone—A cross, a care, that I could call my own? Oh, no! What pain to my fond heart broke through? Was pain to thee—one lancet pang, not two! 'Twas no light cast, on lips as pure as thine, Which touched my own, and oft, when love divine was made, but of my heart the stay. 'Till longer could not hold thee; then away! Methinks thy flight a dream, sometimes—but, lo! Thy chair no more resumes its seat to me, While, here and there, thy fragrant garments tell The awful truth, which speaks our last "farewell!" THE MORAL: But is there no replete to that dread word? Shall doubts defy me, and my cries be "heard"? 'Tis we who pray; but what does prayer avail, If none comes back to earth to tell the tale? Much ev'ry way—it gives the faithful hope It swings the sinking soul the saving rope It calms the heart, which has never been The master of that tongueless mystery! O God! Thy stern decree revoke, and bid Me back once more my love from yonder sky. That you may live, not two-score years, no ten, But one sweet moment NOW, as we lived here! For fate is laid from childhood to the grave— Or as we see it, Yet, beyond the wave, There may be glories—and no doubt there are! Which make each "shadow" here a Morning Star. WILLIAM C. SHAW. (The Times-Creoscent please copy.) HARRY.—In sad but loving remembrance of our dear sister, MINNIE G. HARRY (nee Fenwick), who departed this life one year ago—November 12, 1918. From a world of pain and sorrow, To a land of peace and rest, God has taken you, dear sister, If we had seen you at the last, And held your dying hand, And heard the light from your heart, We would not feel so bad. For loving brother and sister-in-law, BAY AND ZORBE.
