Sanitary Shaving: Dear Sir: Do you shave yourself, or do you have your barber to shave you? This doesn't matter, however, as it is only a question I am asking which relates to the importance of sanitary shaving. It is your duty, as well as that of your barber, to adopt every possible means of thorough sterilization at this time when infectious diseases are so prevalent. The perfect sterilizer for shaving purposes should be a liquid. Its sterilizing power should be guaranteed by an authorized bacteriological test. At the same time it should be pleasant and agreeable to use, and should be so cheap in price and so simple in preparation as to enable its being used freely.

Tyree's Antiseptic Powder —for this special purpose we believe is now considered the most modern remedial agent and fully meets all of these requirements. A large teaspoonful in a pint of water makes a solution which will not cost you more than two and one-half cents and will last from thirty to sixty days. Use the solution liberally before and after shaving. Its effects are indeed very pleasant. We will mail you enough to make one pint of this solution free if you will drop us a postal card with your name and address. For sale at all drug and department stores in the States and South America. J. S. Tyree, Chemist, Inc.
