RUSSIAN PIANIST WINS HIGH PRAISE

Rachmaninoff Concert Is Marked by Grace, Beauty, Color, and Clarity.

"Such grace in his playing!" was one exclamation made at the delightful recital of the great Russian pianist, Sergei Rachmaninoff, at the National Theater yesterday afternoon. The praise was true, though it told but one side of this many-sided great man of the piano. Grace and beauty, exquisite tone, purest color and absolute clarity all characterized the program Rachmaninoff gave to Washington yesterday. He really appeared in the role of the pianist's pianist. But first and foremost he struck his deepest note in the opening Bach-Busoni "Chaconne," proving also how manifold may be the revelations contained in the music of Bach, for the great artist may do anything he chooses with Bach, and Rachmaninoff made this work, that Busoni has enriched, a thing of varied tones-moods. There were rare inside voices, big organ chords, an impromptu rather than a technical reading, bringing out the beauties of his fascinating tone and touch. Far away, at the other pole of musical expression, was the Debussy "Children's Corner." That little "Serenade of a Doll" was a miniature story of this miniature theme, expressive serenade and tiny fugal. "The Little Shepherd" seemed alone on a wide plain in a charming picture in which Mr. Hirsch expressed that inexpressible rhythm that permeates Rachmaninoff's art. The "Golliwog's Cuckoo Walk" was filled with humor. Did Debussy feel the American ragtime here? It was contrasted with a humorous love theme.

DETAIL IN ART. The Mozart Sonata, No. 5, was given with tones chaste, yet vital and warm, these-painting of pure color and rare repose; tender speech of the piano filled with individual ideas and personal values, that echoed through the lovely music. Different, too, was the final "Rondo alla Toccata." Rachmaninoff did not carry it beyond the early instrument of Mozart. It did not thunder, but was characteristic in a different way. Schumann, the "Papillons," was also a personal whimsy. Unlike Cortot, unlike Hofmann, its romance had more life than mystery in it, its caprice was alive with the brightness of the dance, accented, fresh. And then the great artist played two more of his Preludes, that we did not know. The C major had a feeling of hills and open spaces in it, the atmosphere of a Debussy land-scope with that quiet which the broader reaches of a broader land might give. The rhythmic wholeness of the music of the piano Prelude was dominantly major, with a single gripping theme of two descending chords. As encore Mr. Rachmaninoff played his own "Polka" with his exquisite, feathery technique, giving an encore to his deep-hued Chopin group, the Chopin E flat major waltz, and at the close of his program a Mendelssohn "Song Without Words."

The concert was presented by Mrs. Wilson-Greene.

JESSIE MACBRIDE.
Officers seek source of booze by wireless.
CHICAGO, April 1.—Booze by wireless!
Yep. It's the latest method in Chicago, according to District Attorney Charles F. Clynne.
Mr. Clynne received a complaint from an amateur wireless operator who said he intercepted a wireless message flashed from the old Twenty-second street district to Maywood recently. It was:
"Mike Costello is not get his booze on time last Thursday night. If this happens again payment will be stopped." It was not signed.
Mr. Clynne has radio men and prohibition agents trying to trace the booze wireless stations.
It may be a flash—not a flask of whiskey from now on.
