ARMS VISIT OF LLOYD GEORGE WILL BE BRIEF

Premier Will Remain a Month and Then Retire in Favor of Geddes.

By WEBSTER K. NOLAN, International News Service.

Premier Lloyd George will take an active part in the Armament and Far East Conference for about one month and then will return to England on or about December 9, transferring the leadership of the British delegation to Sir Auckland Geddes, British ambassador to the United States. It was said at the British embassy today.

Though the premier has not acquainted British officials here with the exact length of his proposed visit in Washington, it was said at the embassy that pressure of important affairs at home would necessarily be at variance with the desire of the premier to remain in Washington more than a month.

The possibility of Premier Lloyd George returning to Washington if the conference is still in session next spring was considered not unlikely. The French embassy professed no knowledge as to whether or not Premier Briand would make a projected visit to this country. The opinion was advanced, however, that he would not. Premier Briand, it was intimated at the French office, will remain until all important measures affecting France or French interests has been settled.

Asquith Talks of Debt.

LONDON, Oct. 27.—"The best way to dispose of world-wide unemployment is to get rid of interrelated indebtedness," said former Premier Asquith in a speech at Turnbridge Wells yesterday.

Storage of Anthracite Adds to Production Cost

ANTHRACITE coal comes from a comparatively small section of Pennsylvania. In order to produce enough anthracite to supply the country's requirements, the Pennsylvania mines must be kept in continuous operation.

In summer production exceeds demand and it becomes necessary to place the surplus in storage. In winter the demand exceeds the productive ability of the mines.

For these reasons on September 1 the larger anthracite companies had about 4,500,000 tons of all sizes stored in plants belonging to them between the mines and eastern markets.

In addition to this about 2,000,000 tons of domestic sizes are carried on western lake docks.

This coal had to be loaded on cars at the mines, freight paid to the storage yards, unloaded and placed in storage. When it is sold, the operation is reversed, the coal is picked up, screened, reloaded on cars and shipped to destination.

The storing of sizes of anthracite used for ranges and furnaces is a costly operation. The biggest item arises from the breaking up of the coal into smaller and less marketable sizes, that sell for only $2 or $3 a ton.

The necessity of storing anthracite adds from 60 cents to $1 a ton to the cost of the coal, depending on circumstances. This figure does not include interest on money tied up in the coal, nor interest on the investment in the storage yards.

If consumers would take half of their supply during spring and summer months the cost of storage would be eliminated.

In the long run, the available supply of coal is not only what the mines are able to produce, but what the railroads can transport and your coal dealer distribute.

The best place to store coal is in the consumer's coal bin

The information contained in this series of advertisements of which this is No. 7, has to do only with the MINE producers' part in the transaction. Control passes out of the producers' hands as soon as the coal is loaded on cars for shipment to market.
