"Get-Rich-Quick Wallingford"

From the World-Famous Play by GEORGE M. COHAN

"The Great American Picture"—and then!

Cut in the mold of American folks—carved into characters that move and breathe and are seen on the main street of every hamlet in forty-eight States—with famous J. Rufus Wallingford himself not only the king pin get-rich-quick artist of them all, but Wallingford, the great, big, warm-hearted, lovable boy—ambitious, keen fighter, lover!

Every foot is a scream, but the laughs leave a drop in your eye—It's another Wallingford enterprise—building millions on nothing, and a carpet tack—but it's simple and wholesome and GREAT—with a snap to it like the crack of a whip.

Directed by Frank Borzage, who directed "Humoresque," the gold medal winner of 1920, Scenario by Luther Reed, Settings by Joseph Urban Presented by Famous Players-Lasky Corporation.
