

REVENUE NEED PREVENTS ANY SLASH IN TAXES

Fordney-Penrose Act Inadequate to Meet Demand on Treasury.

SAVING PROGRAM ON ROCKS Shipping Board, Postoffice, and Navy Departments Need More. Separate Bill for Bonus.

By EDMOND C. TAYLOR, Universal Service.

There will be no reduction in taxes when Congress again revises the revenue laws late this session, leaders in Congress predicted today.

Economy Program Falls. The Republican economy program, which was widely heralded when Congress reduced taxes in the Fordney-Penrose revenue act last summer is not materializing as well as House and Senate leaders expected.

According to facts concerning the requirements of the Federal Government laid before the House Appropriations Committee recently when that body was working on the first budget, the tax revision of last summer will be found inadequate to meet the demands upon the Federal Treasury.

Need More Revenue.

When taxation comes up again members of the Appropriations Committee freely predict methods will have to be found for raising more revenue instead of an effort being made further to reduce the tax burden.

With only two of the nine appropriation bills completed by the committee and three others under preparation, House leaders already have seen that the revenue produced under the revision of last summer will not meet the Government's expenses for the present year.

It was estimated that the total expenses of the Government would be $2,400,000,000 for the fiscal year ending June 30, when the Fordney-Penrose measure was before Congress during the special session. Of this amount it was expected that $2,250,000,000 approximately would be raised by direct taxation. The remainder would come from customs duties and other sources of income.

Economy Road Rocky.

This was a reduction of nearly $800,000,000 from the preceding year, but in making this cut leaders in the Senate and House expected that the program of economy as agreed upon by President Harding and his Cabinet could be carried out. The revenue revision act was expected to draw on to yield barely sufficient revenue to cover the estimated expenditures under the economy program.

Treasury officials have informed Congress that the existing tax laws will produce the amount it was estimated they would yield. Nevertheless, the Federal Treasury will have to borrow money during the present year if expenses are to be met, according to members of the House Appropriations Committee.

The first rock which the economy program hit was the request submitted by the Shipping Board this week for an additional $50,000,000. The Shipping Board had previously asked down for a saving of $100,000,000, and half of this saving went when the additional appropriation was asked.

May Create Deficit.

According to members of the committee the board soon will make another request, this time of $100,000,000. If it is granted, that much more of a deficit will be created.

The appropriations committee also has been advised formally that, before the end of the present fiscal year one, and possibly two, of the departments will demand deficiency appropriations.

The Navy Department, according to information received by members of the committee, soon will ask for $100,000,000 to $150,000,000, despite the Hughes reduction program. The Postoffice Department also is expected by committee members to request a deficiency appropriation, but for a considerably smaller amount.

The total additions to the requirements of the departments for the present year are expected by committee members to total more than $300,000,000. This money must be borrowed by the Treasury and paid back out of taxes received next year.

Bonus Not Included.

The requirements of the Government departments were cut to the bone in the Harding economy program, according to leaders in Congress, and no further reductions in expenditures can be looked for.

When Congress undertakes another revision of taxation late this session it will have to provide for expenditures estimated to be as heavy as the expenditures of the present year with the additional burden of this year's deficiencies.

The soldier bonus is not being considered by Congress leaders in conjunction with the fiscal program. Any plan for paying the bonus out of current revenues is strongly opposed in both the Senate and House. When the bonus bill is complete it will carry its own provisions for raising the necessary funds.

Camp Sherman School Almost Crime, Says Marx

CINCINNATI, Ohio, Jan. 14.—"It is almost a crime against the former soldiers," declared Judge Robert S. Marx, president of the Disabled Veterans Association today, upon his return from a secret investigation of conditions at the Government training school for disabled veterans at Camp Sherman, Ohio.

"I shall issue a formal statement shortly upon the result of my investigation and, unless I change my mind very radically, will warn all veterans to stay away from this school.

"The facts of the case are grossly misrepresented. The school is not in operation, all accounts to the contrary notwithstanding."

PRETTY MAIDEN HE CURED WILL BE HIS BRIDE

Miss Theresa Peck, Saved From Death by Specialist, Gives Her Heart to Dr. Rockwell.

SYRACUSE, Jan. 14.—Because Miss Theresa Peck, Whitney Point belle, and daughter of one of Broome county's most prominent families, had a pimple upon her face a year ago, she will soon become a bride.

Experiment Gets Bride.

Because Dr. George Huntington Rockwell, one of Syracuse's best known physicians and a noted specialist in nose, throat and ear diseases, happened to be conducting serum experiments a year ago, he will shortly become a bridegroom.

A Christmas Eve luncheon party, given to intimates of the bride-to-be by her mother at Whitney Point, was responsible for the disclosure of a real Arabian Nights' romance.

The betrothal was announced quietly to those attending the luncheon, but it was left for the associates of Dr. Rockwell in the Syracuse medical journal to learn of the engagement days later.

Romantic Meeting.

Quizzed by friends, Dr. Rockwell smilingly confessed that the report a second time was true. But he in the was soon to become a benedict for sisted that the date had not as yet been set. Nor would he give reporters any further information.

Guests at a dinner given by a prominent Syracuse society woman a year ago, however, supplied the story that neither Miss Peck nor her intended husband would tell.

Last winter "Tex," as Miss Peck is known in the younger set, with whom she is immensely popular in her home county as well as in Syracuse, came to this city for a weekend. She was one of the guests at the dinner party in question. She was Dr. Rockwell, himself in his early forties.

According to those in the "act," it must have been a case of love at first sight. Dr. Rockwell was attentive to the young woman throughout the evening and danced frequently with her after the dinner. And Miss Peck, her friend noted, welcomed the interest of the Syracuse medical leader.

But the morning after, Miss Peck awoke in great agony. In some manner an apparently inoffensive pimple on her chin had become infected, and within the next day or two she was in the hospital of the Good Shepherd here, terribly disfigured through blood poisoning.

Saves Her Life.

Physicians and blood experts, who were called in to attend Miss Peck, expressed grave doubts whether she would be able to successfully combat the ravages of gangrene; nurses expressed the belief that she would die.

Then Dr. Rockwell, calling to pay her his compliments at the home of Miss Peck's hostess here, learned of her sudden illness and the critical condition at the hospital. He decided that she must not die, and he obtained permission to give her serums which he had been studying.

His friends' stories that a new and unique treatment was used in Miss Peck's case bring denials from Dr. Rockwell.

"I only used a stock treatment, and physicians could have given it," he said.

Dr. Rockwell constantly attended Miss Peck. Morning, noon, and night he was to be found at the Good Shepherd, watching every change in the condition of his patient. And the ballroom acquaintance became a firm sickroom friendship, and developed into love.

Miss Peck soon was convalescent. Whether she scored a victory or not, the final win was registered by Cupid. That much Dr. Rockwell enthusiastically confirms.

LOSE THEIR CHURCH

The Adventist Tabernacle, known as the mother church of that section, was destroyed by fire in Battle Creek, Mich., on January 7. Five years ago the publishing house of the church at Takoma Park was burned.

ADVENTISTS' FIRE DISASTER IS NO. 13

Burning of Battle Creek Tabernacle Is Latest of Long Series.

Seventh-Day Adventists, who have national headquarters at Takoma Park, have suffered another disaster. Their tabernacle at Battle Creek, Mich., valued at $150,000 and having a seating capacity of 2,100, was destroyed by fire on January 7, last.

This is the latest in a series of thirteen major fires that have visited and destroyed large buildings belonging to the Adventists in Battle Creek, former national headquarters.

In 1901 the Adventists lost their sanitarium and publishing house in a fire that did $550,000 damage. The sanitarium and publishing house were removed to Takoma Park, where they are now maintained.

Soon after the Battle Creek fires began—some of them were of incendiary origin—Mrs. White, the denominational prophet, claimed to have had a vision of a flaming sword hanging over the city, and warned leaders to remove the headquarters elsewhere.

The fires she represented as judgments visited because of a failure to heed the instructions given in her writings. Accordingly, the denominational headquarters were moved to Takoma Park, this city and Maryland.

But the fires of the denomination have not been confined to Battle Creek. Some of their large institutions elsewhere have met with disaster. Their publishing houses in both London and Basel, Switzerland, were both closed on account of objectionable Sunday work, and their food factory at Surrey Hills, England, was destroyed by fire. In 1905, at the time of the San Francisco earthquake, their large Pacific Press publishing house, located at Mountain View, fifty-six miles south of San Francisco, was shaken to the ground. It was immediately rebuilt, but was burned the next year, Mrs. White herself being the heaviest personal loser in the fire. Illustrations which she had paid a New York artist thousands of dollars to make were destroyed. A few years ago the publishing house here in Washington suffered a $25,000 fire, and only by the most heroic efforts was saved from complete destruction.

Both their church and sanitarium in Des Moines, Ia., burned down a few years ago.

For seven years the sect has been without a prophet. Mrs. White having died in California in 1915. Her body was sent to Battle Creek, where the funeral was held in the Tabernacle recently destroyed. Following the funeral she was taken to the city cemetery, where the coffin was lowered into a grave by the side of her deceased husband, but immediately afterward, it is reported, was sent on to Takoma Park, the present denominational headquarters, for actual interment.

MODERN UTOPIA IS PLANNED IN MEXICO

International Temple of Education and Colony Is Project on 250,000 Acres.

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 14.—Details concerning the building of a modern Utopia of 25,000 inhabitants on the shores of Lake Chapala, near Guadalajara, Mexico, with an international university, attended by more than 10,000 students, were told by Dr. Orlando Miller, president of the International Society of Applied Psychology, the organization behind the project.

More than 250,000 acres, which before the Madero revolution produced an income of a million yearly, will be taken over on a co-operative basis by the society, and a temple of education which covered two city blocks in Mexico City, started during the Diaz regime, but stopped by the Madero revolution, will be moved to Lake Chapala.

The marble and steel structure will be re-erected into an international university, whose basic teachings will be that death is an avoidable accident and old age a preventable disease.

No tuition will be accepted at the university, but each student in attendance will be required to give four hours a day labor, and the fruits of their efforts sold will be enough to finance the institution.

THE MEANEST TRICK.

deceased husband, but immediately afterward, it is reported, was sent on to Takoma Park, the present denominational headquarters, for actual interment.

PASTOR'S AUTO STOLEN. DANVILLE, Va., Jan. 14.—The Danville police have been asked to look out for an automobile belonging to the Rev. W. J. Gordon, rector of the Episcopal Church at Spray, N. C., which was stolen recently while he was conducting a prayer service. The car had been recently given to the minister by the members of his congregation.
