

BRITISH SHIPYARDS

SEE A BRIGHT YEAR

LONDON, Dec. 28.—According to dispatches from Sunderland, the north coast of England is looking forward to unexampled prosperity during 1923, although the last year has been disastrous.

HE ASKS SON'S ARREST

FEARING TO LOSE HIM

NEW YORK, Dec. 27.—Fearing that he would be unable to produce his son, Isaac, in court, and that he would forfeit his home as a result, Davis Herman, Brooklyn, yesterday appeared before County Judge MacMahon, and surrendered the youth, who is eighteen. On December 2 Isaac pleaded not guilty to two indictments, one for burglary and the other for grand larceny.

Society Flocks to Senate—Lively Debate On

POLITICS is a favorite game in Washington, and the way in which the galleries at the Senate are thronged when international relations are under discussion gives evidence of the keen interest. Yesterday, when the Borah resolution on the calling of an economic conference came up, the galleries were as crowded as in the old days of the League of Nations controversy.

Mrs. Nicholas Longworth was there, of course—she practically never misses a lively debate—but she did not have the members' gallery to herself, as much as usual, for Senators' wives turned out in considerable numbers.

Between the events of yesterday and the scenes of 1919 a startling difference existed. Senator William F. Borah being arrayed against Lodge and Lenroot, Watson and Reid, old buddies of the "battalion of death," with whom he had once fought against American participation in foreign affairs.

The debate featured several passages at arms; for example, the one between Senator Lenroot and Senator Borah. "The conversion of Saul of Tarsus could not have been more remarkable than has been the conversion of the Senator from Idaho," said Senator Lenroot of Wisconsin, referring to Mr. Borah's alleged change of heart on "American isolation."

Then from a far corner of the Republican side, where Senator Carter Glass of Virginia had found a seat, came the comment of the Virginian: "Not only saved his own life, but saved the life of the world!"

Then Senator John Sharp Williams paid his respects to Senator Lodge thus: "I am opposed to any Lodge reservations on this thing," said the veteran from Mississippi. "God knows we have had enough of Lodge reservations. A Lodge reservation can destroy any proposition ever presented."

The new Italian ambassador, Prince Gelasio Caciatti, has leased an apartment at 1785 Massachusetts avenue and will take possession about January 1.

City Club Entertains For Wives and Children.

The City Club entertained yesterday afternoon for several hundred of the wives and children of its members at an afternoon reception and tea, followed by a children's concert and dance.

Wives of the members of the board of governors, headed by Mrs. Henry E. Stringer, wife of the president, received in the club lounge, where the tea table was laid. It was presided over by wives of the members of the house and entertainment committees. The big lounge was beautifully decorated with an enormous Christmas tree, surrounded with toys, and other Christmas greens and colors.

Following the reception, the party adjourned to the ballroom where twenty children, supplemented by the club's orchestra, presented "The Sleighride," a musical number in which the children played accompaniments on toy drums, whistles, popguns and bird calls. The number was so popular that it was repeated half an hour later. The children then danced for an hour.

The club's reservations for the New Year Eve Bohemian night party have all been taken, and close to 500 members and their families will participate in the New Year supper dance and revel.
