FRIDAY MORNING, JUNE 30.

Local News will be found on the Fourth Page.

The following rates of subscription take effect from and after the 1st day of July, have been agreed upon by the Publishers of the Wheeling papers: DAILY, by mail, one year, $7.00...

Yesterday morning a serious accident occurred to our boiler, by which we were thrown out of joint with our paper. It was delayed much beyond time, but after to-day we apprehend no further trouble.

ALL those having bills against the Post Office are requested to present them, receipted in duplicate, to-day.

In the interview between the President and the South Carolina delegation, very interesting and important remarks were made both by Mr. Johnson and by the gentlemen who spoke for the delegation. The President recurred again to the idea, which underlies his proclamations appointing Provisional Governors, namely, that the States must start in the work of restoration just at the point where they were when they went into the rebellion. He wishes the loyal people to take up the work there, and carry it on.

There can be but little doubt that the destruction of Columbia was the work of our army. I have taken considerable pains to get at the truth of the matter, and is the universal testimony of the citizens, as well as the negroes, that Sherman's troops went from house to house with burning torches setting fire to them, and in many instances, burning them while occupied by the families. On Main street, the principal business street in the city, not a single building was left standing. These were mostly of brick, while most of the private residence were built of wood.

Among the buildings saved are the South Carolina Seminary, the Wesleyan Seminary, Churches, Insane Asylum, the elegant residence of General Wade Hampton, together with quite a number of private residences on the outskirts of town.

from the highest to the lowest, are today in the most abject state of poverty. They have neither provisions nor the wherewith to obtain them. People who occupy elegant mansions, and who, a few weeks since, were worth their thousands, are now penniless, and who do not care as much for the poor white man as for the negro. Our own impression is that what are called the "poor whites" of the south, will be more hostile than the former slaveholders to negro suffrage.

The President very plainly told the delegates that their State must amend their constitution, striking out the provisions which sanction slavery, and must adopt the constitutional amendment, abolishing slavery everywhere. The reply of Judge Frost was also frank. As we read it, we cannot help stopping again and again to ask ourselves if it can be the spokesman of a South Carolina delegation that we are hearing. The State will accept these conditions, he says, in order that law and order may be restored.

Three notions or delusions of the South Carolinians, he confesses, have been swept away by the war; first, the belief that slavery is an element of political strength, and moral power is dispelled; second, the doctrine of State sovereignty has vanished; third, the idea that cotton is king is exploded. He says that the State is to come back without these old and favorite beliefs, and with a new system of labor. He even promises that the State will cooperate with the general government in elevating the negro as much as possible, and declares that freedom to the slaves is freedom to the master, provided a motive for industry can be supplied. Wages and good treatment will supply that motive. But what language and what sentiments to be emanating from South Carolina! It remains to be seen how true the inhabitants of that State will be to these doctrines of Judge Frost, when they are allowed a little liberty of action.

THE PARDONING PROCESS. The Attorney General has issued a circular to the provisional governors of the southern States, calling their attention to some points in relation to the exercise of the pardoning power under the authority delegated to them by the President. The object is to guard against an injudicious clemency. He states that the chief points for them to come under are: Whether the petitioner is likely to become a peaceable citizen in future; whether any proceedings have been instituted against his property under the Confiscation Act; and also whether any property belonging to him is now in possession of the United States. The President desires this information for the following objects, as stated in Attorney General Speed's letter:

First, to do away as far as may be possible with any risk of granting pardons to disloyal or otherwise improper persons, and especially to such persons as from previous conduct and character, are not to be trusted with the control of that class, which has been supplied by the rebellion and war from slavery to freedom, and to which the government looks in the not far distant future for support. Second—The president desires to strengthen your hands in the reorganization of society in your State by every means constitutionally belonging to him.

AFTER the evacuation of Petersburg, Fryor settled at his home near that city, and soon began the publication of the Daily News. After three different warnings from the Government authorities, this journal has now been suppressed for its disloyal sentiments, and Roger is thrown upon his own again.

FROM SOUTH CAROLINA.

The very course taken by Sherman in his march through the country did more towards ending the war than a dozen victories. The remedy was severe but effective. It was followed by the boldness of Houghton that the oath of allegiance is being very generally taken by the inhabitants, and that there is a very general desire to get the State government in working order as soon as possible, and to get down to work. The inhabitants with whom I have talked appreciate the fact that their only course now is to work. They want to know what terms they are to be received—whether they have any rights, either in property or in the affairs of State—and then they are ready to begin work.

Very little trouble has occurred in the State from returned soldiers. In the upper country, as they call it, raids were made upon property belonging to the rebel government, which was appropriated by the soldiers. This was done in some instances, but the difficulty was, that the soldiers were not organized, and they could not otherwise protect themselves. It will take a long time for the negroes to learn what freedom is, and they will have to be worked harder than ever to get them to work for themselves and families. Their idea of freedom is that they can live as they have been accustomed to see white people do, without work, and that the government will feed them. They are not to amuse themselves by putting this idea into their heads, which will lead to incalculable injury to themselves and the country.

THE SOUTHERN RAILROADS. Unless the government or Northern capitalists step in and assist the South in rebuilding their railroads it will be many months before they are in running order. They have neither the money nor the skill to do it. Small parties are at work on the South Carolina road, endeavoring to straighten the rails which were heated and bent by the troops, but their progress is very slow, and it is not likely that any can be made serviceable. Many bridges are destroyed, which will require both mechanical skill and money to rebuild, neither of which they have. The sooner these roads are repaired, the sooner will be for the country. As it is, all the resources of the country are as effectually blockaded as they were during the war.

Speculators in cotton have commenced to arrive, and are going about the country buying wherever they can find any. Three Western men arrived here yesterday, via Charleston. They have succeeded in buying several hundred bales in small lots, at from ten to fourteen cents in gold. They appear to be a general feeling in South Carolina, to get a share of the money. They were so severely bitten by the rebel government that it has shaken their confidence in all paper currency.

NEGRO SUFFRAGE. There is one subject upon which it is impossible to talk with Southern people without at once raising a breeze, and upon which it is impossible to reason with them. It is the policy of granting negro suffrage. On this point they are united. No amount of reasoning can convince them of the right or justice of the plan, and nothing but the force of arms will ever induce them to submit to it. They say that they give up their slaves willingly; but when you come to put him upon a social or political equality with us, it is more than we can stand. In this they may be right, but they do not want to give up the privilege upon certain conditions, such as for instance being able to read and write, and the owner of a thousand dollars in government securities. I doubt if the government will accept such membership qualifications, as signs of their being members of the church.

As far as South Carolina is concerned, I think it would be perfectly safe to double the number of negroes that white people are willing to take, and to read and write, at the same time, and to restrict the whites to the same test; for in the first year there will be more negroes who possess the accomplishment of reading and writing than there are white people who possess the same. The negroes certainly are very desirous of light, and the first use of their freedom, as far as my experience goes, is to learn to read. Their opportunities, as yet, are not very numerous, but they do all in their power to discourage it, but it is frequently the case that I see negroes, who by some means have learned to read, seated by the roadside teaching the children of their brethren and sisters the alphabet. Schools are undoubtedly established as soon as the wants of this class are known at the North.

THE PRISON LOCATED AT COLUMBIA, where many of our officers were confined, was the building erected as a hospital for the Insane Asylum. Both the accounts of the treatment of prisoners were far superior here to many parts of the South. I was a good deal amused at the conversation of an intelligent colored driver, in my way to the place of interest to us as he drove us about the city. Upon passing the Insane Asylum we asked him if there were many colored there at present. He said, "No, there are not many, but they are all going to remain. The southern planters generally say that with the exception of the loss in property in negroes, and the loss of the state of affairs, which the freeing of so large a body of men naturally produce, they will be better off with free labor than slave. They contend that the only source of profit in the negro trade, consisted in the increase, and that if we take away the property in them, they will then have many more in the State than they can possibly use to advantage.

THE SOIL OF SOUTH CAROLINA is proverbially the poorest in the south. No effort has been made to cooperate, but after it has become exhausted, the continuous raising of cotton, it has been allowed to go to waste and new ground cleared up. It has been the policy of the planters to clear as much land as possible, raise all the cotton and negroes he could in a few years, and after the soil became exhausted, to Louisiana or some other Western State, and buy a new and larger plantation. This year there has been no cotton of consequence planted in the State. Large quantities of corn and some wheat and oats comprise the crop.

There is considerable cotton scattered over the State from last year's crop in small lots, but the great bulk of it has been destroyed in consequence of the fire on take of the railroad, stoppage of mails and facilities for the great portion of the citizens are in the most lamentable state of ignorance regarding the rest of the country. Many hostilities is merely a cessation of the war will be resumed again in a few days, while others admit that the war of the slaves is to be gradual, covering a period of thirty years, and anxious to know who is to be their Governor. When asked who they would prefer, they generally hit upon Mr. Boyce as the most favorable man for all parties. Ex-Governor Wade has been almost too conservative during the war to give satisfaction to the leadership. One thing above all others is apparent. They are regarded most completely and thoroughly.

At Monmouth, Ill., Thursday morning, 28th inst., at the residence of the bride's father, Rev. B. C. Matthews, D. D., Thos. Johnson, Jr., of C. Matthews, and Miss Mollie E. Fialas F., eldest daughter of Mr. George Babcock, were united in holy matrimony. The happy pair have the wishes of many friends for a long and happy life.
