MONDAY MORNING, JUNE 18.

THE telegraph announces this morning a sad but not unexpected event, the death of Gen. Lewis Cass, at his home in Detroit, Michigan. Like his illustrious cotemporary, General Scott, who as a pest hous ous cotemporary, General Scott, who preceded him but a few days. General Cass was in many respects a remarkable man, and like him belonged to a past generation. His military title was acquired as Scott's first fame was in the war of 1812. He was known in every hamlet in the land as the unsuccessful opponent of General Taylor for the Presidency in 1845.

THE amendment to the State Constidemocrats driven from the State," it our conservative friends are going to get votes enough to carry the State this fall agains the Union ticket, as they now declare they are going to do. Some one please enlighten us but a telegram from Alexandria received the same evening in reply to an inquiry contradicted the report. It is not impossible, judging from the malignancy of Mr. U.'s enemies, that such a report may some day be true.

A STARTLING rumor prevailed in Washington last Friday, in the public nts and in both Hou Congress, that Judge Underwood had ssinated in Alexandria, Va., but a telegram from Alexandria receiv-

The New York Evening Post has the following amusing arraignment of renegade Whigs as the Jonahs who have swamped the Democratic party. Every new platform which the Democratic party has built since 1848 has been erected simultaneously with a new infusion of the Whig element in it. Such men as William B. Reed, of Philadelphia; George Dunt and Robert C. Winther, of Boston; Washington Hunther Brookses and Ketchums, of New York: Senator Wright, of New Jersey; Pleasants and Stuart, of Virginia; Toombs, of Georgia; Wickliffe and Davis, of Kentucky, who were first known as leaders of the Whig party, having helped to ruin that organization, sought refuge among the Democratic; and being suffered to become leaders there, brought upon their new associates also the ruin which they carry with them. These persons began their career in politics as "national republicans," they became whigs in 1834; democratic whigs in 1859; native Amelicans in 1841; national whigs in 1859; know nothings in 1859; and then constitutional Union men became whigs in 1834; democratic whigs in 1839; native Amelicans in 1841; national whigs in 1850; know nothings in 1854; and then constitutional Union men and democratis in 1860. They begin now to call themselved "National Johnson men." They entered the whig party when it was powerful, and their counsels and policy destroyed it; they went over to the democratic party when that was powerful and triumphant, imposed themselves upon it as leaders, and their counsel and policy have now ruined that party. Their experience has doubtless taught them that a name is nothing; but their political history should warn all parties against receiving them, for they are only Jonabs, whose presence brings destruction.

It is a singular fact, that may be men-

It is a singular fact, that may be mening, that nearly all the prominent managers of the democratic party in this State are old renegade Whigs. We might mention names, but we have no "intentions" (as Miss Miggs would say,) of being personal. Our readers know who they are. Perhaps they are very appropriately called "Jonahs," but we doubt they will be as lucky as Jonah, when he embarked in oil. They will never set foot on dry

Wm. Prescett Smith.

The Board of Directors of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad, at their meeting the other day, in accepting the resignation of W. Prescett Smith, Esq., the long and justly popular Master of Transportation of that road, adopted resolutions acknowledging the ability, fidelity and integrity with which, during many years and in trying periods, be uniformly discharged the duties of his office. This is a well merited tribute to a most faithful and efficient officer. To the sagncity, energy, and untiring industry of Mr. Smith the Baltimore of the gas.

To the sagacity, energy, and untiring in gladustry of Mr. Smith the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad is indebted for much of its success. During his administration of the duties of Master of Transportation he has earned a reputation unequalled as a practical and successful railroad manager. Mr. Smith has accepted the appointment as Internal Revenue Collector of the Third District of Maryland, and will carry with him the case of the State against Horbert.

—New Yorks have lately been surprised by the appearance on Broadway of a vehicle propelled by steam. The carriage was about eight or nine feet in length, with iron wheels, and had two seats lengthwise, with comfortable cushions and backs. It was occupied by half a dozen men, and was operated by one man, who acted both as engineer and guide. There was very little noise, and nothing to denote it specially except the absence of horses, and a small smoke-stack, about a foot high, at the forward end. This stack resembled an ordinary stove pipe. The carriage was turned into Grand street with apparent case, and that street being less obstructed by vehicles than Broadway, it was driven at the average speed of a horse car.

Though General Grant may unintentionally have falled to do him full justice in the report of that particular fight, we yet suspect that other causes brought about the non-confirmation of General Averill's "brevet."
