

The Intelligencer.

By Telegraph

ASSOCIATED PRESS REPORT.

TO THE DAILY INTELLIGENCER

Night Dispatches.

CHARLESTON.

Legislature Still Unable to Choose a Senator.

Three Ballots in Caucus Develop No New Strength.

A Proposition From H. S. Walker.

He is Jubilant and Confident.

The Coming Man Not in Sight.

(Special Dispatch to the Intelligencer.)

CHARLESTON, January 28. The joint ballot to-day stood: Walker, 20; Cannon, 27; Price, 10; Brannon, 11; Caperton, 3; Loomis, 6; Faulkner, 2; scattering, 6.

In caucus to-night, the first ballot stood: Walker, 24; Cannon, 19; Price, 13; Brannon, 11; Caperton, 3; scattering, 1.

Second ballot—Walker, 24; Cannon, 18; Price, 11; Brannon, 12; Caperton, 3; scattering, 1.

Third ballot—Walker, 24; Cannon, 20; Price, 12; Brannon, 2; Caperton, 3; scattering, 1.

Walker proposed to Price and Cannon that if they would withdraw to-night, and he was not nominated, he would withdraw from the contest. Walker is more jubilant than ever. He feels sure of the nomination. MIDDY.

CONGRESS.

SENATE.

WASHINGTON, January 28. Mr. Morrill, of Maine, from the Committee on Appropriations, reported favorably on the bill to pay the interest due February 1st on the 365 bonds of the District of Columbia. Passed.

Mr. Boyd submitted a resolution instructing the Judiciary Committee to inquire into the expediency of repealing the act of July 11, 1872, granting a subsidy to the Pacific Mail Steamship Company.

Mr. Sprague objected to the present consideration of the bill, and it was referred to the Judiciary Committee.

After the presentation of a large number of petitions against the restoration of the duty on tea and coffee and for the repeal of the act of 1872 relieving certain foreign products of ten per cent duty, the business on the calendar was proceeded with.

House bill granting the right of way and depot grounds to the Oregon Central Pacific Railroad Company through the lands of the Great Britain and North Western Colonies to the Columbia river via Portland, Oregon, was amended and passed.

The following bills were passed: Senate bill providing for the appointment of a commission to ascertain the right of subject of Great Britain and territory subject to the award of the Emperor of Germany under treaties of 1846 and 1871 between the United States and Great Britain.

Senate bill amending an act and supplementing an act to amend an act approved March 14, 1872, entitled "An act to set apart a certain tract of land lying near the headwaters of Yellowstone river as a public park."

At the expiration of the morning hour the Louisiana discussion was resumed. Mr. Conkling took the floor. The galleries were densely crowded, and many persons having the privilege of the floor occupied seats thereon.

SPEECH OF SENATOR CONKLING. Mr. Conkling began by saying that the drama which entertains the Senate must have its run, and that the time had now come when silence only serves to prolong the wrangle. The Presidential contest for 1876 has been opened in the Senate. The way in which my amendment was received by the Senator from Ohio (Thurman) told us instantly that we were to be charged all along the line. Every administration supporter was ready to vote for the resolution, if made conciliatory. The course of the President was prejudged. The opposition had almost the entire newspaper support of the land with them. After it had become notorious that our action would be anticipated if longer delayed, the resolution was passed. The plain, manly message came, and now lies upon our table. Then the discussion should have ended, but it did not. The Senator from Missouri came forward with his resolution, and so the machine for grinding out the resolution was used. Senator Thurman occupied the attention of the Senate for four hours yesterday, and others are doubtless waiting to take his place. He is the recognized leader of the Democratic party, but he did not tell us what to do with the great Louisiana question. He was the Senator from Ohio (Thurman) to whom the nation looked more than any other man to originate the policy of his party. The honorable Senator (Thurman) when commenting upon the Southern outrages, said, "I object, that if such was the condition of society in the South, it was time that the party which had been in power through the war and since the war should give way and let another party come in. There was a distinct question, which was that had been the goal of Democrats since the beginning—make reconstruction a failure; make it a miscarriage; keep up an agitation; disturb, ferment and revolutionize; and the time will come when the country would be ready to make a change. We will accept anything for a change. The same policy of the Democracy seems to oppose a measure which originates with the Republicans. The honorable gentleman from Ohio in his argument went back to the election of 1872 and made that period a black ground for the friends of three weeks ago. Who made the election of 1872 a fraud? It was War, north, the leader of the opposition in Louisiana; the champion of Democracy, who was to carry the State for Greeley and to make him President. There was a heavy increase in all departments compared with 1873, and compared with 1874, the most prosperous year before or since the war, exhibits an increase of $20,617,727. The population, which by the census of 1870 was 40,220, and in 1880 was 22,021, is now, according to the census in 1874, under the supervision of the School Commissioners, 69,965, an increase since 1860 of 44,344.

WASHINGTON.

RELOGO GOVERNMENT REELECTION. WASHINGTON, January 28.—The Senate Committee on Privileges and Elections have decided that Kellogg's administration should be recognized as the legal government of Louisiana. The vote stood: Ayes—Morton, Logan, Anthony and Mitchell. Nays—Alcorn, Hamilton and Sawyer. Absent—Carpenter and Wadsworth. Mr. Alcorn said in the committee that if this resolution was adopted he should vote in the Senate to admit Pinchback.

CUSTOM RECEIPTS. Custom receipts at the following ports in the week ending January 22, were as follows: Boston, $22,094; New York, $2,414,112; Baltimore, $28,499,469; Philadelphia, $68,948; New Orleans for the week ending January 10, $47,100.

Weather Report.

OFFICE OF THE CHIEF SIGNAL OFFICER, WASHINGTON, D. C., Jan. 28.—5:30 P. M.

In the West Gulf States, Tennessee, Ohio Valley and Lower Lake Region rising barometer, falling temperature, northeast to northwest winds, and clear or partly cloudy weather.

In the Upper Lake Region, Upper Mississippi, Lower Missouri Valley and the Northwest clear or partly cloudy weather and winds mostly from the northwest, with higher barometer and lower temperature in the two first districts and slight changes in the same in the two last.

In the Middle and Eastern States winds shifting to the northwest and northeast, with rising barometer, falling temperature and partly cloudy weather in the former, but followed by rising barometer, clearing weather and falling temperature in the latter.

The Ohio river will commence rising at Pittsburgh, The Cumberland at Nashville and Mississippi at Cairo and Memphis will continue rising.

Trade and Commerce.

MEMPHIS, January 28.—The annual statement of the trade, commerce and manufactures of Memphis for 1874, advanced by the Secretary of the Chamber of Commerce, shows a very satisfactory state of business generally. The total of merchandise imports for the year was $73,016,867, and of the product of manufactures $30,300,000; total gross value $103,316,867, of which the cotton sales amounted to $24,000,000. There is a heavy increase in all departments compared with 1873, and compared with 1874, the most prosperous year before or since the war, exhibits an increase of $20,617,727. The population, which by the census of 1870 was 40,220, and in 1880 was 22,021, is now, according to the census in 1874, under the supervision of the School Commissioners, 69,965, an increase since 1860 of 44,344.

—Andrew Garaburi, for many years a prominent banker of Cincinnati, died Thursday morning, aged 65 years.

received in regard to them was simultaneous with the information given in all directions to the newspapers of the following day were his first informers. If there were those in Washington who knew that a revolution was to be attempted on the 4th of January the President of the United States was not one of them. Mr. Conkling next referred to the reasons which induced the President to send Gen. Sheridan to New Orleans, and said: Before this letter of the President directed Gen. Sheridan to go to the South the President had been compelled to listen to tales of suffering to which no man could be deaf. They concerned the lives, homes and property of those who had never been false to their country, and under that flag were hunted as if they were wild beasts. These entreaties summoned the Chief Magistrate to his feet. One of these entreaties had reached him but three days before. It came from one who for twenty years had been a resident of Shreveport, a judicial officer not appointed by the President but appointed by the courts. He said that he was stationed in Louisiana, and their presence there was lawful, because the slender remnant of our army must be stationed somewhere. It must be stationed in some State, and no matter where found, its right to be there was unquestionable, and its withdrawal from New Orleans would have been possible only with a Chief Magistrate in open convivance with murderers and traitors. What would General Washington have said about ordering troops away from New Orleans, where the stars and stripes and every with violence, and stationing them somewhere where all was peace. This question was presented to Washington when four counties in the western part of Pennsylvania resisted the whisky tax. An Inspector had been ordered out and put on foot fifteen thousand men and went to command them and armed men in great numbers took the soil of Pennsylvania to preserve peace and prevent any further outbreak of the kind. Mr. Conkling then referred to the seizure of arms in New Orleans in September last by the whites, and said they never had been given up, although the President, by his proclamation, called upon the insurgents to lay down their arms, and repeat the same to their homes. Yet more than three months had elapsed, and they stood defying the Federal Government. The arms not returned consisted of two mountain howitzers, 524 Springfield breech-loading rifles, 203 Winchester rifles, 603 Remington Spencer carbines, and 1,704 bayonets. These arms were carried by these men to the mountains, and they were in rebellion against the proclamation commanding them to lay them down. The Chief Magistrate required no more of them than that they should remain in Louisiana after the 14th of September, when they had been summoned there to arrest a business so bloody. Forty-eight hours after the message of the President was sent to the Senate the Secretary of War, Mr. Schuchert, declaring he intended to speak with candor and impartiality, told the country he was then in the possession of all the information necessary to form his judgment, and proceeded to arraign the President for the act of all these Louisiana rebels on the 14th of January. Mr. Conkling here read the remarks of Schuchert in reference to the President, and said that was the language of the Senator from Missouri, who smiling as it were, upon the sides of human ambition, and the motives and acts of one charged with the administration of the laws. The meanest culprit was entitled to be heard in his own defense, and there was an assumption of his innocence until he was proven guilty; but in an American Senate there is a hearing on an assumption. Such is the passion, such is the hot breath of party feeling. General Sheridan was equally undeserving for praise or blame for 1875 has been named in the Senate. Mr. Conkling here read the remarks of Schuchert in reference to the President, and said that was the language of the Senator from Missouri, who smiling as it were, upon the sides of human ambition, and the motives and acts of one charged with the administration of the laws. The meanest culprit was entitled to be heard in his own defense, and there was an assumption of his innocence until he was proven guilty; but in an American Senate there is a hearing on an assumption. Such is the passion, such is the hot breath of party feeling. General Sheridan was equally undeserving for praise or blame for 1875 has been named in the Senate. Mr. Conkling here read the remarks of Schuchert in reference to the President, and said that was the language of the Senator from Missouri, who smiling as it were, upon the sides of human ambition, and the motives and acts of one charged with the administration of the laws. The meanest culprit was entitled to be heard in his own defense, and there was an assumption of his innocence until he was proven guilty; but in an American Senate there is a hearing on an assumption. Such is the passion, such is the hot breath of party feeling. General Sheridan was equally undeserving for praise or blame for 1875 has been named in the Senate. Mr. Conkling here read the remarks of Schuchert in reference to the President, and said that was the language of the Senator from Missouri, who smiling as it were, upon the sides of human ambition, and the motives and acts of one charged with the administration of the laws. The meanest culprit was entitled to be heard in his own defense, and there was an assumption of his innocence until he was proven guilty; but in an American Senate there is a hearing on an assumption. Such is the passion, such is the hot breath of party feeling. General Sheridan was equally undeserving for praise or blame for 1875 has been named in the Senate. Mr. Conkling here read the remarks of Schuchert in reference to the President, and said that was the language of the Senator from Missouri, who smiling as it were, upon the sides of human ambition, and the motives and acts of one charged with the administration of the laws. The meanest culprit was entitled to be heard in his own defense, and there was an assumption of his innocence until he was proven guilty; but in an American Senate there is a hearing on an assumption. Such is the passion, such is the hot breath of party feeling. General Sheridan was equally undeserving for praise or blame for 1875 has been named in the Senate. Mr. Conkling here read the remarks of Schuchert in reference to the President, and said that was the language of the Senator from Missouri, who smiling as it were, upon the sides of human ambition, and the motives and acts of one charged with the administration of the laws. The meanest culprit was entitled to be heard in his own defense, and there was an assumption of his innocence until he was proven guilty; but in an American Senate there is a hearing on an assumption. Such is the passion, such is the hot breath of party feeling. General Sheridan was equally undeserving for praise or blame for 1875 has been named in the Senate. Mr. Conkling here read the remarks of Schuchert in reference to the President, and said that was the language of the Senator from Missouri, who smiling as it were, upon the sides of human ambition, and the motives and acts of one charged with the administration of the laws. The meanest culprit was entitled to be heard in his own defense, and there was an assumption of his innocence until he was proven guilty; but in an American Senate there is a hearing on an assumption. Such is the passion, such is the hot breath of party feeling. General Sheridan was equally undeserving for praise or blame for 1875 has been named in the Senate. Mr. Conkling here read the remarks of Schuchert in reference to the President, and said that was the language of the Senator from Missouri, who smiling as it were, upon the sides of human ambition, and the motives and acts of one charged with the administration of the laws. The meanest culprit was entitled to be heard in his own defense, and there was an assumption of his innocence until he was proven guilty; but in an American Senate there is a hearing on an assumption. Such is the passion, such is the hot breath of party feeling. General Sheridan was equally undeserving for praise or blame for 1875 has been named in the Senate. Mr. Conkling here read the remarks of Schuchert in reference to the President, and said that was the language of the Senator from Missouri, who smiling as it were, upon the sides of human ambition, and the motives and acts of one charged with the administration of the laws. The meanest culprit was entitled to be heard in his own defense, and there was an assumption of his innocence until he was proven guilty; but in an American Senate there is a hearing on an assumption. Such is the passion, such is the hot breath of party feeling. General Sheridan was equally undeserving for praise or blame for 1875 has been named in the Senate. Mr. Conkling here read the remarks of Schuchert in reference to the President, and said that was the language of the Senator from Missouri, who smiling as it were, upon the sides of human ambition, and the motives and acts of one charged with the administration of the laws. The meanest culprit was entitled to be heard in his own defense, and there was an assumption of his innocence until he was proven guilty; but in an American Senate there is a hearing on an assumption. Such is the passion, such is the hot breath of party feeling. General Sheridan was equally undeserving for praise or blame for 1875 has been named in the Senate. Mr. Conkling here read the remarks of Schuchert in reference to the President, and said that was the language of the Senator from Missouri, who smiling as it were, upon the sides of human ambition, and the motives and acts of one charged with the administration of the laws. The meanest culprit was entitled to be heard in his own defense, and there was an assumption of his innocence until he was proven guilty; but in an American Senate there is a hearing on an assumption. Such is the passion, such is the hot breath of party feeling. General Sheridan was equally undeserving for praise or blame for 1875 has been named in the Senate. Mr. Conkling here read the remarks of Schuchert in reference to the President, and said that was the language of the Senator from Missouri, who smiling as it were, upon the sides of human ambition, and the motives and acts of one charged with the administration of the laws. The meanest culprit was entitled to be heard in his own defense, and there was an assumption of his innocence until he was proven guilty; but in an American Senate there is a hearing on an assumption. Such is the passion, such is the hot breath of party feeling. General Sheridan was equally undeserving for praise or blame for 1875 has been named in the Senate. Mr. Conkling here read the remarks of Schuchert in reference to the President, and said that was the language of the Senator from Missouri, who smiling as it were, upon the sides of human ambition, and the motives and acts of one charged with the administration of the laws. The meanest culprit was entitled to be heard in his own defense, and there was an assumption of his innocence until he was proven guilty; but in an American Senate there is a hearing on an assumption. Such is the passion, such is the hot breath of party feeling. General Sheridan was equally undeserving for praise or blame for 1875 has been named in the Senate. Mr. Conkling here read the remarks of Schuchert in reference to the President, and said that was the language of the Senator from Missouri, who smiling as it were, upon the sides of human ambition, and the motives and acts of one charged with the administration of the laws. The meanest culprit was entitled to be heard in his own defense, and there was an assumption of his innocence until he was proven guilty; but in an American Senate there is a hearing on an assumption. Such is the passion, such is the hot breath of party feeling. General Sheridan was equally undeserving for praise or blame for 1875 has been named in the Senate. Mr. Conkling here read the remarks of Schuchert in reference to the President, and said that was the language of the Senator from Missouri, who smiling as it were, upon the sides of human ambition, and the motives and acts of one charged with the administration of the laws. The meanest culprit was entitled to be heard in his own defense, and there was an assumption of his innocence until he was proven guilty; but in an American Senate there is a hearing on an assumption. Such is the passion, such is the hot breath of party feeling. General Sheridan was equally undeserving for praise or blame for 1875 has been named in the Senate. Mr. Conkling here read the remarks of Schuchert in reference to the President, and said that was the language of the Senator from Missouri, who smiling as it were, upon the sides of human ambition, and the motives and acts of one charged with the administration of the laws. The meanest culprit was entitled to be heard in his own defense, and there was an assumption of his innocence until he was proven guilty; but in an American Senate there is a hearing on an assumption. Such is the passion, such is the hot breath of party feeling. General Sheridan was equally undeserving for praise or blame for 1875 has been named in the Senate. Mr. Conkling here read the remarks of Schuchert in reference to the President, and said that was the language of the Senator from Missouri, who smiling as it were, upon the sides of human ambition, and the motives and acts of one charged with the administration of the laws. The meanest culprit was entitled to be heard in his own defense, and there was an assumption of his innocence until he was proven guilty; but in an American Senate there is a hearing on an assumption. Such is the passion, such is the hot breath of party feeling. General Sheridan was equally undeserving for praise or blame for 1875 has been named in the Senate. Mr. Conkling here read the remarks of Schuchert in reference to the President, and said that was the language of the Senator from Missouri, who smiling as it were, upon the sides of human ambition, and the motives and acts of one charged with the administration of the laws. The meanest culprit was entitled to be heard in his own defense, and there was an assumption of his innocence until he was proven guilty; but in an American Senate there is a hearing on an assumption. Such is the passion, such is the hot breath of party feeling. General Sheridan was equally undeserving for praise or blame for 1875 has been named in the Senate. Mr. Conkling here read the remarks of Schuchert in reference to the President, and said that was the language of the Senator from Missouri, who smiling as it were, upon the sides of human ambition, and the motives and acts of one charged with the administration of the laws. The meanest culprit was entitled to be heard in his own defense, and there was an assumption of his innocence until he was proven guilty; but in an American Senate there is a hearing on an assumption. Such is the passion, such is the hot breath of party feeling. General Sheridan was equally undeserving for praise or blame for 1875 has been named in the Senate. Mr. Conkling here read the remarks of Schuchert in reference to the President, and said that was the language of the Senator from Missouri, who smiling as it were, upon the sides of human ambition, and the motives and acts of one charged with the administration of the laws. The meanest culprit was entitled to be heard in his own defense, and there was an assumption of his innocence until he was proven guilty; but in an American Senate there is a hearing on an assumption. Such is the passion, such is the hot breath of party feeling. General Sheridan was equally undeserving for praise or blame for 1875 has been named in the Senate. Mr. Conkling here read the remarks of Schuchert in reference to the President, and said that was the language of the Senator from Missouri, who smiling as it were, upon the sides of human ambition, and the motives and acts of one charged with the administration of the laws. The meanest culprit was entitled to be heard in his own defense, and there was an assumption of his innocence until he was proven guilty; but in an American Senate there is a hearing on an assumption. Such is the passion, such is the hot breath of party feeling. General Sheridan was equally undeserving for praise or blame for 1875 has been named in the Senate. Mr. Conkling here read the remarks of Schuchert in reference to the President, and said that was the language of the Senator from Missouri, who smiling as it were, upon the sides of human ambition, and the motives and acts of one charged with the administration of the laws. The meanest culprit was entitled to be heard in his own defense, and there was an assumption of his innocence until he was proven guilty; but in an American Senate there is a hearing on an assumption. Such is the passion, such is the hot breath of party feeling. General Sheridan was equally undeserving for praise or blame for 1875 has been named in the Senate. Mr. Conkling here read the remarks of Schuchert in reference to the President, and said that was the language of the Senator from Missouri, who smiling as it were, upon the sides of human ambition, and the motives and acts of one charged with the administration of the laws. The meanest culprit was entitled to be heard in his own defense, and there was an assumption of his innocence until he was proven guilty; but in an American Senate there is a hearing on an assumption. Such is the passion, such is the hot breath of party feeling. General Sheridan was equally undeserving for praise or blame for 1875 has been named in the Senate. Mr. Conkling here read the remarks of Schuchert in reference to the President, and said that was the language of the Senator from Missouri, who smiling as it were, upon the sides of human ambition, and the motives and acts of one charged with the administration of the laws. The meanest culprit was entitled to be heard in his own defense, and there was an assumption of his innocence until he was proven guilty; but in an American Senate there is a hearing on an assumption. Such is the passion, such is the hot breath of party feeling. General Sheridan was equally undeserving for praise or blame for 1875 has been named in the Senate. Mr. Conkling here read the remarks of Schuchert in reference to the President, and said that was the language of the Senator from Missouri, who smiling as it were, upon the sides of human ambition, and the motives and acts of one charged with the administration of the laws. The meanest culprit was entitled to be heard in his own defense, and there was an assumption of his innocence until he was proven guilty; but in an American Senate there is a hearing on an assumption. Such is the passion, such is the hot breath of party feeling. General Sheridan was equally undeserving for praise or blame for 1875 has been named in the Senate. Mr. Conkling here read the remarks of Schuchert in reference to the President, and said that was the language of the Senator from Missouri, who smiling as it were, upon the sides of human ambition, and the motives and acts of one charged with the administration of the laws. The meanest culprit was entitled to be heard in his own defense, and there was an assumption of his innocence until he was proven guilty; but in an American Senate there is a hearing on an assumption. Such is the passion, such is the hot breath of party feeling. General Sheridan was equally undeserving for praise or blame for 1875 has been named in the Senate. Mr. Conkling here read the remarks of Schuchert in reference to the President, and said that was the language of the Senator from Missouri, who smiling as it were, upon the sides of human ambition, and the motives and acts of one charged with the administration of the laws. The meanest culprit was entitled to be heard in his own defense, and there was an assumption of his innocence until he was proven guilty; but in an American Senate there is a hearing on an assumption. Such is the passion, such is the hot breath of party feeling. General Sheridan was equally undeserving for praise or blame for 1875 has been named in the Senate. Mr. Conkling here read the remarks of Schuchert in reference to the President, and said that was the language of the Senator from Missouri, who smiling as it were, upon the sides of human ambition, and the motives and acts of one charged with the administration of the laws. The meanest culprit was entitled to be heard in his own defense, and there was an assumption of his innocence until he was proven guilty; but in an American Senate there is a hearing on an assumption. Such is the passion, such is the hot breath of party feeling. General Sheridan was equally undeserving for praise or blame for 1875 has been named in the Senate. Mr. Conkling here read the remarks of Schuchert in reference to the President, and said that was the language of the Senator from Missouri, who smiling as it were, upon the sides of human ambition, and the motives and acts of one charged with the administration of the laws. The meanest culprit was entitled to be heard in his own defense, and there was an assumption of his innocence until he was proven guilty; but in an American Senate there is a hearing on an assumption. Such is the passion, such is the hot breath of party feeling. General Sheridan was equally undeserving for praise or blame for 1875 has been named in the Senate. Mr. Conkling here read the remarks of Schuchert in reference to the President, and said that was the language of the Senator from Missouri, who smiling as it were, upon the sides of human ambition, and the motives and acts of one charged with the administration of the laws. The meanest culprit was entitled to be heard in his own defense, and there was an assumption of his innocence until he was proven guilty; but in an American Senate there is a hearing on an assumption. Such is the passion, such is the hot breath of party feeling. General Sheridan was equally undeserving for praise or blame for 1875 has been named in the Senate. Mr. Conkling here read the remarks of Schuchert in reference to the President, and said that was the language of the Senator from Missouri, who smiling as it were, upon the sides of human ambition, and the motives and acts of one charged with the administration of the laws. The meanest culprit was entitled to be heard in his own defense, and there was an assumption of his innocence until he was proven guilty; but in an American Senate there is a hearing on an assumption. Such is the passion, such is the hot breath of party feeling. General Sheridan was equally undeserving for praise or blame for 1875 has been named in the Senate. Mr. Conkling here read the remarks of Schuchert in reference to the President, and said that was the language of the Senator from Missouri, who smiling as it were, upon the sides of human ambition, and the motives and acts of one charged with the administration of the laws. The meanest culprit was entitled to be heard in his own defense, and there was an assumption of his innocence until he was proven guilty; but in an American Senate there is a hearing on an assumption. Such is the passion, such is the hot breath of party feeling. General Sheridan was equally undeserving for praise or blame for 1875 has been named in the Senate. Mr. Conkling here read the remarks of Schuchert in reference to the President, and said that was the language of the Senator from Missouri, who smiling as it were, upon the sides of human ambition, and the motives and acts of one charged with the administration of the laws. The meanest culprit was entitled to be heard in his own defense, and there was an assumption of his innocence until he was proven guilty; but in an American Senate there is a hearing on an assumption. Such is the passion, such is the hot breath of party feeling. General Sheridan was equally undeserving for praise or blame for 1875 has been named in the Senate. Mr. Conkling here read the remarks of Schuchert in reference to the President, and said that was the language of the Senator from Missouri, who smiling as it were, upon the sides of human ambition, and the motives and acts of one charged with the administration of the laws. The meanest culprit was entitled to be heard in his own defense, and there was an assumption of his innocence until he was proven guilty; but in an American Senate there is a hearing on an assumption. Such is the passion, such is the hot breath of party feeling. General Sheridan was equally undeserving for praise or blame for 1875 has been named in the Senate. Mr. Conkling here read the remarks of Schuchert in reference to the President, and said that was the language of the Senator from Missouri, who smiling as it were, upon the sides of human ambition, and the motives and acts of one charged with the administration of the laws. The meanest culprit was entitled to be heard in his own defense, and there was an assumption of his innocence until he was proven guilty; but in an American Senate there is a hearing on an assumption. Such is the passion, such is the hot breath of party feeling. General Sheridan was equally undeserving for praise or blame for 1875 has been named in the Senate. Mr. Conkling here read the remarks of Schuchert in reference to the President, and said that was the language of the Senator from Missouri, who smiling as it were, upon the sides of human ambition, and the motives and acts of one charged with the administration of the laws. The meanest culprit was entitled to be heard in his own defense, and there was an assumption of his innocence until he was proven guilty; but in an American Senate there is a hearing on an assumption. Such is the passion, such is the hot breath of party feeling. General Sheridan was equally undeserving for praise or blame for 1875 has been named in the Senate. Mr. Conkling here read the remarks of Schuchert in reference to the President, and said that was the language of the Senator from Missouri, who smiling as it were, upon the sides of human ambition, and the motives and acts of one charged with the administration of the laws. The meanest culprit was entitled to be heard in his own defense, and there was an assumption of his innocence until he was proven guilty; but in an American Senate there is a hearing on an assumption. Such is the passion, such is the hot breath of party feeling. General Sheridan was equally undeserving for praise or blame for 1875 has been named in the Senate. Mr. Conkling here read the remarks of Schuchert in reference to the President, and said that was the language of the Senator from Missouri, who smiling as it were, upon the sides of human ambition, and the motives and acts of one charged with the administration of the laws. The meanest culprit was entitled to be heard in his own defense, and there was an assumption of his innocence until he was proven guilty; but in an American Senate there is a hearing on an assumption. Such is the passion, such is the hot breath of party feeling. General Sheridan was equally undeserving for praise or blame for 1875 has been named in the Senate. Mr. Conkling here read the remarks of Schuchert in reference to the President, and said that was the language of the Senator from Missouri, who smiling as it were, upon the sides of human ambition, and the motives and acts of one charged with the administration of the laws. The meanest culprit was entitled to be heard in his own defense, and there was an assumption of his innocence until he was proven guilty; but in an American Senate there is a hearing on an assumption. Such is the passion, such is the hot breath of party feeling. General Sheridan was equally undeserving for praise or blame for 1875 has been named in the Senate. Mr. Conkling here read the remarks of Schuchert in reference to the President, and said that was the language of the Senator from Missouri, who smiling as it were, upon the sides of human ambition, and the motives and acts of one charged with the administration of the laws. The meanest culprit was entitled to be heard in his own defense, and there was an assumption of his innocence until he was proven guilty; but in an American Senate there is a hearing on an assumption. Such is the passion, such is the hot breath of party feeling. General Sheridan was equally undeserving for praise or blame for 1875 has been named in the Senate. Mr. Conkling here read the remarks of Schuchert in reference to the President, and said that was the language of the Senator from Missouri, who smiling as it were, upon the sides of human ambition, and the motives and acts of one charged with the administration of the laws. The meanest culprit was entitled to be heard in his own defense, and there was an assumption of his innocence until he was proven guilty; but in an American Senate there is a hearing on an assumption. Such is the passion, such is the hot breath of party feeling. General Sheridan was equally undeserving for praise or blame for 1875 has been named in the Senate. Mr. Conkling here read the remarks of Schuchert in reference to the President, and said that was the language of the Senator from Missouri, who smiling as it were, upon the sides of human ambition, and the motives and acts of one charged with the administration of the laws. The meanest culprit was entitled to be heard in his own defense, and there was an assumption of his innocence until he was proven guilty; but in an American Senate there is a hearing on an assumption. Such is the passion, such is the hot breath of party feeling. General Sheridan was equally undeserving for praise or blame for 1875 has been named in the Senate. Mr. Conkling here read the remarks of Schuchert in reference to the President, and said that was the language of the Senator from Missouri, who smiling as it were, upon the sides of human ambition, and the motives and acts of one charged with the administration of the laws. The meanest culprit was entitled to be heard in his own defense, and there was an assumption of his innocence until he was proven guilty; but in an American Senate there is a hearing on an assumption. Such is the passion, such is the hot breath of party feeling. General Sheridan was equally undeserving for praise or blame for 1875 has been named in the Senate. Mr. Conkling here read the remarks of Schuchert in reference to the President, and said that was the language of the Senator from Missouri, who smiling as it were, upon the sides of human ambition, and the motives and acts of one charged with the administration of the laws. The meanest culprit was entitled to be heard in his own defense, and there was an assumption of his innocence until he was proven guilty; but in an American Senate there is a hearing on an assumption. Such is the passion, such is the hot breath of party feeling. General Sheridan was equally undeserving for praise or blame for 1875 has been named in the Senate. Mr. Conkling here read the remarks of Schuchert in reference to the President, and said that was the language of the Senator from Missouri, who smiling as it were, upon the sides of human ambition, and the motives and acts of one charged with the administration of the laws. The meanest culprit was entitled to be heard in his own defense, and there was an assumption of his innocence until he was proven guilty; but in an American Senate there is a hearing on an assumption. Such is the passion, such is the hot breath of party feeling. General Sheridan was equally undeserving for praise or blame for 1875 has been named in the Senate. Mr. Conkling here read the remarks of Schuchert in reference to the President, and said that was the language of the Senator from Missouri, who smiling as it were, upon the sides of human ambition, and the motives and acts of one charged with the administration of the laws. The meanest culprit was entitled to be heard in his own defense, and there was an assumption of his innocence until he was proven guilty; but in an American Senate there is a hearing on an assumption. Such is the passion, such is the hot breath of party feeling. General Sheridan was equally undeserving for praise or blame for 1875 has been named in the Senate. Mr. Conkling here read the remarks of Schuchert in reference to the President, and said that was the language of the Senator from Missouri, who smiling as it were, upon the sides of human ambition, and the motives and acts of one charged with the administration of the laws. The meanest culprit was entitled to be heard in his own defense, and there was an assumption of his innocence until he was proven guilty; but in an American Senate there is a hearing on an assumption. Such is the passion, such is the hot breath of party feeling. General Sheridan was equally undeserving for praise or blame for 1875 has been named in the Senate. Mr. Conkling here read the remarks of Schuchert in reference to the President, and said that was the language of the Senator from Missouri, who smiling as it were, upon the sides of human ambition, and the motives and acts of one charged with the administration of the laws. The meanest culprit was entitled to be heard in his own defense, and there was an assumption of his innocence until he was proven guilty; but in an American Senate there is a hearing on an assumption. Such is the passion, such is the hot breath of party feeling. General Sheridan was equally undeserving for praise or blame for 1875 has been named in the Senate. Mr. Conkling here read the remarks of Schuchert in reference to the President, and said that was the language of the Senator from Missouri, who smiling as it were, upon the sides of human ambition, and the motives and acts of one charged with the administration of the laws. The meanest culprit was entitled to be heard in his own defense, and there was an assumption of his innocence until he was proven guilty; but in an American Senate there is a hearing on an assumption. Such is the passion, such is the hot breath of party feeling. General Sheridan was equally undeserving for praise or blame for 1875 has been named in the Senate. Mr. Conkling here read the remarks of Schuchert in reference to the President, and said that was the language of the Senator from Missouri, who smiling as it were, upon the sides of human ambition, and the motives and acts of one charged with the administration of the laws. The meanest culprit was entitled to be heard in his own defense, and there was an assumption of his innocence until he was proven guilty; but in an American Senate there is a hearing on an assumption. Such is the passion, such is the hot breath of party feeling. General Sheridan was equally undeserving for praise or blame for 1875 has been named in the Senate. Mr. Conkling here read the remarks of Schuchert in reference to the President, and said that was the language of the Senator from Missouri, who smiling as it were, upon the sides of human ambition, and the motives and acts of one charged with the administration of the laws. The meanest culprit was entitled to be heard in his own defense, and there was an assumption of his innocence until he was proven guilty; but in an American Senate there is a hearing on an assumption. Such is the passion, such is the hot breath of party feeling. General Sheridan was equally undeserving for praise or blame for 1875 has been named in the Senate. Mr. Conkling here read the remarks of Schuchert in reference to the President, and said that was the language of the Senator from Missouri, who smiling as it were, upon the sides of human ambition, and the motives and acts of one charged with the administration of the laws. The meanest culprit was entitled to be heard in his own defense, and there was an assumption of his innocence until he was proven guilty; but in an American Senate there is a hearing on an assumption. Such is the passion, such is the hot breath of party feeling. General Sheridan was equally undeserving for praise or blame for 1875 has been named in the Senate. Mr. Conkling here read the remarks of Schuchert in reference to the President, and said that was the language of the Senator from Missouri, who smiling as it were, upon the sides of human ambition, and the motives and acts of one charged with the administration of the laws. The meanest culprit was entitled to be heard in his own defense, and there was an assumption of his innocence until he was proven guilty; but in an American Senate there is a hearing on an assumption. Such is the passion, such is the hot breath of party feeling. General Sheridan was equally undeserving for praise or blame for 1875 has been named in the Senate. Mr. Conkling here read the remarks of Schuchert in reference to the President, and said that was the language of the Senator from Missouri, who smiling as it were, upon the sides of human ambition, and the motives and acts of one charged with the administration of the laws. The meanest culprit was entitled to be heard in his own defense, and there was an assumption of his innocence until he was proven guilty; but in an American Senate there is a hearing on an assumption. Such is the passion, such is the hot breath of party feeling. General Sheridan was equally undeserving for praise or blame for 1875 has been named in the Senate. Mr. Conkling here read the remarks of Schuchert in reference to the President, and said that was the language of the Senator from Missouri, who smiling as it were, upon the sides of human ambition, and the motives and acts of one charged with the administration of the laws. The meanest culprit was entitled to be heard in his own defense, and there was an assumption of his innocence until he was proven guilty; but in an American Senate there is a hearing on an assumption. Such is the passion, such is the hot breath of party feeling. General Sheridan was equally undeserving for praise or blame for 1875 has been named in the Senate. Mr. Conkling here read the remarks of Schuchert in reference to the President, and said that was the language of the Senator from Missouri, who smiling as it were, upon the sides of human ambition, and the motives and acts of one charged with the administration of the laws. The meanest culprit was entitled to be heard in his own defense, and there was an assumption of his innocence until he was proven guilty; but in an American Senate there is a hearing on an assumption. Such is the passion, such is the hot breath of party feeling. General Sheridan was equally undeserving for praise or blame for 1875 has been named in the Senate. Mr. Conkling here read the remarks of Schuchert in reference to the President, and said that was the language of the Senator from Missouri, who smiling as it were, upon the sides of human ambition, and the motives and acts of one charged with the administration of the laws. The meanest culprit was entitled to be heard in his own defense, and there was an assumption of his innocence until he was proven guilty; but in an American Senate there is a hearing on an assumption. Such is the passion, such is the hot breath of party feeling. General Sheridan was equally undeserving for praise or blame for 1875 has been named in the Senate. Mr. Conkling here read the remarks of Schuchert in reference to the President, and said that was the language of the Senator from Missouri, who smiling as it were, upon the sides of human ambition, and the motives and acts of one charged with the administration of the laws. The meanest culprit was entitled to be heard in his own defense, and there was an assumption of his innocence until he was proven guilty; but in an American Senate there is a hearing on an assumption. Such is the passion, such is the hot breath of party feeling. General Sheridan was equally undeserving for praise or blame for 1875 has been named in the Senate. Mr. Conkling here read the remarks of Schuchert in reference to the President, and said that was the language of the Senator from Missouri, who smiling as it were, upon the sides of human ambition, and the motives and acts of one charged with the administration of the laws. The meanest culprit was entitled to be heard in his own defense, and there was an assumption of his innocence until he was proven guilty; but in an American Senate there is a hearing on an assumption. Such is the passion, such is the hot breath of party feeling. General Sheridan was equally undeserving for praise or blame for 1875 has been named in the Senate. Mr. Conkling here read the remarks of Schuchert in reference to the President, and said that was the language of the Senator from Missouri, who smiling as it were, upon the sides of human ambition, and the motives and acts of one charged with the administration of the laws. The meanest culprit was entitled to be heard in his own defense, and there was an assumption of his innocence until he was proven guilty; but in an American Senate there is a hearing on an assumption. Such is the passion, such is the hot breath of party feeling. General Sheridan was equally undeserving for praise or blame for 187