MOONSHINE CAMP MEETING. SIXTH DAY. MOONSHINE, AUGUST 16. Editors of the Intelligencer:

In my report of yesterday I had not the space to notice the doings outside of the sanctuary, nor do I know personally of much that took place outside. I know that the attendance was very large and that the general order was good.

I only heard of one accident occurring. A man fell from his buggy and was considerably hurt, but it was his own fault, not that of the horse or buggy. A great number of persons would take their flasks from their pockets, and without shame would drink in the presence of whoever might be in sight.

As a matter of course this was not done in the presence of the policemen that might be around. At the close of the sermon the prayer by Mrs. Lancaster was unusually young men here, and yet I know some of them stand high at home, and would blush to have their parents know they do such things.

This morning's services in front of the stand were very interesting. Dr. Taylor talked near an hour, and made some very strong points, all of which he expressed with some very apt illustrations. He is a very eccentric man, but he has the happy faculty of holding the attention of his audience. The sermon of Dr. Willis at 10 o'clock was preached from the words: "Perfect love casteth out all fear." First he noticed in what this love was perfect. It is perfect in quality. It possesses the heart to the exclusion of all things else.

No anger, petulance, animosity, can exist in the heart filled with this perfect love. The grace that can make martyrs can make the heart brave itself. It is perfect in quantity. It fills the heart full. We have a receptive capacity which will satisfy to the utmost all that we desire. A little religion has heavy crosses. Perfect love has none. It intensifies the facts wrought in our regenerate nature. It gives us a steady, individual, abiding peace—the transport of joy boiled down.

Prayer by Mrs. Lancaster. Singing. The psalms of the Holy Ghost. The psalms purified do not enjoy all these. It is constant love. It does not ebb and flow. It is free as from fear of self, from fear of others and from that timidity we feel in the discharge of our various Christian duties. At the close of the sermon an urgent invitation was given for the seekers after holiness to present themselves at the altar and many responded.

AFTERNOON. The children's meeting was conducted by Mrs. Ball, and several other ladies talked to the children. The missionary meeting was held at the stand at 2 o'clock, and the services were as follows: Called to order by the President, Miss Lizzie Boyd. Scripture lesson read by Mrs. Hobbs. Singing—"From Greenland's icy mountains."

Prayer by Mrs. Lancaster. Singing again, after which the addresses were made on the subject of missions by Drs.

Prattman and Taylor. A collection was taken up which amounted to $857. Rev. R. J. White, of the Pittsburgh Conference, preached at 3 o'clock from these words: "Him hath God exalted a Prince and a Saviour to give repentance to Israel and forgiveness of sins."

Some of the points of the sermon were as follows: As a Divine Saviour He could not be angry, but man has been exalted. He was not of angelic nature, but He became the man of sorrows. He lived a sinless life, suffered and died, thus meeting every demand of the law in His humanity. He burst the bonds of death sunder, and went again to His Father, where He now sits exalted to make intercession for us. The resurrection of Christ is one of the fundamental doctrines of the Christian church. Had he not risen, then might we doubt the reality of our religion. He is the Captain of our salvation. He is also our Savior. This is the highest title that can be conferred on a created intelligence. A savior must be able to render satisfaction to all the demands of law. This he did. He assumes supreme authority. He is the arbiter of life or death. He locks the grave and unlocks it. He locks Heaven to the sinner and unlocks it to the believer. He locks hell to the believer and opens its yawning depths to the sinner. He then noticed the meaning of the word repentance. It is a turning point with a determination to forsake all. True evangelical repentance is as necessary as faith. There may be repentance that is not unto life. He had very little faith in a death-bed repentance. There must be a conviction of personal guilt. The sinners who give him glory are those who have turned to God to be forgiven. Christ was also exalted that he might impart forgiveness to the penitent. The heart is the fountain of all bitterness. The impurity of our moral nature will all be removed by the presence of God in our hearts. He cannot do this arbitrarily, but only in accordance with his divine and eternal justice. He does all this by our doing just what we can. He sent the comforter to guide, and millions are feeling and enjoying the presence of the Holy Spirit. Many other good things were said which space would not admit of my reporting were I so minded. The services were attended throughout the day by good congregations, though small in comparison to yesterday.
