

The Intelligencer. Office 25 & 27 Fourth Street. PUBLISHED AND PROPRIETOR. SATURDAY, NOV. 17, 1877.

LETTER FROM JAMES CUNNINGHAM, JR. CHAMBERLYN SUMMIT, Nov. 15, 1877.

Away up here on the top of the Allegheny range, twenty-seven hundred feet above the level of old ocean, we feel that without the assistance of the immortal J. N. P. there is no other way to give to the "pressure," and the sense of weariness we feel in the city is replaced as if by magic by buoyancy and exhilaration that is beneficial both mentally and physically.

It is part of a mountaineer's duty to fight forest fires, and annually he has a great deal of it to do. In the late autumn these fires are numerous and sometimes to a great extent damage. When a fire is approaching, as it does sometimes very rapidly, sometimes under a high wind, as fast as a horse can run, everybody is presumed to turn out and fight it.

THE BUSINESS OUTLOOK. I have been closely observing the condition of trade and business, and find that although the advance to the prosperity of the past year, it is none the less certain. There is a growing activity in all avenues of business everywhere, and I find few men out of employment.

General run of provisions 20 per cent less than before the war.

A CAMERON REMINISCENCE. As the West Virginia towns lie apart, each one on the line of the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad represents the business interests of a large section of territory.

As the West Virginia towns lie apart, each one on the line of the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad represents the business interests of a large section of territory. Cameron, for instance, is the exporting and importing center of the greater part of two rich counties, and at present everybody is busy with the wood. As a digression I mention that Cameron at the time of the war was intensely loyal, and marched his 800 men to the front.

OUR OWN GRANDMOTHER. Editor Intelligencer: We cut out "Vio's" "Modern Grandmother" and pasted it in our scrap book to show to our modern grandmother.

THE CLARKSBURG AND WESTON NARROW GAUGE. The Narrow Gauge road between Weston and Clarksburg, so far as I can understand, is in pretty much the same fix that our F. W. & G. W. was in a few years ago. It is in a fix that is not likely to be fixed for some time.

pair to see with and one pair on her forehead. We never could guess why she placed them there. Oh yes, she is one of those good old grandmothers of olden times, that could come out of her quiet home, not the silent grave, and confront the ones who speak of in their youthful flippancy.

Prof. Pendleton at Morgantown. MORGANTOWN, Nov. 13, 1877. Editor Intelligencer: Quite a large audience was present this evening at the University to hear the lecture previously announced by you, W. K. Pendleton. The subject which the gentleman discussed was "The Immortality of Paul and Plato," or a comparison of the views held by these two men on the immortality of the soul.

The Lamp Chimney Trade. Pittsburgh Gazette of Yesterday. The strike of the glass lamp chimney blowers against the "patent crimping" which they characterize as a "monopoly," and as intended to increase the production of lamps, has met with a corresponding increase of wages, has developed another patent which, it is claimed by manufacturers, will completely revolutionize the glass chimney trade.
