THE Benjamin Franklin Primer is a pretty good "hit off" on some of the present school series. The illustrations are very comical while the text is in entire keeping with the grotesqueness of the cuts. For instances on page 18 is an engraving of the upper slovy of a house; on the roof two felines are participating in a moonlight solree; a vinegar-faced individual hears the must and opens the window to take in more fully the delect strains. This is supposed to be his solilo-quy:

'Is this a cat and a kit? "Is this a cut and a kit.
Oh, yes; it is a cat and a kit.
Can you hear the cat and the kit?
Oh, yes; I can hear the cat and the kit?
The cat is the dam of the kit.
Dam the cat, and the kit." How to Abate Coal Smoke.

Everyone that has observed a soft coal are, says a Cincinnati paper, knows that sent off is because of the careless and ig-norant way of feeding the fire. It is the same in steam boiler furnaces, in heating furnaces, in kitchen stoves, and parlor fire-places. Also everyone that has tried it has found that to make workmen or workwomen feed the fire intelligently so as to burn this sinoke, exceeds the power of the employer and housekeeper, even if the employer is not too careless to do it when he or she tends the fire.

In the case of steam boiler furnaces, as we have before times shown, the excuse for shoveling the fireplace full of coals is that the volume of cold air let in under the boilers, by opening the furnace doors to feed little and often, would defeat the reform.

They will find the same in feeding their open fires under their own noses in the parlor, and that even themselves, their husbands, boys, and relations will rather put on a lot of coals at once, and let them send off a black smoke for a quarter or 4.00 half an hour before getting well ignited, for than take the trouble of putting on a little cat shorter intervals. But this casy conclusion on the part of all is what makes the bulk of our smoke.

In the case of steam boiler furnaces, this

In the case of steam boiler furnaces, this inability to get any care or intelligence or stoking har not even attempted to make such a feeding place by which the coals could be placed on the fire without letting in the cold blast. Yet any mechanic will say this is practicable.

Our information is that most of the burning of the smoke which has been accomplished in London is by the manner of leeding the fire. All know that if a small amount of coal is placed on a bright fire, the smoke is mostly burned. On the other hand, they know that if a large quantity is put on a considerable part is sent off in thick smoke before the fire recovers enough to burn it. All can see that if an apparatus were contrived at the mouth of the furnace, to place the coals regularly according to the rate of consumption on the bright fire, most of the smoke would be burned. And aw mechanic will as bright fire, most of the smoke would burned. And any mechanic will say dly yesterday through a street running that such an apparatus can be made to do this without letting in a cold air blast. this without letting in a cold air blast.

But it is requisite that this should be made to work with machine regularity, if not automatically, so that neglect and indifference and laziness shall not findlt easier to stoke in bulk. 'All will agree that it is entirely practicable to make such a feeding apparatus at no greatexpense. And there can be no doubt that the saving thereby would make it profitable. The expectation of some chemical mixture, or of some machine by which smoke shall be made imflammable as to burn itself, will probably be disappointed, but at any rate the reduction of the smoke nuisance by a subdivision of the coal in feeding the fire is entirely practicable, and it appeals to every one's common sense. owed in this building," and entered the rooms of the C. SANFORD'S RADICAL CURE For CATARRH

Is a never-falling specific. When every other remedy has failed, when physicians have pronounced a cure impossible, it has by its powerful alterative and resolvent properties acting thorugh the blood, and by its healing balamic properties acting thorugh the discase masal surfaces, lifted the afflicted, as it were from the very grave. No other remedy had done this, for no other remedy possesses in form as a constant of the contract of the cont nasal surfaces, lifted the afflicted, as it were, from the very grave. No other remedy has done this, for no other remedy possesses in a form so pure and simple, yet so powerfully effective, the real essences, as it were, of the barks and shruls from which it is prepared.

Geo. W. Houghton, Eaq., Waltham, Mass., cured after twelve, years of suffering. Dr. Chas. Main, Boston, writes: "I consider it superior to any preparation laid down in any text-book with which I am familiar." Wm. Bowen, Eaq., of McHatton, Grant & Bowen, 229 Pine street, St. Louis, writes in the warnest terms of it to his frient, A. A. Melller, wholesale druggist, urging that some more rapid means of introducing it to the people of his city be taken. 8. D. Baldwin & Co., druggists, Washington, Ind., say they mover sold arvanedy giving, such universi satisfaction. Eanuel Spinney, Meadow Vale, N. S., says it operated on his system in a way that nothing ever given him by physicians had doine. Geo. F. Dinsmore, a Roston druggist, says that the cure effected in his case was so remarkable that it seemed to many that if
