SECOND DAY'S PROCEEDINGS

Of the State Pharmaceutical Society—Visits to Factories and Hornbrook's Park—Closing Exercises.

A very large number of persons, druggists and their visitors, filled Veteran Hall yesterday morning, to witness the second day's proceedings of the Association.

The President announced the addition of the names of Drs. J. N. Murdoch, of Parkersburg, and J. E. Sample, of Palestine, to the committee on the "Pharmacy Act."

Mr. Alex. Campbell, Chairman of the committee, said the act was a little unfortunate in some of its sections and it would involve actual hardship to observe them. It is hard to obtain black bottles as there are none manufactured in the United States.

Dr. Bocking said the "Pharmacy Act" repealed the act of 1877 in regard to the sale of liquor and the opinions of attorneys and Justices of Peace did not amount to anything. There is a firm in Pittsburgh who will make the black bottles if necessary.

Dr. Logan said there are some things in the act which are oppressive and unjust, and must be removed. He is in favor of the act, but is in favor of the temper of the commissioners in enforcing the terms of the act upon the druggists of this State.

How far do they intend to force upon us the provisions of this law? Some of us have been internationally at work trying to get the black bottles, but could not get them.

There is another provision that works greater injustice. Any storekeeper can sell laudanum in any quantity without the symbols of death, viz: skull and cross bones, which his neighbor, the druggist, can not sell without observing the terms of the bill. Must we submit to the provisions of this bill whose plea is that it protects the public when nine-tenths of the people are in the wrong? If the question is presented to the Commissioners separately I suppose they will say, "we must enforce the law."

Dr. Shriver spoke in the same strain as Dr. Logan, and said if the provisions of the law are enforced as they are written, it is an injustice ever done yet. [Applause.] I am not certain that the law is constitutional.

F. M. Chalfant said no difference how ignorant a proprietor of a country store is can sell poison without a certificate. He would cheerfully answer them. The act was a law and it must continue in force until it is amended or repealed by the Legislature.

Dr. Grant said he was of the opinion that country store keepers had no right to sell strychnine, Paris green, or any other poison. They could, maybe, sell salts or some simple articles, but not poisons.

Mr. J. L. W. Baker, President of the Commission, said that his understanding of the act was that it was intended to protect the public from the sale of poisons for medicinal purposes could be sold without prescription. I think that pasting black paper on the bottles would be a compliance with the law.

A. R. McCabe said it would be a good idea for the committee to retire and propose a list of questions for the Commission to answer. If the question is presented to the Commissioners separately I suppose they will say, "we must enforce the law."

Dr. Baker was on his own motion excused from service on the committee, and subsequently Mr. Boggs, and in their place Messrs. Chalfant and Fogie were substituted.

The President announced that return tickets could be purchased at reduced rates at the B. & O. Depot.

A resolution was offered by Dr. A. J. Lytle, that the committee be authorized to petition the Legislature for the repeal of the ten dollar license for druggists.

On motion of Dr. Bocking the Association adjourned to visit Hobbs, Brockner & Co's work.

THE VISIT. The members of the Convention, as per invitation, called at the Glass Works of Hobbs, Brockner & Co., at the head of Thirty-sixth street, where they were met by the committee on the "Pharmacy Act."

On account of the late rain, the visit to the Belmont works in the body had to be abandoned, but some of the members called, and were shown through the works by Col. Rieker, the gentlemanly manager.

THE PHARMACY ACT

When, as has been shown, no practical benefit to the community is secured thereby, it is therefore especially but rarely that it is the duty of the Commissioners of Pharmacy to modify as far as possible, such of the technical requirements of the Act as may be conceded without any violation of the spirit of the law.

In this view we urge that the requirement in regard to black box, vessel or paper, be so construed as to recognize the use of a poison label, and the poison record alone as a sufficient compliance with the law, and that the requirement in regard to black bottles be so far amended as to not discriminate as it now does to the injury of the druggists of the State.

Your committee believing that the views expressed in this report are just, and are not inconsistent with the spirit of the Pharmacy Act, or with the interests of the community, respectfully submit them to the judgement of the Association.

ALEX. R. CAMPBELL, Chairman.

At 2 o'clock the members of the Association assembled at the McClure House, and headed by Kramer's Band proceeded to the Elm Grove car station, where they took special cars for Hornbrook's Park, where they were welcomed by the gentlemanly proprietor, Mr. C. P. Hornbrook.

At the Park the afternoon was spent in strolling around the premises, practicing speeches, short and witty, were made by several gentlemen: Dr. Shriver, Col. Butcher and M. Chalfant, whose speech was as follows.

MR. PRESIDENT AND GENTLEMEN: It is my duty to report to you that I have present more fully contented to respond to the call made upon me than my humble servant. I formerly prided myself on the fact that I could master the requisite art of making a "happy, neat, round, compact, quaint and silver plait, but I must confess I never possessed that quantum sufficient to make a stately, round turned speech, nevertheless as "duty calls 'tis mine to obey," so I will play recall if you recover. You be the "Merry Old Spruce" and I be the "Merry Old Spruce" of the Knights of the Morning. You will call in vain, for cooling balms, linns, lozons, soothing syrups and infant cordials. I need not assure you gentlemen, of the "West Virginia Pharmaceutical Association" which is with no little feeling of pride I stand before you to-night; proud that our honored profession, the pharmacists of West Virginia have met together and formed themselves into a State organization, to be for the benefit of the people.

Dr. Logan, and said if the provisions of the law are enforced as they are written, it is an injustice ever done yet. [Applause.] I am not certain that the law is constitutional.

F. M. Chalfant said no difference how ignorant a proprietor of a country store is can sell poison without a certificate. He would cheerfully answer them. The act was a law and it must continue in force until it is amended or repealed by the Legislature.

"DING DONG, DING DONG"

Last and Most Successful Presentation of the "Chimes of Normandy" by the Lyric Opera Company.

The fourth performance of the "Chimes of Normandy" by the Lyric Opera Company was given at the Opera House last evening to a large and enthusiastic audience that bestowed its favors frequently and cordially. The last performance of the charming opera has earned for the Lyric an enviable success—a success without qualification. At each successive appearance of the company a marked improvement in all the details has been made, and last evening it was very gratifying to note that the company, not satisfied with former satisfactory achievements, made an advancement as near to perfection as the most exacting critic could wish for.

The score of the opera is very difficult to master, and it is, therefore, doubly creditable to the members of the troupe to have mastered it in the acceptable manner they have succeeded in doing. "Pinafore" was given by some talented young men, yet it was not so much a vocal dialogue compared to the "Chimes of Normandy," which is a melo-dramatic opera, the courses and solos of which are extremely difficult and the ensemble of a very high order. Besides a dramatic action runs through the opera that taxes other talents of the actors besides vocalization. And to have met all the requirements of the character mentioned, to have pleased critical audiences the "Lyrics" are certainly subjects for congratulation. Heretofore the critic has been too fulsome in his praise. The commendations he gives expression to are but the reflections of the opinions of persons who are capable of intelligent appreciation of the work done.

What ever success the soloists gained in the past, they excelled themselves last evening, and scored decided triumphs. It is a pleasant duty to again pay tribute to those who had the most difficult and trying numbers to sing, and to Mrs. Hornbrook, Miss Eoff and Miss Logan and Arkie the critical chronicler cheerfully and unreservedly awards them the palm for the artistic manner in which they acquitted themselves.

It is, perhaps, saying a great deal that Mrs. Hornbrook was equal to all the requirements of the trying role of Serpentine, and in truth she fairly won the verdict, and it is with great pleasure that we record it. She imparted to the character an interest that ran through the entire opera, and it was a pleasure to see her dramatic force not inferior to some of the best representations we have seen on the professional stage. Her pure soprano voice was a delightful accompaniment to her acting, and was heard to good advantage in the scene in which she sang the "Aria." Her voice in the last act was very rich and becoming.

Mrs. Eoff is an artist—unusually an artist. Her Germaine was a bright and vivacious picture, captivating the hearts of the audience. Her acting was of the style and her graceful and easy manner. Her vocal powers are unequalled. She gave the greatest satisfaction, and at every appearance her talents were warmly appreciated by the audience. Those who were present can never forget her sweet voice in the duets with Gretchen and the Marquis.

Mr. Lucas was quite at home in the character of the Marquis and seldom have we heard his voice to better advantage. He sang with a very beautiful style and acted with vigor and maintained an easy presence in the trying scenes. Mr. Arkie was in good voice and sang as sweetly as of yore and gave a very intelligent interpretation of John Grenichew.

Miss Anna Hess gave a charming picture of one of the village gossips. She acted with a clue that is indescribable, and her voice was heard to advantage in the character of the gossip.

The chorus did excellent work last evening, and it is to be complimented no less than the soloists for the favorable impression made upon the audience.

Professor Schockey, as director, was the pleasantest and most successful of the troupe to have the pleasure of inspecting the collection to have a description of each article at hand.

Yesterday was "ent-fleur day," and a profusion of ornamental flower pieces, anchors, crosses, pillows, baskets, pyramids and elaborate bouquets were sent to the ladies. These may be seen to-day by the ladies, and are in themselves a show worth a visit to the exhibition hall.

Some references have already been made in our columns to the unusually large and interesting display of autograph letters and other mementos. The hotel building is fraught with mementos that are of ordinary interest. Some of the historical ones are mentioned in another part of today's paper. The illustrations of the manners and customs of the Japanese, the responses and other articles from Australia and the South Sea Islands, which are the property of Bethany College, are objects which excite the lively curiosity of students, or almost anybody with average intellect, while the relics of the American Indians and their historic predecessor, the Mound Builders, always have a crowd of sight-seers about them.

The art department, with Mr. Dillon's collection of statuettes and busts, is at once the most interesting and the most attractive of all the displays, and more who are all interested in the fine arts could spend a day in that corner without growing weary.

The fancy goods booth, especially since the addition of the cut flowers and floral designs, is certainly the most attractive of all the displays, and more who are all interested in the fine arts could spend a day in that corner without growing weary.
