the piece by the same actress and company here this season, is certainly very flattering. The audience was evidently appreciative, though, like all matinee houses, undemonstrative. The support was good, and Mile. Rhea's own role was enacted with the magnetic abandon which she evinees in every part, and which makes one lose sight of the artist, and think only of the character she plays, as if she were "Camille" instead of merely an actress personaling her.

The performance last night was a remarkable one for several reasons. In the first place in osuch audience was ever seen in the Opera House. It has been equaled, and a few times surpassed, in numbers, and a smaller audience has sometimes equaled it in relinement. But never before was such a large number of the wealthiest and most cultured of the people of Wheeling attracted to a dramatic performance.

The play is not a great one. Probably if any person but Shakespeare had written it it would never have been performed. As a "Beatrice" Alle Rhea has some opportunities to show her dramatic fire, and she misses none of them. The audience was a little cold last night, until their, enthusiasm was fairly forced out by the magnificent acting of the lady and one or two members of her company. Mr. Gotthid as "Benedict" "Bened

S. H. BARRETT'S BALLROAD SHOWS.
What the Most Stupendous Railroad Menagrie and Circus Ever Organized Is and What It Advertises.
This show, which will canopy many acres with its wilderness of canvass at Wheeling, Thursday, May 4, is the newest, as well as the largest, among the traveling exhibitions of the day. It is the big show which has been so generously advertised, and which has fallen like a bomb of the largest calibre among the other canvas entertainments and caused the direct consternation among their proprietors. There is nothing of the played-out past about it; nothing stale, flat and unprofitable. It is beyond all rivalry and above all envy. It is not the commonly advertised many-in-one, but the supreme, undivided, overslaalewing one in many. It is a to once the most encomous, elegant and refined of molern exhibitions and beyond eavil excessively excessively acreed the supreme haven the contractions and beyond eavily excessively created.

put before the people. Its fourteen beautiful trained Kentucky thoroughred horses, its twenty double somersuit leapers, its eight bareback equestrians, its daring aerial gymnasts, its mammoth living hippopotamus, its enormous black rhinoceros, its immense equestrian apes, its drove of twenty camels, its legion of well-filled pictorial dens, its twenty jubilec cabin-shouters, its nysterious water wizards, its len funny clowns, its skilled pirouetic and somersuit equestrians, its long-leaning greyhounds, its full-grown trained graines, its stounding troup of trained cattle, its academy of ape, baboon and monkey pupils, and its myraid other special novelties, form a tout ensemble that has no counterpart in kindred exhibitions.

An integral part of its transcendently beautiful street parade, and one which will commend itself to all admirers of spectacular street effects, will be the episode of "The Shelk's Return from Conquest, a sene, apart from all other attractions, worth coming a hundred miles to witness, and introducing an immense herd of twenty camels, mounted by native Mahomedans. I have been a great sufferer from a very weak stomach, hearfourn, and dyspepsia in its worst form. Nearly everything I ate gave me distress, and I could eat but little. I have tried everything recommended, have
