MEDICAL.

A WOMAN'S EXPERIENCE.

Mrs. WILLIAM TOWNES, of Uxbridge, Mass., writes on March 15 1883 as follows:

"During the past three years I have been a great sufferer from a complication of diseases which baffled the skill of the most experienced doctors, as I could not obtain permanent relief by their treatment and prescriptions; and I have also tried many so called cures in the medicine line, but could get no relief. The pains, aches, and weakness increased so rapidly and constantly that I was so reduced in strength as to be unable to leave the bed, and the doctors informed me that there was no hope of a recovery. In this exhausted and discouraged condition a dear friend persuaded me to use Hunt's Remedy, and after taking it only three days I commenced to get better, and to my great joy and delight I have continued to improve constantly by its use, until now, after having taken the remedy only a few weeks, I am able to be about my house again, and am now doing my housework. My lame back is cured, the severe pains have disappeared, and I am now in better health than for many years, and beg this privilege of gladly recommending Hunt's Remedy to all who are affected with any disease of the kidneys or liver; and I also highly recommend it for the attacks of sick headache. My husband also has experienced a very great benefit to his health by the use of this most valuable medicine, Hunt's Remedy."

"Our Flag is Still There."

Mr. S. B. LONGFELLOW, Augusta, Me., east side river, writes us under date of April 15, 1883:

"To whom it may concern: This may certify that two years ago I was very badly afflicted with kidney and urinary difficulties, which extended through the system and laid me up for weeks, so that I could do no work. I had the most skilful physician in town, who gave me no assistance. Hearing of Hunt's Remedy, I got a bottle, and half of it cured me entirely, so that I have been well ever since. The other half I gave to a neighbor who was afflicted as much as I was, and it restored him to health. I can truly say Hunt's Remedy has been of great and inexpressible worth to me."

TWIN BORN.

Two roses hung in the purple eve
In the glow of the golden sun;
And the shadow crept in each crimson heart
When the summer's day was done.

But one was dead when the morning came,
Down-trodden by careless feet;
In the light of the moon its petals fair
Had yielded their fragrance sweet.

But the other bloomed in the garden air
Like a maid with a blushing face,
In the midst of the dew-kissed blossoms fair
It hung with a royal grace.

A lesson of life, I learned from these—
A thought that was bitter sweet,
As I gazed on the rose that bloomed above—
And the blossom that lay at my feet.

Twin-born are the flowers of hope and love,
As the bloom in the purple eve;
Who knows when the golden day is done,
What shadows the night will weave?

In the crimson heart of the fairest rose
The shadows of death may lie;
And the hope that lives in the golden day
In the gloom of the night may die.

Twin-born are the thoughts and the lives of men,
Twin-born are the hopes of the heart;
But the morning that comes with its crimson glow
Sees them faded and far apart.

FANNY ISABELLE SHERRICK.

ON THE PLAINS IN '65.

A Sergeant of Company "K" is Killed by Indians—How the Indian Won the Pony—And Lost It Again—Sioux Stampede the Cattle, But the Virginia Boys in Blue Save the Herd.

BY SERGEANT HOLLIDAY.

14.

A few men belonging to companies "H" and "K" of our regiment had, contrary to orders straggled behind, and getting out of sight, they left the trail and rode some miles through the bluffs, toward the Platte river. They were in quest of antelope which they soon found. Of course an exciting chase took place, and one of the boys a Sergeant, became separated from the rest and ran some miles down the river in hot pursuit of a herd of game.

A band of Indians concealed in the thick brush upon the river bank lay quietly in waiting until he approached, when a shot from one of them pierced his heart and he fell dead. Not however without being seen by one of his comrades who saw him fall and summoned his other companions, they rushed to the rescue but too late. The redskins had scalped and stripped him of all his weapons, taking his saber but leaving the scabbard behind. Although there were a score or more of them they fled to the hills leaving the boys in possession of the dead body of their comrade. Perplexed as to what to do under the circumstances, the men finally decided to cover the body up, and report to the command at once. A blanket was thrown over the mutilated corpse, and the men came with all haste and reported the sad fate of their comrade. A detachment was at once sent back who buried him where he fell. This served to put the boys on the alert, and ever after we were more vigilant and discreet.

From the rugged appearance of the country along this portion of the North Platte, we conclude that we have crossed the plains and are now approaching the mountains.

We have crossed Kansas, Nebraska, Colorado a corner of Dakota and are well into Wyoming. We have found abundance of small game, but as yet we have not seen one live buffalo. Here we began to find the country more fertile especially in the valleys and bottoms along the river.

It was now the latter part of September and we found the nights cold and chilly and heavy coats and blankets add much to our comfort.

The shades of night were settling around us as we ascended a bluff and found ourselves within one mile of Scott's Bluff. This place is surrounded by a mystery and interest. It was the hiding place of "Green River" the young road agent.

We had long before we reached here heard of how many trains had been stopped and plundered. Cattle and horses stampeded and run off. Returning Californians were waylaid and forced to turn over their hard-earned "dust," and not long before, a paymaster was forced to hand out $60,000 of Uncle Sam's money to a band of Indians who all spoke plain English. It was said that Green River was the leader of this band, and that Captain Shurman's men, a company of the Eleventh Ohio Cavalry, camped at Fort Mitchell, just beyond were his conferates in some of these daring deeds, especially the mail robberies.

Then we had been told of caves somewhere within these vast lava beds, where the desperadoes, Green River and his gang, lived in peace and security.

All these stories which had been told us by soldiers and half-breed Indians along the route, threw around the place a romance which we found increased as we drew near to the great rough shapeless pile of rock through which the road passed.

Approaching from the east, the road winds around deep canyons and ravines. As we enter the pass we are ordered to draw revolvers and keep close together. High rugged cliffs from a wall on either side of the pass, and as our ponies tread upon the hard road the walls give forth a deep hollow sound which fills the place with solemn awe.

Our paymaster glanced into every crack and crevice as he rode, in advance of his ambulance. We had been told not to stop in the pass, but that we might return and view the scenery after our paymaster had been lodged at Fort Mitchell.

We go through in more than ordinary haste always on the alert for any road agent or band of Indians who might cast their shadows across our pathway.

We arrive at the west end of the pass after traveling for fifteen minutes in a dusky gloomy darkness and the welcome rays of the setting sun fall across our pathway once more.

Then Fort Mitchell dawns upon us. We had heard much of this post and the 11th Ohio boys, who held the fort. Nestled away down in a horseshoe curve of the North Platte, we can see the smoke curling up from a half dozen chimneys and see the long rows of port holes in the sides of the low dismal walls, reminding us of some ancient castle, or perhaps a picture we have seen somewhere.

Notwithstanding the tales we had heard of how these boys plundered everybody who passed, or camped in that locality, we left next morning with a good opinion of them, and feeling assured that they had been lied upon.

We camped the next night at Chimney Rock, which stands back three miles from the river at the foot of the sand bluff and there are no other indication of rock for many miles around it. At this point on the Platte was another block house called Chimney Rock station, and guarded by twenty-five men of the Third U. S. Infantry. Viewing the rock from the station it resembles an old furnace stack standing alone like a great obelisk. Its height is 170 feet, and from the vast quantity of sand at its base we judge at one time it was much higher.

It was told us, that at one time a band of Sioux passing there, an offer was made by the Chief, of a pony to the young brave who would climb to the pinnacle and stand up on it. Several fruitless attempts were made but finally a daring young buck succeeded by cutting niches with his tomahawk in reaching its dizzy height, but just as he was in the act of standing upon the top, his moccasin slipped and down he came. Had he found a soft place upon which to light he would have won the broncho and perhaps been made a chief and then married the old chief's daughter and all that, but he struck the ground too hard, and so he gave up the ghost—and the pony too. But the old chief did the next best thing he could. He erected a scaffold, wrapped the dead Indian up in all his available assets, and wythed him fast on top of the scaffold, then he killed the pony which the poor fellow had lost his life in winning, and placed its carcass under the scaffold for the dead warrior to ride on his hunts in the happy hunting grounds. We looked about for the scaffold and thought we found evidences of it in the shape of rotten wood and small bits of hides.

The afternoon of the day on which we left the great Chimney Rock we reached Fort Laramie, the great supply post of the North Platte. As we came in sight of it, we could discern in the distant west a great peak looming up like one of the pyramids of Egypt. Just behind it appeared a long chain of black mountains, so far away and dim to the naked eye that we could not tell whether they were really mountains or clouds. But we soon learned that the peak was Laramie Peak and the mountain in the rear was a chain of the Rockies. So this was our first glimpse of the Rocky Mountains. We did not think then that before two months would pass we would be wading through snow drifts and climbing over rocks and crags in the very heart of these mountains, but so it was.

Laramie had recently been the scene of a great number of raids, made by roving and straggling bands of Sioux and Cheyenne Indians.

The place for four weeks previous to our arrival had been held by infantry, all the cavalry having gone on the Powder River expedition under General Sulley.

These Indians seemed to know this, and they took advantage of the situation, and almost every day a stampede of the herd belonging to the post was attempted, and they always succeeded in running off some cattle or horses, while the infantry, of course, could not follow with much success.

A few days after our arrival with the paymaster, the remainder of our regiment came on from Julesburg with our wagon train.

We were now put on duty at this Fort as herders, mail-runners, scouts, guards, in fact all the duties performed by cavalry in that country, and we had a pretty warm time of it. The day of our arrival a band of Indians had struck a small herd of cattle belonging to a passing train, and succeeded in getting away with about fifty of them.

The day following, after we had gone into camp, and settled down for a short stay, the attempt was repeated. We had our ponies all staked at the tent and were expected to be called out at any minute. Some of our boys were on duty as herders with several Franchmen and half-breeds, regular herders. We had watched from our camp the bluffs all the morning for the appearance of Indians, when in a twinkling a painted band of Sioux filed out of a ravine and succeeded by a bold dash in cutting off a few straggling cattle from a small herd belonging to a transportation train in camp below the fort. There was not the usual war whoop, but the thing was done in five minutes and in a very systematic way.

In an instant all was in confusion about the Fort and everybody watched the new Cavalry camp to see what would be done there. No sooner were the Indians seen than every man rushed for his pony, and in two minutes we were mounted and in hot pursuit.

There were no orders issued, no red tape about the thing, but every man for himself.

The Indians were surprised. They had not been posted as to our arrival, for no sooner did we strike the bluffs close upon their heels than they ceased their efforts to keep the stock before them, but each fellow became deeply interested in saving himself, and by the time we had run five miles every ox was left behind, some shot full of arrows and others crippled in various ways.

I never saw such a cease before, nor will any of us witness such an exciting scene again. The Indians soon separated into small squads, and so did we. There were two hundred of us and less than half that number of Indians.

In spite of our efforts and determination to kill the last one of them, we could not gain a foot on them and after chasing them until afternoon we found our ponies exhausted and the Indians gaining ground. We were now in sight of Raw Hide Creek, a small stream where the Indians had always camped, and where several fights had occurred between them and the whites.

I was with a small squad who had became separated from the rest. With this squad was Brazie and Myers, two of our Lieutenants.

Brazie had taken command of, and had made his intentions known, to follow them into the very doors of their lodges, and the boys all manifested a willingness to follow him.

We had lost sight of the other detachments and we checked up and gave our ponies a chance to breath. There were thirty of us in this squad, all well armed with Spencer carbines, saber, and most of us had two Remington revolvers. There was one thing lacking—rations. In our haste we had neglected something to eat; but we concluded to push on and trust to luck, or rather our skill as hunters for meat.

It was dark when we halted our jaded ponies on the bluffs overlooking the meandering stream and we deployed our small force upon several hills to see what discoveries could be made, and in a short time some of the boys reported that a small force of Indians had come to a halt in the mouth of a ravine and were massed for a fight. It was now too dark to distinguish one from another or attempt an attack. So it was decided to take up a position and await the dawn of day.

All night long we lay upon two bluffs and watched the foe intending to surround them at daylight and make a clean sweep of the whole gang. During the night Brazie's pony died from his over exertion of the day before, and our commander was thirty miles from Laramie and dismounted. This threw a damper on that gentleman's valor, for no pony could be procured to fill the vacancy without dismounting some other man, and this the Lieutenant would not do. However, we pledged ourselves to stand by him. Well, to cut the matter short, day dawned and we were in the act of making a bold dash when we discovered that the Indians massed at the mouth of that ravine was nothing more nor less than a small thicket of box-elder.

There was one happy soul in that squad when the discovery was made that was our fat Lieutenant. We turned our faces toward Laramie, and late that night after a long march of over thirty miles, over a hilly prairie we came into our camp on the Platte almost starved and our ponies badly used up.

We learned from this that it was no easy job to catch an Indian when he had one or two miles the start. But we had saved the cattle, and that was something under similar circumstances for a long time had not been done. They always got away with the stock before the troops could get ready to follow. We had several experiences like this while we lay at Laramie. In fact the thing got to be monotonous and we got tired of it before we left the post. Several times while running the mail through to Horse Shoe Station and La Bonta, posts above Laramie the boys were chased and compelled to fight their way through.

A Blessing.

The pain in all his joints became intense; fever, with its deteriorating effects, was now added, and he became rapidly reduced to the semblance of a skeleton, while vitality reached its lowest possible condition, and his sufferings were of such indescribable character that those who most loved him sometimes thought it would be better if he were called away. At this time physicians, well known in this city (Pittsburgh), informed his parents that he was in imminent danger of total Paralysis, and directly afterward they announced to his sorrowful mother that they could give no hopes of his recovery. At this juncture the use of Peruna was commenced, and in six weeks Wm. Lincoln Curtis was well and at work. Read page 23 of Dr. Hartman's "Ills of Life;" get it from your Druggist.

STOCKS—The market opened irregular but a fraction below yesterday's closing figures. From the opening until near 11 o'clock the market was weak and declined ¼a½ per cent, in which Lake Shore, Coal Shares and Wabash were the greatest sufferers. From then until 12 o'clock the market was strong and the decline recovered, Michigan Central and Northwestern leading in the improvement. During most of the afternoon the market was very dull, generally weak, and in the late trade, assisted by a large failure in Chicago, prices sold down ¼a½ per cent, Coal Shares, Northern Pacific and Northwestern being most prominent in the decline. In the final dealings there was a fractional rally, and the market, though dull, closed firm. The closing prices as compared with those of yesterday show only fractional declines.

NEW YORK, June 16.—Dry Goods—For Saturday there has been a fair demand. The close of the week shows the total sales to be in increased proportion compared with the last few weeks. Agents made the price of Elmwood, 36 bleach, 11c, and Weltensville, 36 bleached, 10¾c. There is a growing improvement in inquiry for cottons and woolens and a larger number of small transactions are reported. The Journal of Commerce publishes a number of woolen mills, representing 400 sets of cards, as stopped, and also announces others running out in order to shut down. This practical curtailment of producing is recognized by distributors who already perceive some betterment in the woolen goods market.
