St. John and His Side Show.

Little by little we are getting something of the inside of St. John's campaign. It had an inside, and the history of the Presidential contest of 1881 will remain incomplete until this chapter shall have been written.

The present and common understanding is that the National Republican Committee had the first chance at St. John and refused to buy him, and that the Democratic committee, learning that so conspicuous a reformer was for sale, bought him for $35,000. This sum is given by the Washington correspondent of the Pittsburgh Times, who does not vouch for its accuracy. The amount may have been more or less. Less would have paid St. John well. Twice as much would have been cheap enough to the Democratic Committee.

Believing that their own committee could have bought St. John, there are Republicans who find fault with the committee for not making the dicker. The committee did what it thought was best. If it declined a chance to buy St. John that was either because it did not wish to go into that kind of business, or because it thought St. John would not keep faith, or again because it was feared he could not deliver the goods.

St. John was in better position to deal with the Democratic party than with the Republican party. To serve the Democrats it was only necessary to stay in the field and do just what his followers wanted him to do—poll as many votes as he could. These votes coming mainly from the Republican side, the Democrats wanted nothing better of St. John. Very different from the Republican party.

We may be sure that at some time the whole of this entertaining story will come out. It comes under the head of too good to keep. When the truth comes there will be some very sick St. John people. Some of them are not feeling well now.

Prohibitionists—Associated Sizes.
Ex-Chief Justice Agnew, of Pennsylvania, writing to the Philadelphia Press, draws a sharp line of distinction between the two classes of men who favor prohibition. He says:

There are two classes of Prohibitionists here and elsewhere: One whose purpose is to draw public attention to the vice of drunkenness and its best remedy, thereby arousing a proper sentiment among men of all parties. The other is equally pure in intention, but most mistaken in the means of reaching the end by partisan machinery and its antagonizing effect on parties. For some of the latter class (followers of St. John) I have sympathy, for theirs is the sin of ignorance. For St. John I have no excuse. His was the expressed intent to destroy a political party. Twice elected Governor of Kansas by the Republicans, thrusting himself on his party a third time, and defeated by the people, he turned against the friends who made him. As an apostle of temperance, he preached his gospel at $50 a night. When, taking upon himself the title and prey of the Pittsburgh Convention, a body avowing its purpose of defeating the Republican party, he wrought up Western New York until the whole State had obtained 25,000 votes, taken more than four-fifths from the Republicans. So far as the remarks in the Press and other papers strike at the folly and wrong of this course, I have nothing to say. But with the other class of Prohibitionists, it is far different. Their efforts for the sake of humanity, arising from partisanship, but appealing to the good men of all parties and classes to end a gigantic evil, carrying into its womb murder, suicides, insanity, deaths and crimes of all kinds, with the destruction of families and public and private interests.

In other words the Prohibitionists with a big P are those who jumped into the arena under St. John's lead to found a National party. The prohibitionists with a little p are those who are content to confine the question to its proper field in each State, and have kept out of the more ambitious folly. While this difference is well-defined, it is obvious that the cause of prohibition has been struck a terrible blow by the St. John movement. Whether it can recover, the future will show.

Republicans, particularly where they are in a minority, can afford to look on and see what the Democratic party is going to do about it. That is the party which has had the great profits of prohibition, though that is the party which has been most opposed to prohibition.

The Latest Fashionable Craze.
Elopement is the fashionable craze of the day. It isn't so aesthetic as working crackle wear in silk, making extra quilts or hand-painting the garden water; but it is more stirring and it is the vogue.

Young women are responsible for what may be called the renaissance of elopement. They began it by running away with the coachman. The matrons are not in the habit of letting the youngsters carry all the style, and when they do undertake to make a fashionable thing entirely "proper" they spare neither trouble nor expense. So it came to pass that the matrons began to "patronize" the elopement craze. The staid wives of staid doctors have run off with men not so staid; and deacons who have got tired of staying at home have left their own wives and gone off with the wives of other men. In sundry cases no deacons have figured.

Then brothers-in-law have made little excursions with sisters-in-laws, and delayed their return. Everybody seems to be eloping with everybody else, and the philosophical man of steady habits begins to wonder whether this full tide of fashion is going to sweep him away.

What does all this mean? Is the world badly matched—are there hearts that love and yearn and yet are sternly kept apart by the barbed fence of law and the high walls of public opinion? Or is it to be taken merely as a reminder that the inventive ingenuity of the age has neglected to devise a delicate torture for the married eloper?

How It Makes You, Logan Feels.
N. Y. Dispatch to Clin. Gen. Gazette.

Logan is a natural born soldier, the ideal of that character. When he spoke of Hendricks, his face flushed and he said: "I have in my body two rebel bloods. When I have to sit in the Senate, prof-led over by that man, who was a copperhead and a rebel sympathizer, I shall feel that, if I could, I would cut those bloods out and take their place with decency."

There, take them back, the purpose which the suffering they have caused, served, has passed away."

POLITICAL ORGANIZATIONS.

Are Permanent Political Organizations Injurious to the Best Interests of a Republic?

By the Editor of the Intelligencer.

SINCE it has been the axiom in political science that educated intelligence is the parent method of correct government. If this is correct, by what method can it be made a success? Namely, by organizing into political associations, not simply for the canvass, as recently, but permanently.

It has been said that a nation advances in greater ratio of intelligence during a political contest than at other periods of its progress, because of the dissemination of political literature and the discussion of the questions of the day, and become better informed. History shows that in all great disturbances there is an advance of free thought. Some great writer said that political battles were similar to those of the field, only one was fought with out bayonets. Dissemination of literature followed British bayonets in Abyssinia and molded an opinion, but British opinions on American soil must be counteracted by American intelligence.

How can they be made effectual? Simply by the organizing and awakening of an intelligent interest in government methods and purposes and prompt party morality.

English journalists paid a tribute to the efforts of our institutions in the late contest for the Presidency, based on the intelligence of the people. There can be nothing alarming in unity. It is not the mobilization of an army in battle array having an ostensible purpose, but seeking political honors, being neutralized and better informed in political economy.

It was once said that a gentleman in conversation with President Vanderbilt, of the New York Central railway, that he upbraided him for the great effort in keeping it double tracked and ever the snow swept off in mid-winter, and thought he could do all their traffic with one track. How many trains will you run in twenty-four hours? asked Mr. Vanderbilt. One every half hour, responded the gentleman, for eight days a day. Well, says Mr. Vanderbilt, we have to run sixty-five every twenty-four hours and get in six specials a week. A better understanding in railway matters would have relieved the gentleman of his discomfiture.

In political affairs the same is applicable. Need of properly understanding and discussing questions that relate to commercial affairs, taxation and the promotion of agriculture, education of the people and interchange of ideas. By this means, then, the superstructure will be made more grand, on which rests the basis of human government. More honorable, because founded on the cause of equity, more humanitarian in its essentials of greatness and simplicity in the political education of the people.

Stability of Government.

How General Grant Feels.

New York Correspondence Chicago Tribune.

"You can scarcely credit the pains my father has gone to," said Colonel Grant.

"To make sure of points on which he has relied on his memory, but which he would not commit himself to until satisfied by comparing notes with others that he was beyond a doubt correct. We have corresponded with others in writing circles, and it becomes generally known that Dr. Guy's Yellow Dock and Sarsaparilla is a certain cure for all weakness of the urinary organs, nervousness, etc. Obedience to the laws of health, take a few bottles of this simple remedy and you will soon be restored to perfect manhood and womanhood, free from all worry of mind and distress of body."
