

The Intelligencer.

Office: Nos. 25 and 27 Fourteenth Street.

JAMES's friends who are sojourning in Canada, will not hurry back to New York. There is no peace for them here.

NATURAL gas is a great restorer of confidence. Though the pipes are not in there is better feeling all around.

EVERYBODY wants to see Wheeling go ahead. Who is ready to help, and how much? That is the way to get it.

Mr. MORANSON threatens to spring his tariff bill as a thief in the night. Mr. Moran has a lucid idea of the eternal stings of things.

HOADLY talks like a statesman. He blames the absentee Senators, and says the party will have to stand it. And what medicine it is!

This sort of thing is dangerously near the front line. The country must brace itself to receive harrowing returns from the Delaware peach crop.

We can't credit the report that the President is going to marry the mother instead of the daughter. Mr. Cleveland is just a little too old for that.

Irish don't get home rule what is in store for England? The Tories and their liberal Liberal allies don't seem to dwell on this phase of the question.

The Ohio exiles might slip down to Patagonia and set up a little government of their own. Their usefulness in the Backeye State has expired by emigration.

How does it happen that Governor Wilson hasn't been doing something for a week or so? Does he think Brother Camden has fallen into a state of "innocuous desuetude"?

The Chicago Tribune says of the Grand Jury that it will look into the Anarchist riot that "it is really the best that has been drawn for a year." This is something to be thankful for.

Mr. WATKINSON is at this moment on the having boom of the broad Atlantic. If he sees a mermaid he will mistake her for the Star-Veiled Goddess of Reform, abandoned by the President for a likelier lass.

Those Democratic Senators of Ohio who are holding sessions in Kentucky will probably appeal their case to the Supreme Court of that State. That is the way for them to get full satisfaction. They have no standing in Ohio.

It is the proud boast of the Anarchist Arberle Zeitung that it has purchased a business house for $3,500 and is going to have its own press. What will these things profit when we begin to destroy all property? "Property is crime!"

SAAM, chief of the Cleveland Anarchists, that is to say the most blatant of them, appeals to the Constitution to save him from the police. Next he will be apostrophizing "the old flag and an appropriation." These things grow on us.

That will be an occasion of great "conspicuous interest" when the Emperor of Germany and Prince Bismarck call to pay their respects to the Pope of Rome. His Holiness will not then seem to have been stripped entirely of his temporal power. It will certainly be a reminder of Canosa.

When Senator Sherman was speaking in the late Virginia campaign editor Bolton of the Lynchburg Virginian, denounced him as "an unmitigated scoundrel, a liar and a thief." In recognition of this and other eminent services the President appointed Bolton to be Postmaster. Senator Sherman took no part in the affair, but his associates of both parties did. Bolton was snapped off. The only vote in his favor were those of three Democratic Senators and Riddleberger. Bolton will have plenty of time to edit his newspaper and reflect and kick himself.

The whole country will feel relieved by the conviction of Alderman Jaehne. It shows that in the greatest city in the Union justice is not impotent to deal with criminals who are also politicians. It was feared that the jury-fixer might save this bloated rascal, but their acts proved far more unavailing, and the first of the bribe-taking Aldermen to be tried has his vulgar crime fastened on him. After this excess we may look for more of the same kind before the trials are ended. The conviction and severe punishment of all who are under indictment would be a wholesome example to other men who go into public life for the money they hope to make out of it. If a New York Alderman can be brought to book we need not despair of bringing up other public thieves with a round turn.

JAMES CONVICTED. The New York Anarchist Found Guilty of Taking Bribes.

New York, May 15.—In the Jaehne trial today, counsel for the defense moved that the indictment be dismissed, as the grand jury had been tricked into making a false presentment. It was a fraudulent record, and should be quashed. Furthermore, that there was no evidence of the receipt of a bribe, and that no evidence that it had been received in this country had been introduced. Judge Barrett held that the points were not well taken, and overruled the motion.

After some quibbling the prisoner was placed in the box as a witness in his own behalf. He emphatically denied that he had been offered or had accepted any bribe for his vote on the Broadway franchise bill, but that he voted for it because he thought it would prove a benefit to the city. Jaehne denied that he ever told Byrnes that he had kept Maloney's "boodle" one night when Maloney was drunk.

At 11 o'clock counsel concluded their arguments, and the jury retired. At 11:15 this (Sunday) morning the jury, after being out two hours, returned a verdict of guilty. Jaehne received the verdict with leaden lips set every fiber strained to a painful tension. It is being given to discharge it on Sunday. Jaehne was then taken to the Tombs.

AFTER GERONIMO.

THE RENEGADE'S TACTICS.

He is Surprised by the United States Troops, but Afterwards Turns the Tables on Them—A Hot Fight—The Apache's Trail of Blood in Old Mexico.

TUCUCAN, Ariz., May 16.—A special from Huchoco says, Capt. Hatfield with a troop of cavalry struck Geronimo a heavy blow yesterday morning ten miles south of Santa Cruz, but a few hours later he received a heavier blow in return. Friday afternoon, the hostiles, about seventy strong struck Miles' Pias' ranch and on rounding up had thirty horses. Hatfield arrived a half an hour later and followed the trail until dark. Yesterday morning he surprised and stampeded the hostiles, capturing their entire camp outfit and horses. He then started for Santa Cruz. In passing through Box canon a galling fire was suddenly poured upon his little command. The men dismounted and made a gallant fight for an hour, losing two killed and three wounded. Many Indians fell but the number is not known. Captain Hatfield receded Santa Cruz, where he will be joined by Lieutenant Cook's troop. Major Ring with a large Mexican force reached Santa Cruz last night and joined in the pursuit this morning. General Miles, Captain Lebo and Lieutenant Davis are with the troops. Governor Torres, of Sonora, and Prefect Rivero, of the Magdalena district, are here in consultation. Governor Torres has received a dispatch from the Prefect of Guaymas, stating that General Martinez routed the Yaquis from their stronghold in Sierra Bacatye on the 13th, killing one hundred and capturing two hundred. Many Mexicans were killed and fifty wounded. Cazeme escaped, but is being pursued by troops on land and gunboats on the river. This virtually ends the Yaqui war.

FRESH ATROCITIES. Geronimo and His Band Again at Their Inhuman Work.

EL PASO, May 15.—W. J. Glenn, Chief Engineer of the Sonora Land Company, of Chicago, arrived here yesterday from the State of Sonora, Mexico. He gives an account of the atrocities of Geronimo and his band of Apaches in Sonora and southern Arizona. Massacres are of daily occurrence. The Indians seem emboldened and are more bloodthirsty than for several months previously, and Mexicans and their families, as well as whites, are butchered wherever found. The last night three Mexican surveyors in the mountains recently and so trace of them can be found. There is no doubt they were butchered. Mr. Glenn says Northern Sonora is much excited over reports that a body of Mexicans, numbering fifty, were caught in the mountains and will be probably massacred.

It is known that twenty Americans have been murdered since the late outbreak in the vicinity of Nogales. Those who have been captured are treated as human. They kill old and young, Mexican and American, indiscriminately. All this has occurred since Geronimo and General Crook had their celebrated conference or powwow some forty days ago.

Some of the things caught, and that glimpse of the hostile body say Geronimo has fully 1000 bucks with him, and that he has all well armed and has 30,000 rounds of ammunition. Geronimo eludes the soldiers who have been caught, being about twice as rapid as the troops can.

CONGRESSIONAL MATTERS. The Programme for the Week in the Senate and House.

WASHINGTON, D. C., May 10.—The week will open in the House with several bills for nearly every day and small chances for action after to-morrow upon anything except the appropriation bills. An effort will be made by the Public Lands Committee to pass, to-morrow, under a suspension of the rules, the bill requiring the Northern Pacific Railroad Company to pay the cost of surveying its granted lands, a measure that was called up in the last committee suspension day and which comes over as unfinished business. The House Committee will ask the House to fix a day for the consideration of the bills reported by the committee and now on the calendar. The Invalid Pensions committee will make an attempt to secure a day for the consideration of the arrears of pension bill, and another measure.

The Foreign Affairs Committee will then endeavor to secure final action on the Chinese indemnity. Wednesday is set apart for the consideration of the reorganization bill, but it is likely to be displaced by the report of the Postoffice Committee to the Senate amendments to the Postoffice appropriation bill, and a lively debate may be expected when the bill is taken up.

In the Banking and Currency Committee can secure the floor on Thursday in accordance with assignment it will push one of the bills providing for the issue of silver certificates.

Set aside for a moment the discussion of the Dunn free ship bill. The Legislative and Naval appropriation bills will in all probability be reported to the House during the week and may be called up for consideration to the Senate. The bill on the special order above mentioned.

The general pension bill remains the unfinished business of the Senate, and if disposed of before the expiration of this week will probably be followed by the bankruptcy bill. The bill on the special order above mentioned.

The Acting Secretary of the Treasury has designated Mr. Horatio A. Whitney, cashier, to be Acting Assistant Treasurer during the absence of Mr. Whelpley who is in bad health.

A Big Strike Adjusted. PHILADELPHIA, May 15.—An agreement has been reached between the striking garment cutters and clothing manufacturers, and the strikers will resume work to-morrow. The men had struck for eight hours, but at a conference last night a compromise was effected on a basis of fifty-four hours a week, nine and a half hours in the week and six and a half days on Saturday, the cutters to receive wages paid for ten hours before the strike. There were about 1,000 cutters on a strike and nearly 15,000 hands dependent on them for work.

After a West Virginia Murderer. CHARLESTON, W. Va., May 15.—Sheriff McVey, of Fayette county, left for Columbia to-day with a requisition from Governor Wilson for Charles Connolly, who is wanted for the shooting of Charles Liberty last September. Connolly is in jail at Cincinnati, being held there until Sheriff McVey can arrive.

A BIG QUARREL.

Between the Knights of Labor and the Cigar Makers' Union.

BUFFALO, May 15.—There seems, from developments here to-day, to be a prospect of a big fight between the Independent Craftsmen's Union of America and the Knights of Labor. The Cigar Makers' International Union, which has its headquarters here, has opened the ball in an editorial which will be printed in its organ, the Journal, on Monday. The claim is made that the Knights of Labor are offering to work for from 20 to 50 percent more than the members of the International Union. This is made the basis of an attack. A conference is to begin in Philadelphia on the 18th inst., at which place arrangements will be made for the ground to be taken at the meeting in Cleveland on the 25th. The Journal says: "We do not consider it out of place to give the names and occupations of the men who have assumed control over the cigar trade, so that we may convince the ignorant of the arrogance of these interlopers, who have not the slightest knowledge of the cigar trade. Their names are: J. W. Powell, Jr., machinist; Fred E. Turner, grocer and landlord; John W. Hayes, wholesale and retail tea dealer. The attempt of a few men to control and regulate all industries has proved to be a ridiculous farce. It also proves that there is something rotten in the management of the organization known as the Knights of Labor. Should the special session of the K. of L. to be held in Cleveland on May 25, fail to remedy these criminal blunders, we will denounce them as the champions of the lawless and the advocates of low wages; in fine, as traitors to the labor cause in general."

GEORGE'S CREEK MINERS. The Operators Refuse to Concede the Demands of their Men.

CUMBERLAND, May 15.—A conference of the operators and miners of the George's Creek coal region took place to-day at the Queen City Hotel in this city. The Presidents of the different companies were present, and 41 delegates, representing all the different mines. The meeting was opened by S. S. Lee, President of the Operators' Association. The principal grievance of the miners in the advance in price of mining from 40 to 50 cents, although they asked for a reduction of hours, rents, smelting, etc., but were willing to work as they have done. Houses and buildings of all descriptions were wrecked and scattered over miles of territory. Forests were laid low, crops destroyed, fences torn down, and what was yesterday a blooming, prosperous country, is now a dreary waste.

FAMILIES HOMELESS. Hundreds of families are homeless. In this county, up to a late hour this afternoon, thirty dead bodies had been found, with many times that number injured. It is impossible to ascertain names at present.

Passing into the Allegheny county, the tornado continued its work of ruin, though reports place the damage there as less severe than at other points. Hardly a county was not a sufferer, and here the destruction was redoubled. The fury of the storm was felt through the open country, away from towns and other settlements. Shortly before midnight it pounced upon Dunkirk, a town of 1,300 inhabitants in the northeastern corner of the county. The inhabitants, not dreaming of an impending danger, were asleep when the tornado came upon them. In an instant it had done its work and passed on. The town, or that portion of it in the path of the storm, was in ruins. It was an indescribable scene of desolation, reports place the damage there as less severe than at other points. Hardly a county was not a sufferer, and here the destruction was redoubled. The fury of the storm was felt through the open country, away from towns and other settlements. Shortly before midnight it pounced upon Dunkirk, a town of 1,300 inhabitants in the northeastern corner of the county. The inhabitants, not dreaming of an impending danger, were asleep when the tornado came upon them. In an instant it had done its work and passed on. The town, or that portion of it in the path of the storm, was in ruins. It was an indescribable scene of desolation, reports place the damage there as less severe than at other points. Hardly a county was not a sufferer, and here the destruction was redoubled. The fury of the storm was felt through the open country, away from towns and other settlements. Shortly before midnight it pounced upon Dunkirk, a town of 1,300 inhabitants in the northeastern corner of the county. The inhabitants, not dreaming of an impending danger, were asleep when the tornado came upon them. In an instant it had done its work and passed on. The town, or that portion of it in the path of the storm, was in ruins. It was an indescribable scene of desolation, reports place the damage there as less severe than at other points. Hardly a county was not a sufferer, and here the destruction was redoubled. The fury of the storm was felt through the open country, away from towns and other settlements. Shortly before midnight it pounced upon Dunkirk, a town of 1,300 inhabitants in the northeastern corner of the county. The inhabitants, not dreaming of an impending danger, were asleep when the tornado came upon them. In an instant it had done its work and passed on. The town, or that portion of it in the path of the storm, was in ruins. It was an indescribable scene of desolation, reports place the damage there as less severe than at other points. Hardly a county was not a sufferer, and here the destruction was redoubled. The fury of the storm was felt through the open country, away from towns and other settlements. Shortly before midnight it pounced upon Dunkirk, a town of 1,300 inhabitants in the northeastern corner of the county. The inhabitants, not dreaming of an impending danger, were asleep when the tornado came upon them. In an instant it had done its work and passed on. The town, or that portion of it in the path of the storm, was in ruins. It was an indescribable scene of desolation, reports place the damage there as less severe than at other points. Hardly a county was not a sufferer, and here the destruction was redoubled. The fury of the storm was felt through the open country, away from towns and other settlements. Shortly before midnight it pounced upon Dunkirk, a town of 1,300 inhabitants in the northeastern corner of the county. The inhabitants, not dreaming of an impending danger, were asleep when the tornado came upon them. In an instant it had done its work and passed on. The town, or that portion of it in the path of the storm, was in ruins. It was an indescribable scene of desolation, reports place the damage there as less severe than at other points. Hardly a county was not a sufferer, and here the destruction was redoubled. The fury of the storm was felt through the open country, away from towns and other settlements. Shortly before midnight it pounced upon Dunkirk, a town of 1,300 inhabitants in the northeastern corner of the county. The inhabitants, not dreaming of an impending danger, were asleep when the tornado came upon them. In an instant it had done its work and passed on. The town, or that portion of it in the path of the storm, was in ruins. It was an indescribable scene of desolation, reports place the damage there as less severe than at other points. Hardly a county was not a sufferer, and here the destruction was redoubled. The fury of the storm was felt through the open country, away from towns and other settlements. Shortly before midnight it pounced upon Dunkirk, a town of 1,300 inhabitants in the northeastern corner of the county. The inhabitants, not dreaming of an impending danger, were asleep when the tornado came upon them. In an instant it had done its work and passed on. The town, or that portion of it in the path of the storm, was in ruins. It was an indescribable scene of desolation, reports place the damage there as less severe than at other points. Hardly a county was not a sufferer, and here the destruction was redoubled. The fury of the storm was felt through the open country, away from towns and other settlements. Shortly before midnight it pounced upon Dunkirk, a town of 1,300 inhabitants in the northeastern corner of the county. The inhabitants, not dreaming of an impending danger, were asleep when the tornado came upon them. In an instant it had done its work and passed on. The town, or that portion of it in the path of the storm, was in ruins. It was an indescribable scene of desolation, reports place the damage there as less severe than at other points. Hardly a county was not a sufferer, and here the destruction was redoubled. The fury of the storm was felt through the open country, away from towns and other settlements. Shortly before midnight it pounced upon Dunkirk, a town of 1,300 inhabitants in the northeastern corner of the county. The inhabitants, not dreaming of an impending danger, were asleep when the tornado came upon them. In an instant it had done its work and passed on. The town, or that portion of it in the path of the storm, was in ruins. It was an indescribable scene of desolation, reports place the damage there as less severe than at other points. Hardly a county was not a sufferer, and here the destruction was redoubled. The fury of the storm was felt through the open country, away from towns and other settlements. Shortly before midnight it pounced upon Dunkirk, a town of 1,300 inhabitants in the northeastern corner of the county. The inhabitants, not dreaming of an impending danger, were asleep when the tornado came upon them. In an instant it had done its work and passed on. The town, or that portion of it in the path of the storm, was in ruins. It was an indescribable scene of desolation, reports place the damage there as less severe than at other points. Hardly a county was not a sufferer, and here the destruction was redoubled. The fury of the storm was felt through the open country, away from towns and other settlements. Shortly before midnight it pounced upon Dunkirk, a town of 1,300 inhabitants in the northeastern corner of the county. The inhabitants, not dreaming of an impending danger, were asleep when the tornado came upon them. In an instant it had done its work and passed on. The town, or that portion of it in the path of the storm, was in ruins. It was an indescribable scene of desolation, reports place the damage there as less severe than at other points. Hardly a county was not a sufferer, and here the destruction was redoubled. The fury of the storm was felt through the open country, away from towns and other settlements. Shortly before midnight it pounced upon Dunkirk, a town of 1,300 inhabitants in the northeastern corner of the county. The inhabitants, not dreaming of an impending danger, were asleep when the tornado came upon them. In an instant it had done its work and passed on. The town, or that portion of it in the path of the storm, was in ruins. It was an indescribable scene of desolation, reports place the damage there as less severe than at other points. Hardly a county was not a sufferer, and here the destruction was redoubled. The fury of the storm was felt through the open country, away from towns and other settlements. Shortly before midnight it pounced upon Dunkirk, a town of 1,300 inhabitants in the northeastern corner of the county. The inhabitants, not dreaming of an impending danger, were asleep when the tornado came upon them. In an instant it had done its work and passed on. The town, or that portion of it in the path of the storm, was in ruins. It was an indescribable scene of desolation, reports place the damage there as less severe than at other points. Hardly a county was not a sufferer, and here the destruction was redoubled. The fury of the storm was felt through the open country, away from towns and other settlements. Shortly before midnight it pounced upon Dunkirk, a town of 1,300 inhabitants in the northeastern corner of the county. The inhabitants, not dreaming of an impending danger, were asleep when the tornado came upon them. In an instant it had done its work and passed on. The town, or that portion of it in the path of the storm, was in ruins. It was an indescribable scene of desolation, reports place the damage there as less severe than at other points. Hardly a county was not a sufferer, and here the destruction was redoubled. The fury of the storm was felt through the open country, away from towns and other settlements. Shortly before midnight it pounced upon Dunkirk, a town of 1,300 inhabitants in the northeastern corner of the county. The inhabitants, not dreaming of an impending danger, were asleep when the tornado came upon them. In an instant it had done its work and passed on. The town, or that portion of it in the path of the storm, was in ruins. It was an indescribable scene of desolation, reports place the damage there as less severe than at other points. Hardly a county was not a sufferer, and here the destruction was redoubled. The fury of the storm was felt through the open country, away from towns and other settlements. Shortly before midnight it pounced upon Dunkirk, a town of 1,300 inhabitants in the northeastern corner of the county. The inhabitants, not dreaming of an impending danger, were asleep when the tornado came upon them. In an instant it had done its work and passed on. The town, or that portion of it in the path of the storm, was in ruins. It was an indescribable scene of desolation, reports place the damage there as less severe than at other points. Hardly a county was not a sufferer, and here the destruction was redoubled. The fury of the storm was felt through the open country, away from towns and other settlements. Shortly before midnight it pounced upon Dunkirk, a town of 1,300 inhabitants in the northeastern corner of the county. The inhabitants, not dreaming of an impending danger, were asleep when the tornado came upon them. In an instant it had done its work and passed on. The town, or that portion of it in the path of the storm, was in ruins. It was an indescribable scene of desolation, reports place the damage there as less severe than at other points. Hardly a county was not a sufferer, and here the destruction was redoubled. The fury of the storm was felt through the open country, away from towns and other settlements. Shortly before midnight it pounced upon Dunkirk, a town of 1,300 inhabitants in the northeastern corner of the county. The inhabitants, not dreaming of an impending danger, were asleep when the tornado came upon them. In an instant it had done its work and passed on. The town, or that portion of it in the path of the storm, was in ruins. It was an indescribable scene of desolation, reports place the damage there as less severe than at other points. Hardly a county was not a sufferer, and here the destruction was redoubled. The fury of the storm was felt through the open country, away from towns and other settlements. Shortly before midnight it pounced upon Dunkirk, a town of 1,300 inhabitants in the northeastern corner of the county. The inhabitants, not dreaming of an impending danger, were asleep when the tornado came upon them. In an instant it had done its work and passed on. The town, or that portion of it in the path of the storm, was in ruins. It was an indescribable scene of desolation, reports place the damage there as less severe than at other points. Hardly a county was not a sufferer, and here the destruction was redoubled. The fury of the storm was felt through the open country, away from towns and other settlements. Shortly before midnight it pounced upon Dunkirk, a town of 1,300 inhabitants in the northeastern corner of the county. The inhabitants, not dreaming of an impending danger, were asleep when the tornado came upon them. In an instant it had done its work and passed on. The town, or that portion of it in the path of the storm, was in ruins. It was an indescribable scene of desolation, reports place the damage there as less severe than at other points. Hardly a county was not a sufferer, and here the destruction was redoubled. The fury of the storm was felt through the open country, away from towns and other settlements. Shortly before midnight it pounced upon Dunkirk, a town of 1,300 inhabitants in the northeastern corner of the county. The inhabitants, not dreaming of an impending danger, were asleep when the tornado came upon them. In an instant it had done its work and passed on. The town, or that portion of it in the path of the storm, was in ruins. It was an indescribable scene of desolation, reports place the damage there as less severe than at other points. Hardly a county was not a sufferer, and here the destruction was redoubled. The fury of the storm was felt through the open country, away from towns and other settlements. Shortly before midnight it pounced upon Dunkirk, a town of 1,300 inhabitants in the northeastern corner of the county. The inhabitants, not dreaming of an impending danger, were asleep when the tornado came upon them. In an instant it had done its work and passed on. The town, or that portion of it in the path of the storm, was in ruins. It was an indescribable scene of desolation, reports place the damage there as less severe than at other points. Hardly a county was not a sufferer, and here the destruction was redoubled. The fury of the storm was felt through the open country, away from towns and other settlements. Shortly before midnight it pounced upon Dunkirk, a town of 1,300 inhabitants in the northeastern corner of the county. The inhabitants, not dreaming of an impending danger, were asleep when the tornado came upon them. In an instant it had done its work and passed on. The town, or that portion of it in the path of the storm, was in ruins. It was an indescribable scene of desolation, reports place the damage there as less severe than at other points. Hardly a county was not a sufferer, and here the destruction was redoubled. The fury of the storm was felt through the open country, away from towns and other settlements. Shortly before midnight it pounced upon Dunkirk, a town of 1,300 inhabitants in the northeastern corner of the county. The inhabitants, not dreaming of an impending danger, were asleep when the tornado came upon them. In an instant it had done its work and passed on. The town, or that portion of it in the path of the storm, was in ruins. It was an indescribable scene of desolation, reports place the damage there as less severe than at other points. Hardly a county was not a sufferer, and here the destruction was redoubled. The fury of the storm was felt through the open country, away from towns and other settlements. Shortly before midnight it pounced upon Dunkirk, a town of 1,300 inhabitants in the northeastern corner of the county. The inhabitants, not dreaming of an impending danger, were asleep when the tornado came upon them. In an instant it had done its work and passed on. The town, or that portion of it in the path of the storm, was in ruins. It was an indescribable scene of desolation, reports place the damage there as less severe than at other points. Hardly a county was not a sufferer, and here the destruction was redoubled. The fury of the storm was felt through the open country, away from towns and other settlements. Shortly before midnight it pounced upon Dunkirk, a town of 1,300 inhabitants in the northeastern corner of the county. The inhabitants, not dreaming of an impending danger, were asleep when the tornado came upon them. In an instant it had done its work and passed on. The town, or that portion of it in the path of the storm, was in ruins. It was an indescribable scene of desolation, reports place the damage there as less severe than at other points. Hardly a county was not a sufferer, and here the destruction was redoubled. The fury of the storm was felt through the open country, away from towns and other settlements. Shortly before midnight it pounced upon Dunkirk, a town of 1,300 inhabitants in the northeastern corner of the county. The inhabitants, not dreaming of an impending danger, were asleep when the tornado came upon them. In an instant it had done its work and passed on. The town, or that portion of it in the path of the storm, was in ruins. It was an indescribable scene of desolation, reports place the damage there as less severe than at other points. Hardly a county was not a sufferer, and here the destruction was redoubled. The fury of the storm was felt through the open country, away from towns and other settlements. Shortly before midnight it pounced upon Dunkirk, a town of 1,300 inhabitants in the northeastern corner of the county. The inhabitants, not dreaming of an impending danger, were asleep when the tornado came upon them. In an instant it had done its work and passed on. The town, or that portion of it in the path of the storm, was in ruins. It was an indescribable scene of desolation, reports place the damage there as less severe than at other points. Hardly a county was not a sufferer, and here the destruction was redoubled. The fury of the storm was felt through the open country, away from towns and other settlements. Shortly before midnight it pounced upon Dunkirk, a town of 1,300 inhabitants in the northeastern corner of the county. The inhabitants, not dreaming of an impending danger, were asleep when the tornado came upon them. In an instant it had done its work and passed on. The town, or that portion of it in the path of the storm, was in ruins. It was an indescribable scene of desolation, reports place the damage there as less severe than at other points. Hardly a county was not a sufferer, and here the destruction was redoubled. The fury of the storm was felt through the open country, away from towns and other settlements. Shortly before midnight it pounced upon Dunkirk, a town of 1,300 inhabitants in the northeastern corner of the county. The inhabitants, not dreaming of an impending danger, were asleep when the tornado came upon them. In an instant it had done its work and passed on. The town, or that portion of it in the path of the storm, was in ruins. It was an indescribable scene of desolation, reports place the damage there as less severe than at other points. Hardly a county was not a sufferer, and here the destruction was redoubled. The fury of the storm was felt through the open country, away from towns and other settlements. Shortly before midnight it pounced upon Dunkirk, a town of 1,300 inhabitants in the northeastern corner of the county. The inhabitants, not dreaming of an impending danger, were asleep when the tornado came upon them. In an instant it had done its work and passed on. The town, or that portion of it in the path of the storm, was in ruins. It was an indescribable scene of desolation, reports place the damage there as less severe than at other points. Hardly a county was not a sufferer, and here the destruction was redoubled. The fury of the storm was felt through the open country, away from towns and other settlements. Shortly before midnight it pounced upon Dunkirk, a town of 1,300 inhabitants in the northeastern corner of the county. The inhabitants, not dreaming of an impending danger, were asleep when the tornado came upon them. In an instant it had done its work and passed on. The town, or that portion of it in the path of the storm, was in ruins. It was an indescribable scene of desolation, reports place the damage there as less severe than at other points. Hardly a county was not a sufferer, and here the destruction was redoubled. The fury of the storm was felt through the open country, away from towns and other settlements. Shortly before midnight it pounced upon Dunkirk, a town of 1,300 inhabitants in the northeastern corner of the county. The inhabitants, not dreaming of an impending danger, were asleep when the tornado came upon them. In an instant it had done its work and passed on. The town, or that portion of it in the path of the storm, was in ruins. It was an indescribable scene of desolation, reports place the damage there as less severe than at other points. Hardly a county was not a sufferer, and here the destruction was redoubled. The fury of the storm was felt through the open country, away from towns and other settlements. Shortly before midnight it pounced upon Dunkirk, a town of 1,300 inhabitants in the northeastern corner of the county. The inhabitants, not dreaming of an impending danger, were asleep when the tornado came upon them. In an instant it had done its work and passed on. The town, or that portion of it in the path of the storm, was in ruins. It was an indescribable scene of desolation, reports place the damage there as less severe than at other points. Hardly a county was not a sufferer, and here the destruction was redoubled. The fury of the storm was felt through the open country, away from towns and other settlements. Shortly before midnight it pounced upon Dunkirk, a town of 1,300 inhabitants in the northeastern corner of the county. The inhabitants, not dreaming of an impending danger, were asleep when the tornado came upon them. In an instant it had done its work and passed on. The town, or that portion of it in the path of the storm, was in ruins. It was an indescribable scene of desolation, reports place the damage there as less severe than at other points. Hardly a county was not a sufferer, and here the destruction was redoubled. The fury of the storm was felt through the open country, away from towns and other settlements. Shortly before midnight it pounced upon Dunkirk, a town of 1,300 inhabitants in the northeastern corner of the county. The inhabitants, not dreaming of an impending danger, were asleep when the tornado came upon them. In an instant it had done its work and passed on. The town, or that portion of it in the path of the storm, was in ruins. It was an indescribable scene of desolation, reports place the damage there as less severe than at other points. Hardly a county was not a sufferer, and here the destruction was redoubled. The fury of the storm was felt through the open country, away from towns and other settlements. Shortly before midnight it pounced upon Dunkirk, a town of 1,300 inhabitants in the northeastern corner of the county. The inhabitants, not dreaming of an impending danger, were asleep when the tornado came upon them. In an instant it had done its work and passed on. The town, or that portion of it in the path of the storm, was in ruins. It was an indescribable scene of desolation, reports place the damage there as less severe than at other points. Hardly a county was not a sufferer, and here the destruction was redoubled. The fury of the storm was felt through the open country, away from towns and other settlements. Shortly before midnight it pounced upon Dunkirk, a town of 1,300 inhabitants in the northeastern corner of the county. The inhabitants, not dreaming of an impending danger, were asleep when the tornado came upon them. In an instant it had done its work and passed on. The town, or that portion of it in the path of the storm, was in ruins. It was an indescribable scene of desolation, reports place the damage there as less severe than at other points. Hardly a county was not a sufferer, and here the destruction was redoubled. The fury of the storm was felt through the open country, away from towns and other settlements. Shortly before midnight it pounced upon Dunkirk, a town of 1,300 inhabitants in the northeastern corner of the county. The inhabitants, not dreaming of an impending danger, were asleep when the tornado came upon them. In an instant it had done its work and passed on. The town, or that portion of it in the path of the storm, was in ruins. It was an indescribable scene of desolation, reports place the damage there as less severe than at other points. Hardly a county was not a sufferer, and here the destruction was redoubled. The fury of the storm was felt through the open country, away from towns and other settlements. Shortly before midnight it pounced upon Dunkirk, a town of 1,300 inhabitants in the northeastern corner of the county. The inhabitants, not dreaming of an impending danger, were asleep when the tornado came upon them. In an instant it had done its work and passed on. The town, or that portion of it in the path of the storm, was in ruins. It was an indescribable scene of desolation, reports place the damage there as less severe than at other points. Hardly a county was not a sufferer, and here the destruction was redoubled. The fury of the storm was felt through the open country, away from towns and other settlements. Shortly before midnight it pounced upon Dunkirk, a town of 1,300 inhabitants in the northeastern corner of the county. The inhabitants, not dreaming of an impending danger, were asleep when the tornado came upon them. In an instant it had done its work and passed on. The town, or that portion of it in the path of the storm, was in ruins. It was an indescribable scene of desolation, reports place the damage there as less severe than at other points. Hardly a county was not a sufferer, and here the destruction was redoubled. The fury of the storm was felt through the open country, away from towns and other settlements. Shortly before midnight it pounced upon Dunkirk, a town of 1,300 inhabitants in the northeastern corner of the county. The inhabitants, not dreaming of an impending danger, were asleep when the tornado came upon them. In an instant it had done its work and passed on. The town, or that portion of it in the path of the storm, was in ruins. It was an indescribable scene of desolation, reports place the damage there as less severe than at other points. Hardly a county was not a sufferer, and here the destruction was redoubled. The fury of the storm was felt through the open country, away from towns and other settlements. Shortly before midnight it pounced upon Dunkirk, a town of 1,300 inhabitants in the northeastern corner of the county. The inhabitants, not dreaming of an impending danger, were asleep when the tornado came upon them. In an instant it had done its work and passed on. The town, or that portion of it in the path of the storm, was in ruins. It was an indescribable scene of desolation, reports place the damage there as less severe than at other points. Hardly a county was not a sufferer, and here the destruction was redoubled. The fury of the storm was felt through the open country, away from towns and other settlements. Shortly before midnight it pounced upon Dunkirk, a town of 1,300 inhabitants in the northeastern corner of the county. The inhabitants, not dreaming of an impending danger, were asleep when the tornado came upon them. In an instant it had done its work and passed on. The town, or that portion of it in the path of the storm, was in ruins. It was an indescribable scene of desolation, reports place the damage there as less severe than at other points. Hardly a county was not a sufferer, and here the destruction was redoubled. The fury of the storm was felt through the open country, away from towns and other settlements. Shortly before midnight it pounced upon Dunkirk, a town of 1,300 inhabitants in the northeastern corner of the county. The inhabitants, not dreaming of an impending danger, were asleep when the tornado came upon them. In an instant it had done its work and passed on. The town, or that portion of it in the path of the storm, was in ruins. It was an indescribable scene of desolation, reports place the damage there as less severe than at other points. Hardly a county was not a sufferer, and here the destruction was redoubled. The fury of the storm was felt through the open country, away from towns and other settlements. Shortly before midnight it pounced upon Dunkirk, a town of 1,300 inhabitants in the northeastern corner of the county. The inhabitants, not dreaming of an impending danger, were asleep when the tornado came upon them. In an instant it had done its work and passed on. The town, or that portion of it in the path of the storm, was in ruins. It was an indescribable scene of desolation, reports place the damage there as less severe than at other points. Hardly a county was not a sufferer, and here the destruction was redoubled. The fury of the storm was felt through the open country, away from towns and other settlements. Shortly before midnight it pounced upon Dunkirk, a town of 1,300 inhabitants in the northeastern corner of the county. The inhabitants, not dreaming of an impending danger, were asleep when the tornado came upon them. In an instant it had done its work and passed on. The town, or that portion of it in the path of the storm, was in ruins. It was an indescribable scene of desolation, reports place the damage there as less severe than at other points. Hardly a county was not a sufferer, and here the destruction was redoubled. The fury of the storm was felt through the open country, away from towns and other settlements. Shortly before midnight it pounced upon Dunkirk, a town of 1,300 inhabitants in the northeastern corner of the county. The inhabitants, not dreaming of an impending danger, were asleep when the tornado came upon them. In an instant it had done its work and passed on. The town, or that portion of it in the path of the storm, was in ruins. It was an indescribable scene of desolation, reports place the damage there as less severe than at other points. Hardly a county was not a sufferer, and here the destruction was redoubled. The fury of the storm was felt through the open country, away from towns and other settlements. Shortly before midnight it pounced upon Dunkirk, a town of 1,300 inhabitants in the northeastern corner of the county. The inhabitants, not dreaming of an impending danger, were asleep when the tornado came upon them. In an instant it had done its work and passed on. The town, or that portion of it in the path of the storm, was in ruins. It was an indescribable scene of desolation, reports place the damage there as less severe than at other points. Hardly a county was not a sufferer, and here the destruction was redoubled. The fury of the storm was felt through the open country, away from towns and other settlements. Shortly before midnight it pounced upon Dunkirk, a town of 1,300 inhabitants in the northeastern corner of the county. The inhabitants, not dreaming of an impending danger, were asleep when the tornado came upon them. In an instant it had done its work and passed on. The town, or that portion of it in the path of the storm, was in ruins. It was an indescribable scene of desolation, reports place the damage there as less severe than at other points. Hardly a county was not a sufferer, and here the destruction was redoubled. The fury of the storm was felt through the open country, away from towns and other settlements. Shortly before midnight it pounced upon Dunkirk, a town of 1,300 inhabitants in the northeastern corner of the county. The inhabitants, not dreaming of an impending danger, were asleep when the tornado came upon them. In an instant it had done its work and passed on. The town, or that portion of it in the path of the storm, was in ruins. It was an indescribable scene of desolation, reports place the damage there as less severe than at other points. Hardly a county was not a sufferer, and here the destruction was redoubled. The fury of the storm was felt through the open country, away from towns and other settlements. Shortly before midnight it pounced upon Dunkirk, a town of 1,300 inhabitants in the northeastern corner of the county. The inhabitants, not dreaming of an impending danger, were asleep when the tornado came upon them. In an instant it had done its work and passed on. The town, or that portion of it in the path of the storm, was in ruins. It was an indescribable scene of desolation, reports place the damage there as less severe than at other points. Hardly a county was not a sufferer, and here the destruction was redoubled. The fury of the storm was felt through the open country, away from towns and other settlements. Shortly before midnight it pounced upon Dunkirk, a town of 1,300 inhabitants in the northeastern corner of the county. The inhabitants, not dreaming of an impending danger, were asleep when the tornado came upon them. In an instant it had done its work and passed on. The town, or that portion of it in the path of the storm, was in ruins. It was an indescribable scene of desolation, reports place the damage there as less severe than at other points. Hardly a county was not a sufferer, and here