THE PLANETS IN JULY. fovement of the Celestial Bodies During bridged from the Providence Journal, Saturn becomes morning star after the d, when he is in conjunction with the sun, and is no longer seen gracing the vening sky. Until the last of August he will be invisible, but will then become a beautiful object in the eastern sky before beautiful object in the eastern sky before in sunrise.

Mars, as evening star, is between Jupiter and Uranus, and retains this position, receding from Jupiter and approaching Turanus, until the 9th, when he is in conjunction with Uranus. A small telescope will show the planets in near neighborshood on the evening of the 9th, when the raddy color of the largest planet will form a pleasing contrast with the delicate seargreen hue of the smaller one.

The planetary interest of the month clusters again around the three planets—Jupiter, Mars and Uranus—as they meet and part on the celestial track. It will be remembered that on the 28th of June Mars overtook and passed Jupiter. On the 9th, eleven days later, he overtakes and passes Uranus. The three planets are all in direct motion, or moving eastward, and as Mars moves the fastest and they are near together, it is inevitable that he should pass his brethren in the race.

As the approach of Mars and Jupiter

As the approach of Mars and Jupiter was one of the prominent interests of June, so will the spproach of Uranus and Jupiter be an event of interest in July, though less conspicuous. On the 1st the two planets are 5° apart; on the 21st they are 3° ares.

of the suu. He will be visible to the naked eye on the 19th, and for a week before and after that time. Although at nearly his maximum distance from the sun, he is too far south of him to be seen under the most favorable conditions. Observers who succeed in finding him will accomplish a difficult undertaking, but it is worth the trouble, for this planet is beautiful to behold in the summer twilight. Venus is morning star. She reigns

Venus is morning star. She reigns alone as harbinger of the sun's approach for Neptune, never visible but to the tele for Neptune, never visible but to the tele-scopic eye, is too insignificant to be looked upon as a rival, and Saturn, the newcomer among the morning stars, is still hidden from terrestial view in the sunbeams. An event marks her course. On the 28th, at 5 o'clock in the afternoon, she is in con-junction with Mount Geminorum, which seems to be Iving in wait to interview the ems to be lying in wait to interview the Neptune is morning star. On the first of the month he is in the neighborhood of Venus, being about six degrees west of her. At the close of the month Mercury, Jupiter, Uranus and Mars are evening stars, and Saturn, Venus and Neptune are morning stars.

July opens with a new mono on the 1st, and fulls on the 15th. On the 3d she is in conjunction with Mercury, and on the 7th with Jupiter, Mars and Uranus; but the latter conjunctions will occur during the day time, and are, of course, invisible. The Stuart Heir to the Bavarian throne is the Stuart heir apparent to the English throne, the Jacobite Prince of Wales. Henrietta Maria, daughter of Charles I., married Philip, Doke of Orleans, the brother of Louis XIV. His daughter, Anna Maria, married Victor Amadeus II. of Savoy. The legitimate claim to the kings of Sardinia to the death of Charles Felix, in April, 1831, when the crown passed to the distant line of Savoy Oarignan. It was to this claim that George III. alluded when he said that if he broke his coronation oath by admitting Catholics to Parliament the crown self-gland would pass to the house of Savoy. Beatrice of Savoy married Francis, Duke of Modena. The male line of Modena came to an end in November, 1875, and was continued in Maria Theresa, the wife of Louis, son of Luitpold, the present Regent of Bavaria. She is now the Stuart Queen of Eugland and her son, Rupert, born May 13, 1869, is the Stuart Prince of Wales.

Story Writing Not a Good Trade.

We recently saw it stated that the widow of an actor of some popularity a few years ago had devoted herself with much success to literary pursuits that she "makes a nice income by writing stories, long and short." It may be so; but if an amateur is likely to take this pleasing declaration as a warrant for taking up story writing, "long and short," let such beware indeed! In the present condition of the fiction market we do not believe that many writers outside do not believe that many writers outside of a decidedly well-known and circumseribed list can find story-writing a potent furnisher of their exchequers. This story-writing success has a good deal of the typic fatuus about it, and the marsh is a particularly unpleasant place to be led into.

Segents of the Mount Vernon Association, the philanthropist W. W. Corcoran Bancroft and other persons from Wash tion, the philanthropist W. W. Corcorau, Bancroft and other persons from Wash-ington. Mr. Bancroft pronounced the discourse "the most eloquent and valua-ble contribution to the literature of the subject yet made." The recent discovery of the old vestry book of Truro parish sets at rest any questions as to Washing-ton having been a communicant of the Washington Episcopal Church, as it is of record that he was for years a warden of Pohick Church.

Pohick Church.

Unappreciated Gallantry.

Bes. Percy Poor is the Boston Dudget.

Tom Corwin asserted one day in his committee room that it was never asie to interfere between huaband and wile, and in support of his declaration narrated an instance which occurred when he was animated by the ardor and chivalry of youth. Traveling in a little-frequented rural district he came upon a cabin, from behind which he heard the angry voice of a man mingled with the screams of a woman, and at regular intervals a hickory singing through the air as if well laid on. He rode round to get sight of the cause of all this clamor, when he saw a burly-looking fellow threshing his wife like fury with a sick too formidable to be within the meaning of the statute. On seeing our friend the belligerent suspended, the "shower of timber" cessed to fall, and there was a great calm of a few momenta' duration. The young man, whose wrath had suddenly waxed hot against the cruel husband, cried out: "You brute! You rasca!! throw down that whip, and don't touch that woman again, or !!"!! wear it out over your own ugly carcass! you savage, you!" Who should respond to this view. s touch that woman again, or I's wear it sout over your own ugly carcast! you say-age, you!" Who should respond to this rvaliant defiance but the injured fady heriself. Turning her blowzed hair out of her if ace and giving her list a portentious shake, she squalled out, "He's as good as you are, you gawky, good-for-nothing receter, you!"

though less conspicuous. On the 1st the two planets are 5° apart; on the 21st they are 2° apart.

Jupiter is the evening star. Unlike the other planets, increasing distance seems to have little effect in dimming the lustre of his shining. He is almost as superban object in the western sky at the present as he was six months ago in the eastern sky when he made his first appearance as evening star; and now his reign in this role approaches its close. Mars continues to outstrip him. On the 28th of June the two planets were in conjunction; at the close of the month they will be over 15° apart. The increasing distance between them will be apparent to every observer, and July is one of the most beautiful months of the year to study the stars, in spite of the long continuance of the twilight.

Mercury is evening star. One of the most interesting epochs in his course occurs on the 19th. He is then at his greatest eastern elongation, being 20° 54′ east of the sun. He will be visible to the naked eye on the 19th, and for a week before and after that time. Although at nearly his maximum distance from the sun, he is too far south of him to be seen under the most favorable conditions. Observers who auceed in finding him will accomplish a difficult undertaking, but it is Lords vs. Princes.

Weshington Critic.

A wealthy New Yorker and his lovely daughter were seated in the elegant parlor and the girl was crying. "Don's cry, darling; that's papa's dear," he said, stroking her bandoline tresses. "I will cry," she said, jerking away from him. "You said I should marry an English lord, and you haven't done it, you mean old thing." "There, there," he said, soothingly, "It was not papa's fault dear; but the taste, and is the prescription of one of those nice French Princes who have recently been expelled," "Ob, paps, you dear old fellow," and she kissed him javishly and dried her tears.
