Certainly it was not his wife who got his education for him under difficulties, who sent him to the Legislature at an who sent him to the Ligislature at an early age, and to Congress soon after. It was not his wife who mailed to Bull Run; who raised a regiment and turned public summent in a hotbed of secession; who, as Grant testifies, so fired the raw recruits at Springdeid that they went in for the war; who led his men into many a terriconflict and never lost a light; and who by common congent, wen the first place by common congent, wen the first place. among the citizen soldiers of America.

It was not his wife who achieved the place which he held in the party and in the country; who made long speeches or short specches as occasion might demand on any public question that came up; and whose readiness in debate was one of the strong features of his strong character. It was not his wife who electrified vast audiences and held them by the force of her pleasure, and who doubtless helped him with the wise counsel which a brainy woman of mature mind is so well qualified to give on subjects with which she is con-

No man draws out of his wife all the helpful good that is in her who does not treat her as his equal and make her his confident. This Logan did, and nothing in all his wonderful career as soldier statesman is more creditable-certainly nothing is so beautiful as the loving confidence he reposed in his wife touching matters of the greatest moment.

Fension For Mrs. Logan.

Bills will be introduced in both houses of Congress immediately after the holiday recess, awarding to Mrs. Logan the pension she would have received had her husband died of wounds in the cervice instead of a disease the foundation of which, it is claimed, was laid by the exposures of his army life,—if ashington Dispatch.

There should be no healtaney in either house of Congress in passing such a bill for many and good reasons. General enouvalorous commanders, rendering services valorous commanders, rendering services to his country that have never been requited. He died a poor man, which is perhaps a more honorable legacy for him to leave than amazed wealth, and which is agreater tribute to his honesty than the testimony of those who knew him intimately. He does not now hear the peans of praise that are being sung all over the land; monuments may be reared to perpetuate his fame, but these things do not discharge the debt of gratitude the country owes him. He leaves a widow whose devotion to the gallant soldier husband despress more than the poor satisfaction of serves more than the poor satisfaction of hearing the praises of hor dead husband sung—that substantial sympathy which is in the power of Congrets to grant, so as to place her beyond the harrassing caree of poverty and soften the asperitios of the world.

TENNYSON'S LATEST,

Locksley II all Slity Years After-An Ol The tendency which has been observable in all Tennyson's recent postry and which was marked in his last previous volume-Wheeling, W. Va., as as a parent of the frategies at wheeling, W. Va., as as a parent of which seemined the frategies at wheeling, W. Va., as as a parent been did in the first volume of "idyle of the King." has apparently been divided between two contrary courses, one in the direction of intellectual abstructures and severity, the other towards the highest elaboration of art. With a strange perversity Tennyson, whose strength lay in the latter way, chose philosophy and didacticism, the sermon rather than the habit of some of his detractors to say that his wife was the secret of his success, that she did the most of the planning and a very large share of the executing. This was said and said again to belittle General Logan.

Certainly it was not his wife who got to the distance beacons. Foward, for 'Tiresias''—is now irrevocably determined

Not in vain the distance beacons. Foward, for ward let us make. Let the great world spin forever down the ring-ing grooves of time:

meither will it make much difference in Tennyson's fame ten years from now that in his impatient decline he has lost his sold confidence in the professor mankind. But it is a matter of serious moment that when Hope took wings the Muse fled with her. We could poohpooh the political pessimism of "Luckstiey Hall Sixty Years After" if its poetical quality were not as disappointing as its pullosophy. It has hardly any of the traits which made the clear m of its predecessor; worse than that, it has hardly any of the traits which made Tennyson one of the foremost figures of bistime. Whatever differences might declare the masely of and lences and held then by the force of eargestucse, a strength of conviction, which nobody doubted. General Logan was the head of the family and the architect of its fortune.

This we take to be the truth of the matter. Heaven had bleesed Logan with a wife who not only loved him but appreciated him. She was indeed a help meet for him. If not his intellectual equal in point of development along his special liner, she was still intellectually companionable, was interested in his work and had so intelligent an idea of it that she was able to help him in it. Mrs. Logan is a woman of native force, and whatever was in her she carneatly desired to devote to her husband's success. It is not possible for every public man, or indeed for every busy man, to have such a wife, but those who are so provided have a very great advantage over these who are not. There are men, particularly in public life, whose wives, loving though they be, are so lacking in tact, in the knowledge of human nature and the desire to know it, that they unwittingly place obstacles in the way of success.

Logan had a wife who grew with him, who knew how hard it isto climb and how easy to slip back, who made his purguil's her pleasure, and who doubtless helped him with the wise counsel which a brainy query target and sund the desire to know it, that they unwittingly place obstacles in the way of success.

Symptoms of Consumption.

PORT ORAM, MORRIS Co., N. J., March 17, 1884.—My business is that of shat, ening mine drills, and I am much exposed to smoke and gas. About three years ago I bagan to have a bad cough, with considerable indigestion and pains it my chest. My physician told me I had symptoms of consumption. By the salvice of my father, an old friend of Brandrath's Pills, I commenced using that valuable remedy. By the time I had got through the second box I began to pass a very disagreeable humor or pus. I began to improve very rapidly after this, and grew stronger and better every day, My cough is now well. I sleep well at night and have no more indigestion.
